RECALL DOOM SEEN; 80 MORE QUIT LISTS

CHINESE ARMY CLINGS TO KIANGWAN RUINS

PETITIONS' NAMES REDUCED TO 5,075; MARGIN CUT TO 78

Ruling by Mayson That No Additions May Be Received After Tuesday Believed To Be Move's Death Knell.

LABOR MEN STRIVE TO BOLSTER LISTS

Eleventh-Hour Effort Reported in Making. New Libel Suits in Alleged Forgeries Seen.

Collapse of the ouster move against Mayor James L. Key was forecast Saturday as 80 demands for removal of signatures from the recall petitions were complied with by J. Henson Tatum, city clerk and registrar. The total number of signatures was cut to 5,075, only 78 more than the 4,997 needed to force the recall election.

A total of 209 persons have had their names stricken from the petitions while another 120 demanded withdrawal of names which already had been removed by the city clerk for various reasons.

Rulings Saturday by City Attorney James L. Mayson were believed to have sounded the death knell for the recall. Mayson held that any additions to the petitions must be made by 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and that none would be received after that time if the petition is to go to council Monday, March 7.

However, he ruled that persons who wish to withdraw their names may do so up to the time it is presented to council at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of March 7, and that Tatum must present the petitions or a report to council for its approval. If there are enough names to force a recall election, the election will be called. If there are not enough names, the petitions will remain on file in the clerk's office, and proponents of the ouster move, should they wish to continue their fight, must begin all over again, not using the petitions which have been adjudged void.

Collapse Predicted.

Key's friends Saturday predicted collapse of the entire recall effort as they gained impetus in their efforts to purge the list of names of persons who continue to charge that their names were forged to the petitions or obtained through misrepresentations and subterfuges. With 78 more stricken names making the petitions void, Tatum had about 25 requests for withdrawal which he had not checked Saturday.

There was every indication that the ouster move will fail by Monday night unless several hundred additional names are filed. Futile efforts by proponents of the ouster to picket those withdrawing their names at the clerk's office in a last-minute effort to save the recall failed to halt the removals.

Withdrawers Sign Affidavits.

Other developments Saturday in the crumbling ouster move were:

1. Taking of affidavits from about a score of those who visited the mayor's office charging that their names were forged and that they had not signed the recall or authorized anyone else to do so. The affidavits are to be used in a court fight if another meeting of council is attempted before March 7.

2. Unofficial reports that labor leaders are preparing to file a supplementary list before 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in an eleventh-hour ef-

Solons Demand Disclosure Of Names of Short Sellers

This interesting picture was made as Richard Whitney (right), president of the New York Stock Exchange, appeared before the judiciary committee of the house of representatives to testify in the investigation into short selling on the exchange. Whitney defended the practice, declaring that business conditions would be much worse than at present if the practice were not permitted. Left to right on the dais are: Representatives Henry St. George Tucker, Rhode Island; William B. Oliver and Emanuel Celler, of New York.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Administration leaders today called on the senate banking committee "to find the culprits" who, the government is convinced, have been driving down stock prices for personal gains.

Senator Walcott, republican, Connecticut, who conferred yesterday with President Hoover, sent a statement to the committee today blaming bear raiders for "knocking in the head every attempt to give courage and hope" to the country.

"The first duty of congress clearly is to find the culprits and determine the extent of their operations, and it is proposed to do this at once by holding open hearings before the committee commencing early next week," he said.

Watson Demands Probe.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, joined in the demand for an investigation. There was no expression of opposition to investigating the personal activities of those who have been selling stocks short and reaping profits off declines in prices, but Senators Blaine of Wisconsin, and Brookhart of Iowa, both republicans, wanted to go into all phases of stock market activity.

Senator Bulkley, democrat, Ohio, asked on what ground it was contended that stock prices are below value and that bear raiders are responsible. Watson replied that "hundreds of men who are on the inside tell me the evil is short selling." He added that persistent drops in the market were hindering the restoration of business confidence.

Senator Hastings, republican, Delaware, in urging his resolution of inquiry insisted that responsible persons had informed him that 111 stocks on the exchange were selling at about half of their book value based on liquid assets alone.

Senator Blaine asked that the names of the bear raiders mentioned by Walcott be produced. However, the Connecticut senator was unable to be present and these were not forthcoming.

Chairman Norbeck adjourned the

ROOSEVELT FEELS SEABURY UNFAIR, FRIEND DISCLOSES

Refused To Oust Farley Before Both Sides Were Fully Represented; Will Ignore Political Angles.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight was described as viewing Samuel Seabury's criticism of the executive's handling of the Sheriff Farley case as "unfair." Justice Seabury made pointed criticism of the governor's attitude in an address in Cincinnati last night.

A close friend of the executive who talked with him during the day at his Hyde Park home, pictured Mr. Roosevelt as believing that he was charged with the duty of presiding as chief magistrate at the proceedings culminating in the removal of Sheriff Thomas M. Farley, Tammany Hall district leader. The governor did not feel, his friend added, that he should participate in a "political issue in one of the cities of the state."

Mr. Roosevelt himself declined to formally comment on the Cincinnati address of Justice Seabury, chief counsel of the legislative committee investigating the democratic administration of New York city. Likewise, he disregarded reports that Seabury's implied charge of a friendly attitude to Tammany Hall might endanger, outside the borders of New York state, the move to name him the democratic presidential nominee.

Basis of Criticism.

Seabury was critical of the two months intervening between the time he brought charges against the New York sheriff and the day upon which Mr. Roosevelt ordered Farley out of office because he could not explain the source of his "wonderful tin box" income.

The counsel also turned his attention to "politicians who hold public office and who are forced or are given occasions to rule adversely to Tammany Hall."

"They," said Seabury, "soften their opposition so that, while the public will not regard them as pro-Tammany, Tammany will not regard them as opposed to it."

"The governor," said his caller tonight, "is very glad that he devoted two weeks to studying the thousands of pages of testimony sent him by Mr. Seabury, and another week to studying the reply made by Sheriff Farley. He feels that substantial justice has been done by this study.

"He came to the conclusion that it would have been quite as unjust for him to accept what Mr. Seabury called 'established facts' without giving the defendant a chance to present a defense as it would have been for a trial judge to ask a jury in a criminal case to reach a verdict after hearing only the public prosecutor and

Civic Groups Aid Employment Drive Here; First National Bank Adds 10 New Employes

Assuring American Legion leaders of the sympathy and co-operation of his organization, Thomas K. Glenn (right), chairman of the board, First National bank and the Trust Company of Georgia, is shown presenting to Trammell Scott (center), commander of the Atlanta post, a letter advising him that 10 additional employes have been put to work by the two institutions as their part in assisting the unemployment campaign. William H. Davis, one of the leading figures in the Atlanta drive, is at the extreme left. Photo by Bill Mason.

Many civic organizations are lending their whole-hearted co-operation to the campaign against unemployment being sponsored by the Atlanta post of the American Legion as part of the nationwide drive to obtain jobs for 1,000,000 within 30 days, it was announced Saturday by Trammell Scott, commander of the local post.

Since the organized drive was placed under way here Thursday officials of the campaign reported that up to noon Saturday 212 persons had been placed in jobs, in addition to the successful efforts of the canvassers in dissuading other employers from carrying out programs of retrenchment which would result in several hundred additional workers being laid off.

In addition to the Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the Association of National Advertisers and the American Federation of Labor are sponsoring the national unemployment "war," and are being assisted in several hundred cities by local civic, industrial and fraternal organizations.

One of the most encouraging assurances of co-operation to be received by the Atlanta post was made public Saturday by Commander Scott, who received a letter from Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the board, First National Bank of Atlanta, advising Scott that the First National and the Trust Company of Georgia are "desirous of co-operating," and have arranged to put on ten additional employes.

Mr. Glenn's letter follows:

"Dear Major Scott:

"The drive of the American Legion and associated organizations for reemployment has been of great interest to me and my associates in the First National bank and the Trust Company of Georgia.

"We are not only willing but desirous of co-operating. As a means to this end I am pleased to advise you that through applications in our files we have already arranged to put on 10 additional employes. This will take effect at once, and we hope that this will be a substantial contribution to the results which you hope to obtain in Atlanta and in connection with

AMERICANS READY TO QUIT SHANGHAI

Tokyo To Order Use of Air Force To Prevent Chinese From Strengthening Defenses.

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS.

(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 28. (Sunday)—Japanese airplanes bombed the Chinese positions on the Chapei-Kiangwan battlefront today as deadlocked armies rushed reinforcements toward Kiangwan, center point of the line from Shanghai to Woosung, in preparation for a decisive fight.

A small but stubborn Chinese garrison still held out in the ruins of Kiangwan, neither Japanese shells nor claims of victory having dislodged the defenders.

As the fogs lifted over Kiangwan today, the Japanese resumed their attack. Fifteen airplanes from the emergency flying field behind the lines scattered explosives over the Chinese positions, setting new fires flaming over Miaochungchen, source of the beleaguered garrison's supplies.

The fliers divided themselves into two groups. A majority struck around Miaochungchen. The others went on to Chapei, pouring bombs again upon that native section of Shanghai stricken in the first days of the long battle here.

Japanese artillery tossed occasional shells into Chinese lines strafed by the bombardment of airplanes and big guns for days of indecisive conflict, but otherwise the Kiangwan sector was comparatively calm.

Thousands of Japanese troops, expected to come to reinforce the continually repulsed assailants, were reported to be near Shanghai, but apparently had not yet arrived at noon. Inspection of the Whangpoo river as far as Woosung, at the mouth 16 miles away, revealed no sign of incoming transports. The waterfront was quiet and deserted.

Aided by air and artillery bombardment, the Japanese have made numberless assaults on Kiangwan and have issued numerous claims of victory, but neither shells nor communiques dislodged the defenders.

The Japanese announced that during yesterday's fighting they finally had succeeded in surrounding the village. Their infantrymen already were in the western end, they said, and were proceeding to mop up the rest of it.

But at 11:30 o'clock last night this correspondent, who went out to see for himself, learned that the Chinese still held Kiangwan and that the garrison was being supplied with food and ammunition.

These supplies were brought in from Miaochungchen, to the northwest. The communication line with the beleaguered garrison was very narrow, and the soldiers bearing food and ammunition ran a gauntlet of machine gun fire from Japanese positions on either side.

But the neck of the bottle still was open.

The early morning communique

SHOT BY BANDITS, MAN NEAR DEATH

William C. Boyer, 29, Wounded Then Robbed By Two Negroes.

Waylaid by robbers in the garage at his home, William C. Boyer, 29, of 615 Ormewood avenue, S. E., well-known Atlanta druggist, was shot and seriously wounded shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday night. The assailants, both negroes, fled the scene, but were observed by neighbors of the Boyer family, who furnished a description to police.

Boyer, who was affiliated with the Friedman pharmacy at 531 Boulevard, S. E., had driven to his home with a supply of groceries and had taken the groceries into the kitchen of his home. He returned to the garage to turn out the lights of his car and

Monroe Woman Dies In Automobile Crash

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—A woman was killed and four other persons, including three students of the Georgia State Teachers College, were injured in an automobile collision on the Whitehall-Watkinsville road today.

Mrs. Vaico Guest, of Monroe, Ga., formerly of Athens, received injuries from which she died soon after being brought to a hospital here. Her son, M. B. Guest, received a fractured leg and lacerations about the face. Three State College students, Miss Hilda McCree, Miss Margaret McGuire and Miss Agnes Elder, all of Watkinsville, and occupants of the other car, were also injured.

Valco Guest, husband of the woman who was killed and driver of the Guest automobile, escaped without being hurt.

In another accident, John Malcolm, 43, Statham, Ga., merchant, received a broken jawbone when his automobile overturned near Bogart.

SCHOOL BUDGET APPROVED BY KEY

Action Paves Way for Payment of $530,000 to Employes of System.

Mayor James L. Key Saturday approved the 1932 budget for operation of the Atlanta public schools and thus paved the way for payment of about $530,000 to employes of the board of education by Thursday of this week.

The budget provides, among other things, for retention of the present education system virtually intact, and reduces the original requests of the board by about 16 per cent through slashing salaries of all employes. Those making more than $100 a month are cut 16 per cent, and those making less than $100 a month 10 per cent and other economies through reduction of operating expenses and culling of various other items are affected.

The budget provides for expending of $2,856,000 for the year, $711 less than the amount originally requested by the board.

About 1,800 employes will be affected by the payments to be made during the week. B. Graham West, comptroller, said Saturday his department would co-operate in any way possible to expedite distribution of salaries.

Boy, Sitting on Curb, Badly Hurt by Auto

Sitting on the sidewalk curbing in front of his parents' home, Russell Brown, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Brown, of Grand avenue, Center Hill, was struck and probably fatally injured by an automobile early Saturday night.

Allen Wood, of Center Hill, 17-year-old driver of the automobile, was taken in custody by county police and charged with reckless driving. He was released in bond of $500. The injured child was taken to Grady hospital by L. W. Smith, a neighbor, and it was found the baby had received a fractured skull, concussion of the brain and serious internal injuries.

JUDGE M'LAUGHLIN TO AID ROOSEVELT

Judge C. F. McLaughlin, of Columbus, has accepted the chairmanship of the speakers' program of the Roosevelt-for-President campaign in Georgia, W. E. Page, Roosevelt headquarters manager, announced Saturday in issuing a call for the presidents of all Roosevelt clubs in the state to meet in Atlanta on Wednesday.

In addition to the three-score clubs that have been functioning in Georgia for almost a year, Page said Saturday that other clubs are being rapidly organized over the state and that one will be active in every county before the primary, March 23.

As the Roosevelt forces Saturday practically completed their headquarters organization, Page predicted that Georgia's "favorite son" would poll an overwhelming majority over Judge G. H. Howard, who has been entered by forces which, so far, have been

SPIRITED CLASHES MARK G. O. P. MEET

Ben Davis Ends Long, Stormy Career; Convention Date Set.

The long and stormy reign of Ben J. Davis, Atlanta negro editor and former republican national committeeman, as secretary and guiding star of the Georgia republican state central committee, Saturday afternoon came to an end with Davis' resignation and his submission of a bill of $11,350 for secretarial salary during 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1931. Davis becomes a contact man or stump speaker for the national party.

Davis' resignation as secretary was accepted at a tumultuous meeting of the state central committee in the courtroom of Judge Jesse M. Wood, when five hours of bickering and clashes between lily-white and black-and-tan came to a conclusion with 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, March 19, set as the date for county conventions and noon Saturday, March 26, as the date for the state convention in the Fulton courthouse.

In spite of the plea of Josiah T. Rose, collector of internal revenue and chairman of the state central committee, for "peace and harmony," the republicans had no sooner entered the roll call than trouble developed. As the call of the roll proceeded, it became evident that members of the old committee had been left off of the

Mrs. Hoover Located At Mud River Mouth

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Announcement late tonight by a staff member of the Brunswick News that Mrs. Herbert Hoover and party was aboard the department of commerce motorship, Sequoia, at the mouth of Mud river, nine miles south of Sapeloe Island, stopped a search of the Georgia coast, highways and hotels for the first lady of the land.

Mrs. Hoover and party were reported to have left Savannah today by automobile for Brunswick, a drive of only a few hours. Failure of the party to arrive caused increasing anxiety and newsmen from Jacksonville, Savannah and Brunswick began using telephones, telegraph wires and automobiles. Aid from the White House was sought by reporters and all government officials along the Georgia coast were asked about the party.

The Sequoia is to dock here tomorrow morning.

ROAD-AID MEASURE PASSED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—After a prolonged struggle, the democrats today forced through the house their $132,500,000 emergency road construction bill designed to relieve unemployment and to aid the states in their highway construction programs.

The vote was 205 to 109, with party lines broken.

It came after nearly five hours of bitter debate in which it was predicted by a republican leader that the measure would meet a presidential veto. The democrats maintained it was the first direct unemployment relief legislation approved this session.

Sponsored by the democratic leadership, the bill provides $120,000,000 be made available immediately for apportionment to the states to be matched with regular federal highway aid allotments. It also sets aside $12,500,000 for highways, roads and trails in national parks, forests, Indian reservations and on public lands.

Before passage of the bill, the

JAPAN MODIFIES BASIS FOR PEACE

Manchurian Issue Divorced From Shanghai in Notes to League.

BY SAMUEL DASHIELL.

GENEVA, Feb. 28.—(UP)—Japan offered to make peace in Shanghai in identical notes delivered today to individual members of the League of Nations represented on the League of Nations council.

The contents of the note were not made public, but were understood to intimate Japan's willingness to make peace in Shanghai, on certain conditions. The note reiterated, however, Japan's contention that she cannot relinquish any of her rights in Manchuria.

The Japanese note, it was understood, indicated Japan was ready to cease hostilities if the Chinese withdraw a certain distance from Shanghai and the foreign powers assume civil and military control.

The note was not sent to the secretariat of the League council, presumably because Japan still maintains that a council of only 12 men is not fully competent to represent the full council. It was sent, therefore, to the members of the council individually, except Japan and China.

Informal reports have been circulated in diplomatic circles during the last few days that Japan might listen to a proposal looking toward a liquidation of the Shanghai "situation" based on the neutralization of the city and its control by an international commission.

Provisions of Agreement.

Such a course of agreement, according to the reports, would contemplate:

1. Retirement of the Chinese military to from 5 to 20 kilometers (about 3 to 12 1-2 miles) from the city. (Thereby the Japanese would not be sticklers for the 20 kilometers, as originally demanded, but would like to have the Chinese retire to that distance at one point at least, which would permit them to defend their

Roosevelt Wins Straw Ballot In Home State of Hoover

BY CLIFF MILLEN.

Copyright, 1932, by N. A. N. A., Inc.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 27.—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, received more votes than any other presidential possibility in a straw ballot which has just been completed in President Hoover's home state by the Des Moines Register-Tribune. Roosevelt's margin over Hoover was 53 votes.

Here are the final figures of the poll: Roosevelt, 18,817; Hoover, 18,764; Murray, 16,508, and Smith, 7,693, with Baker, Ritichie, Dawes and Young trailing.

Although Iowa is traditionally a republican state, more than 71 per cent of the votes cast were for the democratic presidential possibilities.

Cedar county, where Hoover was born, returned 187 votes for the president. Roosevelt came second with 123.

Voters were asked to state their 1928 stand as well as their present preference. Hoover's total in the same group of voters in 1928 was 42,480, and Smith's was 22,672. Approximately 56 per cent of the 1928 Hoover vote consequently was shown to have drifted to other candidates during the interval, as had approximately 6 per cent of the previous Smith vote in the same group.

Hoover led in votes from women, receiving 8,333, or 30.7 per cent. Smith was second with 6,509 or 23.9 per cent. In the votes from men Roosevelt took the lead with 12,308 or 27.3 per cent, and Murray came second, 10,555 or 23.4 per cent. Hoover was a close third.

Hoover was the favorite in the cities and towns, with Roosevelt a close second in the cities, getting 26.6 per cent to the president's 28.3 per cent.

Murray was the favorite in the rural vote, his agricultural platform of "butter, bread, beans and bacon" appealing to the Iowa farmer strongly.

Murray received 37 per cent of the farm vote, while Roosevelt came second with 28 per cent. Murray already has established headquarters in Iowa after completing three public appearances in the state.

The ballots received were equivalent approximately to 10 per cent of the normal general election vote in the state. In the same poll partial returns on the question of retaining the present liquor laws showed 17,836 against and 18,014 favoring them.

The re-election of United States Senator Smith W. Brookhart was favored by 6,583 and opposed by 9,473. These returns showed the triumph of the unexpected as clearly as had the presidential ballot.

The Constitution's Cook School To Open for Four Days Tuesday

The Constitution's Cooking School, which will be conducted by the De Both Home Makers' School, with Miss Claire Andree as lecturer, will open Tuesday morning next at Keith's Georgia theater.

The sessions will open every morning through March 4 at 9 o'clock. Through an arrangement with the theater the doors will be opened at 8:30 o'clock, enabling the audience to get seats before Miss Andree begins her demonstration.

There will be several features which will make this the most successful school of the kind ever held here. There will be sessions for the matron, for the working girl and for children. The fascinating study of diet will be combined with actual demonstrations of kitchen convenience and efficiency.

The De Both Home Makers' schools never make or recommend a food or dish that doesn't pass a rigid examination as to its digestive qualities, its body-building forces and its ability to assimilate with other foods. Once those tests have been passed then the matter of making the dish a delight to the palate is taken up and after that she becomes the food artist painting a picture to delight the eye of a hungry man, in fact a picture that will create hunger.

She offers nothing beyond the abilities of the ordinary housewife. The Constitution, Georgia Theater Plan 'Leap Year Babies' Party

BY WILLIAM O. KEY JR.

Once upon a time Robert Louis Stevenson received a letter which tugged at his heart-strings. It was a pathetic letter from a little girl who unburdened her strange trouble with all the candor of a child's outburst against an unjust woe. She wrote that she was not like other little boys and girls, because she had only one birthday every four years; while, for them, each year brought a day with parties and cakes and presents. She had been one of those rare babies to be born on February 29.

Just why the little girl chose the literary giant of that day as the outlet of her anguish was not questioned by Stevenson. Amidst his labors this delicate genius pondered the little writer's gloomy outlook and that of all the other children who have only one birthday every fourth year. Then he conceived a happy solution. Recalling, no doubt, that he had had too many birthdays, he wrote the child that from then on she could have his birthday and he would take hers in return.

In Atlanta, as in other cities, there are children and grown-ups who will have their long-awaited birthday Monday. Because the stork would not observe the 29th of February as a holiday, or because he was not on time to give them February 28 for a birth-

FULTON SCHOOL COST LOW, REPORT SHOWS

Operation Efficient, State Audit Prepared by Tom Wisdom Reveals.

Cost of the administration of Fulton county schools for 1930 and 1931 was less than 2 per cent a year, as low as could be expected, and the office force is efficient, State Auditor Tom Wisdom reported Saturday in an audit filed with Governor Russell.

County school receipts increased from $734,740.99 in 1930 to $856,371.41 in 1931, and expenditures decreased from $948,365.53 in 1930 to $852,017.23 in 1931, the larger 1930 expense being due mostly to a greater capital outlay that year, the auditor reported.

The auditor said that the instructional service cost 62.66056 per cent in 1930 and 79.69281 per cent of the total expenditures of 1931. The report of Superintendent Jere A. Wells for the year closing June 20, 1930, shows an enrollment of 12,504 white children, with an average daily attendance of 11,054.2, and a colored enrollment of 2,665, average daily attendance 2,054.5. For the year closing June 30, 1931, the white enrollment is shown as 13,147, with an average daily attendance of 10,666, and the colored enrollment is shown as 2,611, with an average daily attendance of 2,050. The 1930 building program used 25.40144 per cent of the net expenditures, the auditor said. The buildings and equipment are being paid for out of current funds.

lock the garage, he said, and was shot without warning by one of two negroes lurking in the shadows.

The bullet entered Boyer's abdomen, inflicting a serious wound. As he collapsed, one of the negroes, robbed him of two purses he carried, containing an undetermined sum of money.

Boyer managed to crawl to the back porch of his home, and was assisted into the house by his wife and mother.

Attracted by the sound of the shot, C. W. Whitley, 631 Ormewood avenue, and Raymond McEwen, 627 Ormewood, rushed to the front of their homes in time to see the two negroes flee down the street toward Confederate avenue.

Boyer was taken to Georgia Baptist hospital, where an operation was performed in an effort to save his life. The bullet inflicted what surgeons feared would prove a fatal wound, having entered the exact center of the abdomen.

A radio report of the shooting was broadcast and Patrolmen H. D. Donehoo and J. A. Etheridge went to the scene, followed shortly afterward by Detectives Anderson and Blair, of the bandit squad.

Boyer lapsed into unconsciousness shortly before arriving at the hospital, and his condition was reported as critical a few minutes later, necessitating a blood tranfusion.

committee until Monday or Tuesday to consider the Walcott proposal for calling in the professional short sellers.

Senator Capper, republican, Kansas, author of a bill to restrict short selling, produced hundreds of letters from all parts of the country demanding an inquiry. Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, also has pending before the committee a resolution for a short-selling investigation.

Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, challenged the contention of Watson that everyone was interested in the stock market and that its operations governed business.

Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, complained that no attempt was made to check the orgy of speculation in 1928 and 1929 preceding the collapse of prices, which gave the bears their opportunity to work.

The Walcott statement read to the committee said:

"Congress has waited patiently for a year for some action to be taken by the New York Stock Exchange to curb excessive short sales made for speculative purposes, but to date no effective regulations have been adopted, although the president of the New York Stock Exchange has been repeatedly urged to act."

new roster, and the members affected protested in vigorous measure.

J. W. Arnold, new national committeeman for Georgia, explained that the membership of the committee had been reduced under the republican rules, and that a subcommittee of the executive committee had pared the roll down to 72, the new membership total.

"Hoovercrats" Rewarded.

Recognition of the services of the "Hoovercrats" or "anti-Smith democrats" of the 1928 election was shown when the central committee voted to give each Georgia county which voted for Hoover an extra delegate to the state convention. Each county is allowed one delegate, and additional delegates will be allowed for each 700 republican votes cast in the last election, in addition to the Hoovercrat delegates. This will mean that 261 delegates will attend the state convention. The state central committee will meet again at noon on Friday, March 25.

Lily-white republicans won a signal victory in Saturday's meeting when they voted down a proposal to allow delegated conventions for counties that so desire instead of mass meetings. Delegated conventions, county meetings attended by delegates selected in caucuses of small groups, have been held largely responsible for the old negro control of the party in Georgia. The delegated convention advocates lost, 55 to 25.

Wilson Williams, of Woodbury, who has been serving as "secretarial secretary," was elected secretary to succeed Davis. J. H. Rush, of Lumber City, was elected treasurer to succeed the late Eugene Oberdorfer Sr. E. L. Stringer, of Atlanta; Fred Durant, of Woodbury, and Dr. W. Y. Gilliam, who lives near the Georgia-Tennessee line (Copperhill), were elected members of the committee to succeed Mr. Oberdorfer and two resigned members, District Attorney Clint W. Hager, of Atlanta, and W. V. Custer, of Bainbridge.

Tobie Grant, Scottdale negro woman, who was one of those eliminated from the committee by the new roster, and T. C. Williams, negro, were elected to succeed the late T. H. Hudson, negro, of Valdosta, and the late Ed Richardson, negro, of Marshallville.

Five negroes and seven whites who have not resigned were eliminated from the committee by Arnold's new roster, it was said. The membership of the new committee is two whites to one negro, there being 24 negroes out of the 72 members and six officers. All officers except Mamie Williams, national committeewoman, are white.

Rose Seeks Harmony.

Chairman Rose, endeavoring to promote "peace and harmony," urged those who were not named as members of the new committee to retire gracefully. Rose said that "we will serve you well, and we wish that those who are no longer on the committee will feel that we have the interests of the party at heart as well as you." Rose asked the eliminated members to make a "sacrifice for the good of the party," and pointed out that the committee will not live as a committee longer than 30 days, when a new committee will be elected.

B. F. Cofer, Atlanta negro, wondered "if the subcommittee is of greater authority than the state central committee," and challenged the right of Arnold and others to "write me out of the committee." Davis joined in the protest, saying that "it is not a question of whether we on the committee will do right, but it is a question of whether these people are being deprived of their rights. Our race does not want to run the party, but we want the right of getting out regularly."

"Colonel" J. H. Watson, Albany negro, said that "I have been in the party 50 years, and during the 1920 campaign the chairman of the campaign committee borrowed $2,500 from me to finance the committee in Georgia. They haven't to this day refunded that money, but now they say we are not worthy to be on the committee."

"We haven't said that you are not worthy," Rose said.

"Yet we are put off the committee." Watson replied.

J. C. Lemon, of Savannah, pointed out that Davis had read the rule under which committeemen are named. "Are you getting ready to cause trouble?" asked Rose. "No," said Lemon, "you are the one who has been talking about trouble." "I don't want any trouble," Rose said.

In his letter of resignation Davis said that he "did not intend to be a candidate for secretary at the 1930 convention, and would not have accepted re-election had it not been for the effort of certain negro haters in the state to lily-white the party." In introducing the subject of his resignation, Davis said that brains, influence and money are needed for the progress of republicanism in Georgia and that these things rest with white leadership.

The committee adopted resolutions praising the Hoover administration and commending Hoover to the party for renomination.

Postmaster E. K. Large, of Atlanta, obtained passage of a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee composed of the officers of the central committee to investigate and report back to the central committee on contests between rival party organizations in the counties. An amendment added A. T. Walden, of Atlanta; W. H. Harris, of Athens, and Davis to the special committee.

Committeeman Arnold, Chairman Rose and ex-Secretary Davis were appointed as a committee to call congressional district conventions, open the conventions and complete temporary roll calls, turning the conventions over to the delegates after completing the roll calls.

As the meeting adjourned, after nearly five hours of debate which became heated at times, especially when anything involving the racial division of the body came up, Chairman Rose turned to newspapermen and asked: "Well, boys, wasn't that a peaceful and harmonious meeting for once?"

Membership of the committee selected by the subcommittee follows:

Clubwomen Aid Drive.

Announcement also was made that a majority of prominent Atlanta women who have membership in the Federation of Women's Clubs have enlisted in the war against unemployment and depression. The chairman of the woman's division of the Atlanta drive, Mrs. R. Murdoch Walker, is president of the Atlanta federation, and associated with her as co-chairmen are Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Mrs. James M. Brawner, Mrs. William Healey and Mrs. Robert C. Alston. District chairmen of the woman's division are Mrs. J. G. C. Bloodworth, American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Ernest Horwitz, Council of Jewish Women; Mrs. C. E. Settle, West End Woman's Club; Mrs. A. H. Hazzard, Atlanta Woman's Club; Mrs. Harry Cannon, Junior League; Mrs. C. A. Rhodes, Fulton County Medical Society Auxiliary; Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, Garden Hills Woman's Club; Mrs. Alfred L. Myers, Mrs. M. P. Greenfield, Mrs. Howard McCutcheon.

District chairmen of the woman's division will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock Monday night on the roof of the Ansley hotel, at which reports of progress of their branch of the local drive will be read. The woman's division workers, all volunteers, are in charge of the canvass of the residential section of the city, which has been divided into districts, with a chairman in charge in each district and a team of workers soliciting "made" work from citizens and store keepers.

Since the organized drive under the sponsorship of the Atlanta post got under way Thursday, much success has been achieved by the approximately 400 field workers, Commander Scott reported Saturday. With the national total well above the 100,000 mark, the Georgia unofficial total had already passed the 1,000 mark, although in a majority of the larger sections of the state the drive had not been completely organized until the last few days.

Discussion of the progress of the unemployment "war" was the subject of a largely-attended luncheon meeting of the Atlanta post Friday. Definite results of the organized campaign for jobs included reports which showed that a number of Atlanta business houses had agreed to refrain from laying off many of their workers as had been planned, and this was pointed to by those in charge of the local drive as being tantamount to placing 300 persons at work who ordinarily would have found themselves without jobs.

Announcement has been made that a large "war map" of the United States is being prepared to depict the daily progress in the national drive. This map will be installed at the headquarters of the campaign at 85 Poplar street, and will show surprising results in spending power already reflected in the number of person re-employed, Legion leaders said.

LEAP YEAR BABY PARTY PLANNED

day, these "leap year babies" have always had to wait four years for their parties and cakes and presents.

This year, however, something will be done about it. The Constitution and the management of the Georgia theater will be joint hosts in entertaining this city's "leap year babies."

Every person celebrating his birthday—from four years old on up—will be given a big party at Keith's Georgia theater Monday, and admission to the picture and vaudeville show will be free of charge for those born on February 29.

A big treat in the way of entertainment awaits those lucky enough to have been a "leap year baby." On the screen will be presented "Shanghai Express," with Marlene Dietrich in the stellar role, with a supporting cast of Clive Brook, Warner Oland and Anna Mae Wong. There will be a big-time R-K-O vaudeville show headlined by Sammy Cohen, the comedian of "What Price Glory?" fame; the Georgia orchestra conducted by Adolph Kornspan in a special overture, "My Maryland," and news reel and other short subjects.

There will be no red tape about "leap year babies" being admitted to the show free of charge, the management explained. All that will be necessary for admission is for you to appear at the box office window and say, "This is my birthday." You will only be requested to sign your name and address on a slip of paper so the management will know how many "leap year babies" are in Atlanta. This list will be printed afterward in The Constitution, along with a list of all brand-new babies born this February 29, and the names of all couples who get married Monday.

Someone with a flair for mathematics has figured it out that only one person out of every 1,451 is born on February 29. That would give Atlanta something like 250 "leap year babies" on the basis of the city's population.

JAPAN MODIFIES BASIS FOR PEACE

prestige against attacks from die-hards at home.)

2. Policing of the entire city of Shanghai by the existing police force of the International Settlement, supported by limited military forces from the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan. Japanese diplomats point out that the United States normally has about 1,200 marines in the Shanghai area, and the British and French about the same, whereas the Japanese indicate they would expect to retain about 5,000 soldiers "because of their larger population and greater material interests in Shanghai."

3. The remainder of the Japanese army would be sent back to Japan.

4. The Japanese would desire that the existing remnants of the Woosung forts at the mouth of the Yangtse should be "demilitarized," but in view of the Chinese opposition to that point, Japan might be agreeable to compromising on international control.

5. While no definite period for such form of international control has been hinted, it is believed the Japanese desire that the city would remain under an international commission "until Sino-Japanese relations are stabilized," or, if a definite term were insisted on, at least five years.

Basis for Policy.

The change in the Japanese attitude was reported to the League to be based on the following developments.

1. The stubborn and unexpected resistance of the Chinese in Shanghai.

2. The colossal costs of the major military operations, which have assumed the shape of an undeclared war.

3. The growing opposition of the Japanese people to the militarist enterprise.

4. The unequivocal assertion by Washington that the United States will not recognize any change in the status quo in China which may result from violations of treaties.

5. The persistent attention paid by the League to the Chinese situation.

If the fighting could be stopped before the new contingents en route from Japan were brought into the affair, it is felt here that the problem would be that much easier to solve and there would be less "face" to preserve. The Japanese, moreover, are anxious not to permit, if they can help it, an intermingling of the Shanghai and Manchurian questions.

Manchuria, they are told, is quite apart from Shanghai and they feel their position in Manchuria is diplomatically and militarily much stronger than in Shanghai. They would not wish a continuance of the Shanghai campaign to endanger their winnings in Manchuria.

This feeling is based on what has come to be a Japanese saying: "Manchuria is a fact. Shanghai is an accident."

ROAD-AID MEASURE PASSED BY HOUSE

house inserted five principal amendments. Two by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, provided that the prevailing local wage rates shall be paid and that none of the money be allotted to any state where convict labor is employed directly or indirectly on federal-state projects, respectively.

Representative Warren, democrat, North Carolina, who led the fight for the legislation, told the house the LaGuardia amendments were acceptable to the roads committee. Warren's amendment sponsored by Chairman Almon, of the committee, to provide that local labor be given preference, was adopted.

An amendment by Representative Thomason, democrat, Texas, stipulating that only American citizens could be employed, and one by Representative Taylor, republican, Tennessee, making the allotments to national parks available to the projected Smoky Mountain National park in North Carolina and Tennessee, were inserted.

Amendment Blocked.

An amendment offered by Representative Huddleston, democrat, Alabama, to appropriate $100,000,000 for direct relief to the unemployed was ruled out of order by Representative Blanton, of Texas, who was in the chair.

More than a score of proposed amendments were defeated.

Those voting for were 151 democrats, 53 republicans and the lone farmer-labor member, Kvale, of Minnesota.

Twelve democrats joined 97 republicans in opposing the bill.

Representatives Crisp, of Georgia, and Doughton, of North Carolina, democrats, and Hawley, of Oregon, and Finley, of Kentucky, republicans, voted present.

Democrats who broke party lines and voted against the measure were: Ayres, Beam, Boehne, Gillen, Hart, Jacobsen, Jones, Kelly of Illinois, Larrabee, Ludlow, Pettengill and Schuetz.

Kidney Acidity

Often Causes Getting Up Nights, Bachache, Nervousness, Leg Pains and Loss of Energy.

Thousands of men and women past 40 and many far younger, often feel run-down and years older than they are by neglecting to use the right medicines for such conditions as Getting Up Nights, Backache, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Sore Joints, Circles Under Eyes, Headaches, Burning, Smarting and Bladder Weakness, caused bby functional Kidney inactivity and excess Acidity.

To combat these conditions you really need two different kinds of medicine, because you need two results in fighting these troubles. First, you need a medicine to act as a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys, to help them in their function of filtering and purifying the blood, thus reducing acidity. Second, you need another medicine to soothe and heal irritation and give nature a chance.

These two special kinds of medicine, known as Cystex, now may be had from your druggist under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. They are in tasteless tablet form, easy to take, and pleasant to young or old, yet work so fast they start circulating thru the system in 11 minutes. Sufferers say they begin to feel marked improvement in 24 hours.

Your own druggist—the man you know is reliable—can tell you that these are established facts, and that Cystex (pronounced Siss-tex) is a splendid medicine, containing purest ingredients, which have proved a blessing to many of his customers.

This much is certain: If Cystex makes you feel years younger and stronger by combating these conditions, the small cost of 75c is a trifle, but if not completely satisfied, merely return the empty package and get your money back. Why suffer from delay and neglect? The Guarantee protects you. Get Cystex from your druggist today. —(adv.)

*822 new contagious disease cases reported in one month!

During the first month of 1932, records in the office of the city board of health show that 822 contagious disease cases were added to the already appalling numbers of sufferers in hospitals, sanitariums and homes of this community.

Is it a natural consequence that in this fair city of ours 27 people each day should be stricken with diseases from which many will not survive? Call it fate if you will, but science knows that the spread of germs is the real cause.

Seek the dry cleaner who does not contribute to this spread of germs and disease. Be warned! Every dry cleaner cannot guarantee that contagion is not returned to your home in your clothes.

Your protection is in the exclusive Stoddard processes, which includes the use of re-distilled cleaning fluid—many rinsings—spotting—steaming—★STERILIZING and delivery of your clothing in germ-free bags—thus making each garment safe medically for the wearer.

Why take chances. You positively avoid all doubt when you call Stoddard's.

★ The 822 cases include only those reported to the city health department and not the cases which doubtless number to the hundreds that received private treatment without being written into the records.

Unemployment Relief Work Showing Results in South

Agencies Still Facing Critical Situation, But Leaders Believe Upward Trend Is Under Way.

BY GEORGE HATCHER.

Although relief agencies still are confronted with a critical situation in the task of providing for thousands of jobless, a survey just completed by The Constitution reveals that the unemployment situation in many industrial centers of the sixth federal reserve district has shown improvement in recent weeks and leaders in all lines of business in this section are of the opinion that a definite upward trend is under way.

In reports from all the principal cities of the district, which is composed of Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and a part of Louisiana and southern Tennessee, no special credit is given the federal government's proposals to aid business. And the need of funds to liquidate the hunger of the jobless still is pressing.

A general "back-to-the-farm" movement is proving one of the biggest factors in campaigns against unemployment. In some sections, lands are being lent to many distressed families, while others are taking up the cultivation of idle acres on their own accord.

Bankers, Educators Aid.

While the unemployment problem is held chiefly responsible for the "back-to-the-farm" tendency, the action of bankers and educators in lending their encouragement to farming programs has gone far toward reviving agricultural activity. Chamber of Commerce officials believe. Throughout the district, bankers are taking a leading part in outlining diversified farming programs and growers who adopt their plans have been assured ample financial backing. Consequently, the demand for farm laborers has somewhat increase, although unemployment bureaus report thousands still on their lists seeking work on farms.

According to The Constitution's survey, there are about 115,000 registered jobless in 10 leading cities of the district, with a total of about five times that many for the entire district.

On the basis of estimates by the Chamber of Commerce, New Orleans is confronted with the most acute problem of any southern city. Conditions in the Louisiana city have shown no change in the last six months, and there are about 30,000 white and negro men and women without work. The New Orleans Welfare Committee is distributing relief through jobs only, except for food for families where the wage earner becomes ill while at work under the committee. With a budget of about $40,000 a month, the New Orleans committee now has 2,000 heads of families at work on relief jobs. The number of days per week depends upon the size of the family.

Alabama Situation Better.

Conditions in other cities in the district are somewhat more encouraging. In Birmingham, more than 3,000 men have been called back to work by the reopening of a number of manufacturing plants, but 25,000 men remain among the jobless in the Birmingham district. A program similar to the one recently inaugurated in Rochester, N. Y., in which individuals are canvassed to contract for purchases of goods and improvements to property, also has proved helpful in lessening the number of idle in Birmingham. In Montgomery it is estimated that only 4,000 are without work.

The number of jobless in Memphis has been reduced by about 7,000 in the last four months, and further relief is assured in recent announcements of increased crushing operations of cotton oil mills and refineries, which is expected to be maintained through the summer. A number of other small plants are reopening daily.

In Miami and other Florida cities, building projects and tourist trade have maintained business on a moderate basis, but the unemployment problem has been complicated by a large group of transients who are seeking work and are without funds.

Chattanooga in Good Shape.

Due to a diversified character of manufacturing, conditions in Chattanooga probably are as good as any city its size in the country. Factories recently began increasing their forces, and there are now only about 3,500 idle Chattanooga men and women factory workers. There are few plants in the city operating full time, but practically all of them are busy from two to four days each week. There is no organized effort for relief in Chattanooga, but destitute people are being cared for by charity funds.

Atlanta has about 12,000 registered jobless, which is an increase since the first of the year However, the outlook is brighter, as a number of building projects are contemplated and several firms have announced resumption of operations on a part-time basis, with the likelihood of increasing their forces within a short time. Atlanta leaders say business is much sounder and that continued improvement is indicated.

GEORGIA TECH STUDENT IS NAMED FRAT LEADER

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 27. (AP)—T. W. Harrison, of the Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, was elected president of the fifth district of Sigma Phi Epsilon, national social fraternity, organized here today.

A. K. McIntyre, of Duke University, Durham, N. C., was elected vice president, and J. C. Parks, of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, secretary-treasurer. The fifth district embraces Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and South Carolina.

About 75 delegates attended the meeting.

POLICE RESCUE MAN, ARREST 7 KIDNAPERS

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Waylaid by four men on fashionable Riverside drive, Abraham Rosenberg, alleged bootlegger, was kidnaped today and taken to a West Fifty-fourth street hotel, where police a few hours later crashed down the door and captured five men whom they accused of abducting him. Rosenberg, guarded by two other members of the gang, was found outside the hotel.

The kidnaping was one of the most daring of recent months. A bystander saw the kidnaping and gave the alarm to the police.

Rosenberg had been badly beaten. The motive for the kidnaping, police said, was the collection of a $3,000 bill due from Rosenberg for liquors purchased several weeks ago.

CONFEREES AGREE ON LAME DUCK BILL

Passage Expected Soon To Place Amendment Before States for Vote.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Agreement was reached today between house and senate conferees on the proposed constitutional amendment abolishing the lame duck session of congress.

In return for the senate concession on the seven-year ratification requirement, the house conferees agreed to elimination of a provision that before any state legislature could ratify the amendment at least one of its branches must have been elected after submission of the amendment.

With representatives of both houses agreed on the final form of the measure, Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, who has long advocated the legislation, expects the report to be approved promptly in both houses and the amendment submitted to the states.

Entrance to Office.

The proposal provides that members of congress shall take office in the January following their election instead of waiting about a year while congressmen who have been defeated at the polls continue to legislate. The short session of congress would be discontinued entirely.

As passed by the senate, the amendment provided that the terms of the president and vice president should begin and end on January 15 and those of members of congress on January 2. The house set January 24 and January 4 as the dates and they compromised on January 20 and January 3.

Congress Opening.

January 3 was set as the date for congress to assemble by a similar compromise. Both houses agreed to modifications in their provisions for filling the offices of president and vice president if an election should be thrown into congress and if a president-elect should die before actually taking office.

There is no present constitutional provision for filling the presidency if the person elected to the post should die before taking office.

Under the agreement, the vice president-elect would become president.

Congress would be given authority to name an acting president if neither the president nor the vice president-elect should be found qualified or if, in an election whose decision was thrown into congress, one of the candidates selected should die.

Casualties Are Heavy Along Battle Front

BY HERBERT R. EKINS.
(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

SHANGHAI, Feb. 28.—(Sunday) Despite the heavy fighting on the entire 18-mile front from Shanghai to Woosung, with casualties running into the thousands, the Japanese admit 204 killed and 1,475 wounded. The Chinese estimated their casualties at 3,000. The relative positions of the two armies were unchanged Saturday. On the Tazang front, only a few hundred yards separated the opposing forces, which blazed away with rifle and machine gun fire between occasional sorties, which gave neither any decided advantage.

The situation appeared early today to be a stalemate, with neither side holding any decisive advantage after a full week of the much vaunted "big push" of the Japanese.

Today, a week after the drive started, found the Japanese in little better strategic position than before, while the Chinese were heartened by their successful resistance against the "war machine" and by the addition of fresh troops from other parts of the country.

Army Reinforced.

"The government at Nanking has sent me two more divisions to reinforce the 19th route army," the communique said, "and this additional force will go into action when the Japanese offensive is renewed."

During the last few days several vessels have arrived with ammunitions and supplies for the Japanese, and on each of them there was a small complement of soldiers. About 1,000 men were landed yesterday.

When the last crowded transport has arrived, the Japanese—unless they change their tactics—will attempt once again to break through the Chinese defenses at Kiangwan and thereby cut off the troops defending the northern end of the Shanghai-Woosung line from the units holding the strong Chinese positions in Chapei. Then the plan will be to conduct separate operations against the two ends of the broken line.

Heavy Guns in Action.

Just as the hands of the big clock on the customs house tower at Shanghai marked midnight the heavy guns of both forces went into action in Chapei and Hongkew.

The cannonading continued until after 1 o'clock this morning. To non-combatants in the International Settlement. It sometimes seems that the artillerymen time their gunning by the big clock, which is plainly visible from both sides of the battle line.

Inspection of the front last night showed that the opposing lines extended in a gentle curve from Woosung to a point nearly a mile east of Miaochungchen, thence south to Kiangwan and eastward around the village to its southern limits and thence south to Chapei.

The whole area between the Kiangwan front and the Chinese support positions in the vicinity of Tazang, four miles to the west, was honeycombed with artillery pits and machine gun nests. Northward toward the Liuhang hinterland the territory also was heavily fortified and swarming with soldiers.

Although the Japanese have claimed for days that they control the village of Miaochungchen, 3,000 Chinese soldiers were entrenched there and they seemed prepared to hold out indefinitely. Well built trenches crisscrossed the entire town and barbed wire entanglements were everywhere. Food and munition supplis were adequate. The Japanese front line was three-quarters of a mile to the east.

ALABAMAN ENDS LIFE IN BIRMINGHAM STREET

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Shot through the head and with a pistol grasped in his hand, George A. Blinn Jr., 65, prominent Birmingham businessman, was found mortally wounded on a street in suburban Mountain Brook tonight. A coroner's finding of suicide was returned.

Roosevelt Gets Minnesota Margin

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 27.—(AP) Minnesota democrats today named county delegations to the state convention in St. Paul March 9, with seven counties indorsing Governor Franklin Roosevelt, of New York, for president, and others selecting uninstructed groups.

The Ramsay county convention at St. Paul split into two meetings when the delegates could not agree upon a temporary chairman. Each group favored Roosevelt.

In Minneapolis, the Hennepin county meeting voted, 277 to 158, to send an uninstructed delegation to St. Paul, thereby defeating a motion to instruct for Alfred E. Smith, of New York.

Campaigners Obtain Jobs for 107,507

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Well started on its second hundred thousand, the united action campaign for a million jobs for unemployed Americans continued to gather momentum like a snowball.

More than 500 communities throughout the nation have contributed to the total of 107,507 reached today, 12 days after the "war on depression" started.

The report on jobs obtained during the last 24 hours (figures in parenthesis indicate totals since the campaign began) includes:

Georgia (1,718); Valdosta 421, Savannah 250, Atlanta 36, Macon 22, Rome 40, Dalton 7.

HARDWICK URGES CAMP NOT TO OMIT MURRAY

While contending that no primary should be held in Georgia for determining the state's choice for a democratic presidential candidate, former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, in a letter to Lawrence Camp, state committee chairman, Saturday urged that the name of Governor W. H. Murray not be omitted from the ballots if a primary is to be held.

"If he is technically barred from entering by the language of the rule adopted by the subcommittee," Hardwick wrote, "then the subcommittee should be reconvened at once and the necessary steps taken to permit him to qualify.

"Common fairness," Hardwick said, "demands it and nothing less will satisfy the people of Georgia, and anything less is likely to do infinite harm here and elsewhere. The same authority that can make the rule can change it or even unmake it."

Hardwick added that, in his judgment, the Georgia delegation ought to go to the Chicago convention uninstructed and ought not to be a party to any factional war between Smith and Roosevelt or between any candidates for the nomination. In lieu of a primary, he suggested a state convention for selecting delegates.

CATHOLICS CONDEMN BIRTH CONTROL ISSUE

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—The supreme court of national officers and directors of the Catholic Daughters of America protested against "federalized education," condemned any legislation permitting distribution of birth control propaganda, and disapproved of John H. Bankhead's infancy and maternity act in a resolution adopted today.

The federal education bill now before the senate, the resolution says, "offers the dangerous precedent of introducing into the field of education the insidious element of political power."

POISON GAS HALTS RESCUE OF MINERS

Fumes Force Squad Back After They Penetrate Close to Victims.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Feb. 27.—(AP)—All rescue workers were withdrawn this afternoon from the Boissevain mine of the Pocahontas Fuel Company after vain attempts to reach approximately 36 miners in the mine at the time of an explosion early this morning.

Thomas Stockdale, West Virginia mine inspector, withdrew the rescue squad because of the poisonous fumes in the mine.

The squad penetrated a mile and a half into the workings before being forced back. They estimated they came within a half mile of the seat of the explosion.

Another rescue crew is working from the Jenkin Jones mine, which connects in its underground ramifications with the Boissevain mine.

The United States bureau of mines station at Norton, Va., has sent a team of 35 trained rescuers, who will go in as soon as the mine cleared of foul air.

WELFARE GROUP WORK REVIEWED BY RUSSELL

Most Effective Expenditure of Funds Believed Attained in Aiding Families.

Atlanta's program of human helpfulness in a widespread emergency of hunger, unemployment, and distress received in the last year the co-operation of churches and civic groups under a plan of general contact with the Family Welfare Society to prevent duplication of effort and to assure the most effective expenditure of the city's charity money.

This was the burden of a report Saturday by Horace Russell, chairman of the Family Welfare Society's committee on co-operation of churches and public groups, reviewing the work in that field in the last year.

The record Mr. Russell described as one of human service, carefully planned and co-ordinated with the program of the Family Welfare Society. Relief funds from the emergency committee and from the Community Chest were made to go considerably farther than otherwise they might have done, as each family cared for by these groups, Mr. Russell pointed out, lightened the burden upon the society.

The record of service was extensive. Care for 10 families through the winter by one church, with groceries, clothing, feed, fuel, and rent provided: a program of helpfulness for a widowed mother and her brood of four through three years of development by another; a diet pantry and clothing closet maintained by another church; milk provided for a puny child for two years by another; rent, light and water for a struggling family as the service of another, were definite items of the program.

The co-operation was not undertaken by churches alone, the report said. Example of the general scope of the program was given in the part undertaken by the bowling club headed by John Bell, an insurance man, which provided $10 a week from its prize money to look after a family for a year; that of the Morningside Civic League, which gave $50 for groceries and a special diet for a family on the welfare society's list; the Atlanta Woman's Club, which has undertaken to provide seed and plants for 35 family gardens; and assistance with books, supplies, carfare, lunches, and clothing by the Russell High School Parent-Teacher Association, making it possible for nearly 20 boys and girls of needy families to remain in school.

The service undertaken by the young people's department of the Druid Hills Methodist church in providing for a three years' program of care for one of the Atlanta Constitution Opportunity families was cited as a particularly effective help.

"Who can say what really has been accomplished?" Mr. Russell asked after reviewing the details of this helpfulness. "We do know that the wretchedness and hopelessness of poverty has been eased by a feeling of security and contentment, that despondency has been repulsed by a degree of serenity and poise in the mother, the children are no longer on the edge of the crowd but are able to join their playmates in school and on the playground, clean and decently clothed."

Women Leaders for Prohi Reform Hold 2 Meetings Here Thursday

Atlanta will be the scene of Georgia's first state-wide anti-prohibition rally Thursday when national leaders of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform address two meetings at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

The meetings, one a luncheon session and the other to take place at night, will be attended by about 100 state and national leaders in the prohibition reform movement, including Mrs. Charles H. Sabin and Mrs. Archibald Roosevelt, president and secretary of the reform group, both of whom will make addresses at each session.

The luncheon meeting, which will begin at 1 o'clock will be featured by addresses by Mrs. Sabin, Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Amassa S. Mather, of Cleveland, and others. It will be a subscription affair, presided over by Mrs. William T. Healey, of Atlanta, chairman of the Georgia division of the women's organization. Men, as well as women, have been invited to the luncheon.

The mass meeting, which will begin at 8 o'clock in the Biltmore ballroom, also will be addressed by Mrs. Sabin, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs Mather and by Mrs. Coffin Van Rennsalaer and other women leaders in the national organization.

Mayor James L. Key will make a short address of welcome to the visiting women. The mayor will be introduced by Clark Howell. Mrs. Healey also will preside at this meeting.

The meeting here will follow a two-day session of the organization's state chairmen and members of the executive committee which is scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday at Charleston, S. C. Mrs. Healey will leave this morning for Charleston to represent the Georgia division at this meeting.

MANGET SEEKING 'LOST' SOLICITOR

Women Lay Forging of Names to Missing Agent of Recall Leader.

John A. Manget, president of the Greater Atlanta Prohibition and Law Enforcement Club and prime mover in the Key ouster move, Saturday was looking for a missing solicitor, C. B. Stewart, World War veteran.

Stewart disappeared several weeks ago and no one could be found Saturday who has heard from him since, Mr. Manget said. He is regarded as the mystery man of the recall effort against the mayor, but Manget and several Atlantans said Saturday they wished to communicate with him relative to the signatures which appeared on various of the recall petitions on file in the office of J. Henson Tatum, city clerk and registrar.

Mrs. Irma Merry, of 771 St. Charles avenue, N. E., and S. S. Dudley, of 1050 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., Saturday told Tatum that their signatures to the petition, which was witnessed by a person who signed himself as Stewart, were forged. Both contended they had never signed a recall petition of any character and that they had never been solicited.

Mrs. Merry charged without equivocation that her name to the petition was signed by the same person who wrote Stewart's name as a witness.

When Manget was communicated with he explained Stewart's connection with the recall move his club initiated as follows:

"Mr. Stewart was said to be a member of the American Legion and a World War veteran. He was recommended to me by a prominent Methodist pastor, and I put him to work. He received 15 cents a name we paid other solicitors. That was last fall.

"About the latter part of September or the first part of October, he seemed to be going to pieces and one day did not show up for work. Several days later a man called at our office and told us that he was at the veterans' hospital in bad shape, but that we would be kept informed of his progress.

"When we did not hear from him for several weeks, we called the hospital and asked about him. We were told that he was not there and there was no record of his having been a patient at the institution. When he came to work for us he gave his address as 997 Virginia avenue, N. E., and his telephone number as Hemlock 1170-J. We called there and were told they had not heard from him for many weeks. That is all I know about him."

Both Mrs. Merry and Dudley branded the petitions bearing their names as "rank forgeries," and said they would like to communicate with the person who witnessed their signatures to the document.

DOOM OF RECALL MOVE INDICATED

fort to save the fast-fading recall effort.

3. Excoriation of Key, and citation of mistakes in the list of recall names carried by Atlanta newspapers in a statement issued by the executive board of the Atlanta Federation of Trades and signed by A. Steve Nance, president.

4. Announcement of Key that he will talk this morning to his interdenominational Sunday school class at 9:30 o'clock at the Capitol theater on the "Moral Aspects of the Recall Question."

5. Announcement by J. P. Womack, campaign manager for Key in the 1930 primary, in which Key was nominated mayor over a field of five candidates, that legal forms will be prepared for all who wish to withdraw their names for whatever reason and will be sent to them if they will call Luke Arnold, Key's executive secretary, at Walnut 2934.

6. Reports that other civil suits will be filed against the Atlanta Federation of Trades and John A. Manget, president of the Greater Atlanta Prohibition and Law Enforcement Club, for libel in causing their names to be published as signers of the ouster move. The federation and the club joined hands in the recall effort. One libel suit asking $50,000 already has been filed.

7. Continued charges of frauds, misrepresentation and forgeries were made at Key's office and to Tatum.

Ready for Courts.

The affidavits will be used by Mark Bolding and John Echols, attorneys representing several clients, in an effort to force Tatum to show cause why persons whose names it is claimed were forged to the list may not have an opportunity to withdraw them. The court battle will not be precipitated unless another meeting of council is attempted in a hasty effort to file the petition before it actually becomes void through withdrawal of signatures, it was said.

Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton county superior court, announced that, although he would not grant a temporary injunction in the matter, he would order a special hearing in the event the rights of citizens to purge the petitions is threatened by a hasty special council session.

Proponents of the recall lost an attempt to force a special council session Friday afternoon and there were reports that another meeting is being attempted.

Claims Lists Not Purged.

In the Federation of Trades' statement, prinated in full below, it is charged that newspapers carried many more names than were actually on the lists, and Tatum explained that this might have been done because of the fact that in the second and third wards, especially, some of the petitions carried many names on a single page.

Lines were drawn through scores of these named, but Tatum instructed copyists that none was to be left off the transcription unless marked "out" by his staff, and as a consequence many names which those filing the petitions did not intend to be appended to it were carried, it was pointed out.

The federation statement, which hit "intimidation and coercion" on the part of Key's friends to kill the petition, follows:

"Startling facts are disclosed by an analysis of the list of names published in Atlanta newspapers and purporting to be in the recall petition.

"A majority of those listed as claiming their names were secured through misrepresentation or used without authority are not even on the registration list. Consequently the city clerk could not have accepted the petitions bearing their names, even if they had been tendered.

"While the total signatures from the first three wards tendered to the clerk were only slightly in excess of 1,200, the published list in one of the newspapers included about 1,800 names, or about 600 names that were never tendered to the city clerk as being petitioners.

Misrepresentation Rapped.

"We concur heartily in the attitude of John A. Manget, who has announced that he desires to prosecute anyone who may have victimized his office by securing names through misrepresentation to recall petitions. All good citizens will uphold him in his desire to ferret out any irregularities in the preparation of the lists.

"There are now in the clerk's office about 5,100 signatures, or an excess of the number required to call an election on the removal of Mr. Key. This surplus remains after a vicious campaign of intimidation and coercion on the part of Mr. Key's friends.

"In some instances citizens have been influenced by their employers to withdraw their names. Every opportunity has been taken to render the petition inadequate by forcing persons, through fear of embarrassment or actual loss of employment, to withdraw their signatures. In spite of this high-pressure bombardment, the recall petition remains complete and valid.

"We believe all fair-minded citizens will condemn the use of the big stick by Mr. Key's friends to frighten people into withdrawing from the movement after they have actually signed.

"It is apparent now that the real issue in this fight is whether the people of Atlanta still control their government, or whether a little group can emasculate the schools and control our splendid city regardless of the wishes of the citizens.

"Those citizens who are being requested to withdraw their petitions should realize that the parties making the requests are afraid to go before the voters and let them decide the issue.

Key Attacked.

"Mr. Key stated last summer and again Saturday that he would welcome an expression of the people in an election. If he speaks in good faith, he would have his friends refrain from forcing the withdrawal of signatures, instead of actually using his own office help to comb the town for withdrawals.

"His stated willingness to meet the issue is belied by his action with reference to the special meeting of council. A majority of council on Thursday made a written request for a meeting Friday for the purpose of acting on the recall election. Instead of calling the meeting, as required by law under such circumstances, he refused. He persisted in his refusal until late the following morning, at which time he had induced two of his friends in council to repudiate their signatures, thus voiding the request for the special meeting. This was after the city clerk had already summoned the members to meet, as was his duty.

"Mayor Key and his friends are desperate, knowing that if the election is held he will be removed from office by those citizens who have made possible for him his past political career, and who, after honoring him with the highest city office within their power, resent his dictatorship and defiance of our law.

Indignant Atlantans Swarm City Hall To Demand Removal of Names From Lists

Surprised at finding their names among the published list of persons alleged to have signed the recall petition against Mayor James L. Key, many Atlantans visited the city hall Saturday and requested City Clerk J. Henson Tatum to expunge from the petition their signatures, which had been placed without authority on the document. In the picture at the top are shown Mayor Key surrounded by a group of protesting citizens. In the photo may be seen (left to right): Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Thomas, 425 Flat Shoals avenue; Mayor Key; B. G. Paulin, 283 Whitefoord avenue; D. W. Hix, 361 Formwalt street, S. W.; H. G. Smith, 357 Felton drive, N. E., and H. C. Brown, 1694 Cowley avenue. At the left of the picture in the center are Luke Arnold, the mayor's secretary; S. S. Dudley and Charles R. Cook. The names of Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Cook were forged in the ninth ward list, it is charged. On the right of the center group are E. H. (Fat) Elrod, of the 13th ward, and Charles E. Dupree, ninth ward, who also charge their names were forged. In the group photo at the bottom are shown (left to right) H. A. Sappington, 356 Whitehall street; F. L. Russell, seventh ward; J. B. Callaway, C. L. Wooddall, 428 Ashby street, who demanded the names of himself and wife and Mary and Willie Wooddall be expunged, saying they were forged; and W. O. May, of the seventh ward, who charged forgery. Staff photos by Kenneth Rogers.

before allowing the prisoner a chance to be heard.

Duty to People.

"As governor," his friend explained, "he is obligated primarily to all the people of the state belonging to all parties, to enforce the constitution and the laws and not to take part in what is essentially a local partisan and political issue in one of the cities of the state."

The governor was described as "glad that Judge Seabury is making a definite study of the Cincinnati and other form of government," and of the opinion that the New York city charter could be overhauled to "create centralized responsibility and eliminate many wasteful and overlapping functions of government."

Mr. Roosevelt worked during the morning and visited friends in the afternoon. He plans to return to Albany tomorrow night after an address before the Hyde Park Men's Club.

State Senator John J. Dunnigan, Tammany spokesman in the upper house of the legislature, said Mr. Seabury's Cincinnati speech "unmasked him." Declaring his expressions of moral indignation have never been "on the level." Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, a veteran Tammany legislator, said "Judge Seabury has set out to make trouble" for both Governor Roosevelt and Mr. Smith.

Roosevelt and Seabury, an unsuccessful democratic governorship candidate in 1916, never were close political companions, although it was the governor who first injected the former court of appeals judge into the New York investigations. Mr. Roosevelt recommended Seabury to the appellate division of the supreme court in 1929 and he was named to investigate the magistrates' courts in Manhattan after evidences of graft had been found. Later the governor named Judge Seabury as his commissioner in the investigation of District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain. The republican majority of the legislative investigators employed him as counsel to the Hofstadter committee.

SEABURY KEEPS SILENCE ON CANDIDACY RUMORS

CINCINNATI, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Samuel Seabury, New York, in an interview late today, refused to comment on reports that listeners to his radio address last night interpreted his remarks as indicative of his candidacy for the democratic presidential nomination.

He would not reply to direct questions asking if he opposed Governor Roosevelt.

Neither would he say whether he would seek the presidential nomination or that for mayor of New York.

COOKING SCHOOL TO OPEN TUESDAY

most delightful of cakes, sauces, pies, meat combinations are as simple as the making of cornmeal mush—provided the maker follows instructions. There are certain things to do and a certain time in which to do them. That is all. It was the old-fashioned methods of cookery wherein the cook guessed at what she was doing that made things complicated.

Any man, one who has never fried an egg, can produce a four-story cake appetizing enough to make the mouth water without even soiling his coat and at the first trial—if he follows instructions. The men who have gone into the kitchen and messed about in an effort to produce a meal when wifie was away may look upon this statement with distrust. But they need only stop to remember they went about things without knowing what they were attempting. They "guessed" at everything they did.

Miss Andree says a ten-year-old child can put together successfully almost any dish known to the art of modern cookery—if he follows instructions. That is the basis of all the teaching of the De Both Home Makers' schools, of which Miss Andree is a member. It has been demonstrated over and over. Cookery isn't magic or genius—it's a simple business with very definite rules. The De Both schools teach the rules. Two plus two are four. No matter what you do or think or say you cannot alter that fact. Cooking is just as elementary and just as simple and just as governed by rule.

When Miss Andree tells her audiences how a thing is done she demonstrates it. When she says a cup of this, two cups of that, and a tablespoon of the other cooked so many minutes will produce so and so, it always does. When you, if you are a housewife, go to the kitchen to make a pie, or a cake, or a dinner, do you know it will be a success? You should. Miss Andree will prove to you that such assurance can be based on certainty.

Nash Steps Out Ahead

The new Nash models today make their bow to the American public. ¶ Measured in terms of their quality, their advanced engineering, their wealth of features, their beauty, their remarkably different performance, their size, and their price, each of these five new Nash series is provably a new value in its field. ¶ They are entirely new in appearance with complete Slip-Stream body design, Slip-Stream fenders V-radiator, and Beavertail back. ¶ They are new in performance with greater power, greater smoothness, greater speed, greater driving ease and riding comfort. ¶ They are larger, longer, lower, roomier cars with important basic advancements in both chassis and body design. ¶ We believe that when you see the new Nash and drive it you will accept it—and prefer it—as a new kind of car with a new type of performance.

Slip-Stream Body, Beavertail Back

A new body style of unusual beauty that contributes to even finer car performance because of its design. V-Radiator and sloping windshield reduce frontal air resistance while the aerodynamic body taper and Beavertail back minimize vacuum "hold back", thus adding miles to top speed. (All models.)

Silent Underslung Worm Drive Rear Axle

It permits lowering center of gravity 3 inches without decreasing head room or road clearance. It is one of the longest-lived and most trouble-free units known to motor car engineering. Records of 500,000 mileages for a worm axle are common. (Ambassador, Advanced, and Special Eights.)

X-Dual Frame, Super-rigid

Strongest, most rigid type of frame. Extends practically entire length of Nash chassis, giving car, virtually, a double frame as positive resistance against weave or distortion. The massive inside girders extend from the front cross-member clear to the rear kick-up. (All models.)

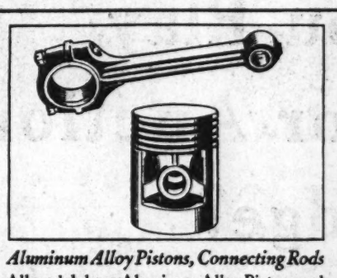

Full Range Ride Control (Dash Adjusted)

A lever conveniently located on the new Nash instrument panel enables you instantly to regulate your travel-comfort, regardless of road, or load, speed, or temperature. "Full range" means you can regulate any degree desired. You are not confined to any limited number of adjustments. (All models.)

FIVE New Series

and up, f.o.b. factory

Aluminum Alloy Pistons, Connecting Rods

All models have Aluminum Alloy Pistons and Connecting Rods (Bohnalite). Their extreme lightness substantially reduces centrifugal load, resulting in greater power, and in faster acceleration. Pistons have Invar struts. Connecting Rods are drilled full length for pressure lubrication.

Relocation of Rear Seat

New body design enables Nash to locate rear seat ahead of rear axle (with no decrease in leg room) instead of directly over it, as is conventional practice. In all new Nash models now both seats are away from any possible contact with axle mechanism, giving you "cradled" riding comfort.

"Centrifuse" Brake Drums

A foundation of steel supports cast iron drums of special formula in all Eights. Assures you long and trouble-free service and softer and more positive brake action under all conditions. Swift dissipation of heat eliminates possibility of scoring. Brake lining wears five times longer.

Finger-tip Driving Seat Adjustment

All Coupes and regular Sedans have new roller, sliding type front seat adjustment. It is extremely easy to operate. Provides positive control. Requires no effort to move forward or backward to meet exact requirements of the individual. Seats are wider. All seat backs are high with deep cushions.

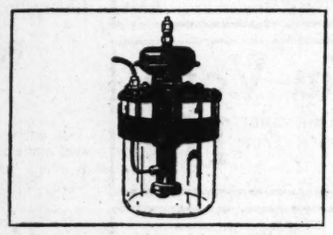

Twin-Ignition

Superiority of Twin-Ignition is that it provides two spark plugs for each cylinder. These two plugs, firing simultaneously, ignite gas quicker and more efficiently, increase power 22%, add 5 miles to top speed, and save gas. All Ambassador, Advanced, and Special Eights have Twin-Ignition motors.

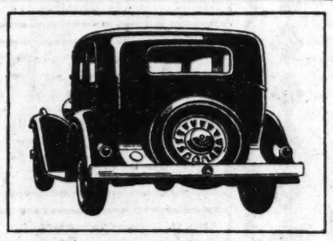

Two Glove Compartments in Dash

A feature of new instrument panel on all models, is the conveniently located glove and parcel compartments on both sides of panel. Other interior attractions include Inside Sun Visors; Inside Door Locks; Rubber Pedal Pads; and Roof Radio Aerials for all models except Convertibles.

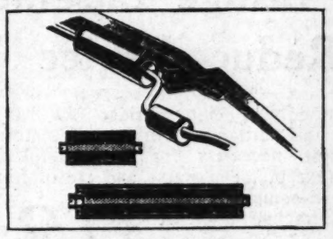

Automatic Centralized Chassis Lubrication

This system positively insures properly metered charges of oil under pressure to all chassis points where needed. Saves owner time and expense. Lengthens bearing life and makes performance smoother. Needs no attention except at intervals to refill oil tank. (Ambassador, Advanced and Special Eights.)

New Beavertail Back

This unusually beautiful new Beavertail back created by Nash not only gives pleasing distinction to the rear end but is aerodynamically designed to free the car from the "hold-back" caused by rear-end vacuum and thereby to save power-waste at high speed. (All models.)

New Dual Exhaust Silencers

The new dual muffler has a resonator-type exhaust silencer which represents the latest advancement in silence engineering. The exhaust travels in a straight line instead of through conventional baffle plate muffler. All motor noise and back pressure is virtually banished. (All models.)

Sound-Proofed Body and Chassis

The new Nash is the most completely and scientifically sound-proofed car built. Its quietness is delightfully restful. At every point where noise ordinarily is present there is insulation to secure silence. The original quietness of operation lasts for years. (All models.)

METHODISTS ASSAIL TINKHAM'S 'BLUSTER'

Massachusetts Solon Made Target of Attack by Cannon Adherents.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—The Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals today termed the latest attacks of Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, on Bishop James Cannon Jr., "bluster and bluff evidently based upon the presumption that the American people are utter fools."

The board said the bishop "has been hounded with detectives, had his correspondence taken, his files ransacked, his loved ones involved in difficulties, and his life endangered."

The cleric's enemies tried to discredit him with his 1928 followers, continued the clipsheet; to destroy his health so that "he would be unable to give attention to public matters in the event that Mr. (John J.) Raskob's candidate, Governor Smith, is once again nominated," and "by consequence to injure his (Bishop Cannon's) church."

"Apparently, Bishop Cannon's only offense was that he opposed Governor Al Smith for president," added the board.

What his enemies actually accomplished, it asserted, was to increase his influence, particularly in the south, "immeasurably."

Saying "there is little expectation that the action of the lower court will be reversed" on appeal, the clipsheet concluded:

"The question has been honestly asked more than once, 'Why should Bishop Cannon object to reporting the funds he used in Virginia?' The answer is very simple: Such a report would have endangered the personal and business interests of many humble patriots and it was the bishop's duty to keep faith with them in so far as the law permitted."

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Considered in the light of Chinese history, the cable dispatches from Shanghai telling of the determined resistance put up by the Chinese nineteenth route army are particularly significant because they indicate that the world may be watching the building of a real Chinese nation.

The late Dr. Sun Yat-sen, father of the Chinese republic, looked upon the Chinese people as "a plate of sand." They were, he said, "helpless in the face of foreign imperialism and its economic conquest."

"A plate of sand" was a happy phrase for describing Chinese ineffectualness. Put sand in bags, and pile the bags one on top of another, and you have a most efficient barricade for fighting. Behind such barricades the Chinese to the north of Shanghai have handled machine-guns so effectively that they snarled what the Japanese had expected to be a pushover battle.

It may well be that this unexpected show of fight is a portent of the national spirit which many Chinese leaders have been laboring to develop for years.

Paradoxically, China in recent years has been a military nation that could not fight—except with other Chinese. Statistical information about China is difficult to obtain with any degree of accuracy, but probably there are about 2,000,000 men in China under arms.

Until the reforms of 1905-1906 the Chinese constitution provided for two kinds of military organizations, the Manchu army and the several armies in the provinces. When the dynasty was established in 1644 a hereditary national army was centered in Peking, (now Peiping) composed for the most part of Manchus and including a few other races. These soldiers had an enjoyable time. Every adult male was entitled by birth to be enrolled, and whether on active service or not each man was allowed to draw an allowance of tribute rice. A few garrisons were established in other cities, but the bulk of these soldiers stayed in Peking and soon were of no military value whatever.

The provincial armies were poorly paid, poorly armed and had virtually no training.

By the time the war with Japan developed in 1894, the Chinese soldier was looked down upon and there was no respect anywhere for military knowledge.

In that war the Japanese, equipped with modern fighting machines and trained for years under German guidance, had a walkaway.

After the Boxer uprising of 1901 an attempt was made to bring the Chinese military forces up to date. Foreigners were called upon for assistance, and at least one former American soldier found himself teaching Chinese youths in Shanghai how to do squads right and squads left in response to commands in a language they could not understand.

Little real progress was made until after the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-1905, when various military schools were established. Some good officers were trained in these schools, but China remained a long distance from military efficiency.

Since then there have been numerous internal conflicts, and hundreds of thousands of men have lived under arms. But military men the world over—and especially the Japanese—had little respect for the ability of the Chinese soldiers.

That opinion has been brought up for re-examination during the last few weeks. Still inferior in equipment, the Chinese have stopped onslaught after onslaught by the well-trained and efficiently armed Japanese. More than this, they have succeeded in performing one of the most difficult of military feats.

When their line was smashed north of Kiangwan last week and they were in rout, they reformed and put on a successful counter attack—an accomplishment difficult enough to negotiate with the best disciplined veteran troops.

Dispatches indicate that patriotism is swelling throughout China as a result of the performance of the army in the field. Nations have been made many times in the past by defensive wars. Perhaps we are seeing this process work out again in the quagmires north of Shanghai.

Mother Backs Prince In Morganatic Union

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Feb. 27. (AP)—Prince Lennart, grandson of King Gustav, who is on his way to London where he is to marry his boyhood sweetheart, Karin Nissvandt, daughter of a wealthy Stockholm businessman, has received a cablegram from his mother, Princess Maria Pavlovna, today, saying she would come from New York to attend the wedding, according to the Dagens Nyheter.

The prince stands to lose his royal prerogatives and his rights to the throne because of the match. His grandfather, the king, has refused his consent because Miss Nissvandt is not of royal blood.

EAMON DE VALERA OUTLINES PLANS FOR GOVERNMENT

Policy Will Be To Work Steadily Toward Re-establishing Independence, Says Irish Leader.

BY ALVIN HALLMAN.
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press.)

DUBLIN, Feb. 27.—Eamon De Valera, Irish republican leader, today set forth in questions and answers the plan he hopes to follow to increase Ireland's independence from Great Britain when he comes into control of the Saorstat government as he expects soon to do.

The questions asked De Valera, and his answers follow:

Q.—"What will be the policy of the government which it is assumed you will be asked to form?"

A.—"The policy of the government will be to work steadily toward re-establishing unity and political independence in Ireland and to build up industries to supply home needs. For the latter purpose the home market will be reserved for the home producer."

Q.—"Will you move within the Anglo-Irish treaty as it now stands or will you seek its revision?"

A.—"We will proceed to execute the limited mandate asked for at the elections, but will be glad to avail ourselves of any opportunities that present themselves for negotiating a revision of the treaty so as to bring it into accord with Irish aspirations."

Will Abolish Oath.

Q.—"Do you intend to seek the abolition of the oath at once, or wait until later?"

A.—"The removal of the article of the constitution which makes the oath obligatory will be one of our first governmental acts."

Q.—"Are you quoted correctly when it is said you will retain in Ireland the next land annuity payment (about 3,000,000 pounds, due about June)?"

A.—"The land annuities, legally as well as justly, belong to the Saorstat. They were given by the British parliament as recoupment in part for hundreds of millions of pounds admittedly extracted from Ireland in over-taxation during the 19th century. The Cosgrave government had no right to transmit them to Great Britain and we propose to retain them. Our right to them is as well founded as that of the six northern counties' government, which actually retains them."

Q.—"Do you believe that a certain economic co-operation with England might be profitable to the Free State and do you intend to seek such co-operation?"

A.—"We are prepared to co-operate with Great Britain in economic and all other matters of agreed common concern. Last year we purchased from Great Britain 35,750,000 pounds sterling worth of goods while Great Britain purchased from us 31,250,000 pounds worth. We are Great Britain's best customer; she is ours. The balance, however, is considerably in her favor. We are prepared to accord preferential treatment to her manufactures if she gives corresponding preference to our produce, but on no account will we barter the right adequately to protect the industries which we must establish in order to solve our unemployment problem."

Strictly Fianna Fail Government.

Q.—"Do you expect to form a strictly Fianna Fail government or to effect a coalition with labor?"

A.—"I expect a strictly Fianna Fail government will be formed. Labor, I understand, desires to keep its independence. I have not yet had an opportunity to ascertain labor's views on this."

Q.—"What will your attitude toward the public safety act be?"

A.—"The public safety act will be repealed at once. With the abolition of the oath we hope to secure willing obedience to the law and to dispense with coercive measures which have never brought anything but confusion and turmoil. I am confident we can rule by ordinary law."

Q.—"Have you any statement to make with regard to the loan of 1921 to the Irish republic, approximately half of which, we understand, has been paid?"

A.—"The completion of payments due on the external loan of the republic is a debt of honor which will be met with all possible speed."

Mussolini's Visit to Pope Seals Peace of Church and State

This group is shown after the meeting with "ile duce" and his companions with members of the papal family. Mussolini was closeted with the pope for approximately an hour, although their meeting had only been scheduled for a few moments. To the surprise of everyone, the dictator was early for the appointment, necessitating some excitement in the pope's household. Associated Press Photo.

FASCISTS ACCLAIM HITLER CANDIDACY

Fifteen Thousand Cheer as Nazi Leader Opens Drive for Presidency.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Adolph Hitler, a man without a country for 18 years, made his debut as a German citizen tonight by opening his campaign for the presidency of Germany before 15,000 frenzied fascist followers that packed Berlin's sports palace.

The Nazi leader promised that the "November system" (the present republic) would fall and with it the international treaties that had "humiliated, degraded and made Germany ridiculous."

(Germany became a republic from November 9, 1918, when the abdication of Kaiser Wilhelm was announced.)

"March will be a decisive month," said the fiery chieftain of the national socialists, whose speech was interrupted time and time again by tremendous outbursts of cheers and applause.

"The disgraceful pages from 1928 to 1932 will be torn out of our history and the German people will not have started another revolution, but will have won back what they have lost."

Declaring that the Nazis honored his rival, President Paul Von Hindenburg, and wanted his name respected in posterity, Hitler addressed words of warning to the veteran incumbent.

"Old man," he said, "those behind you want to destroy you. You must step aside. They want to fight and we do, too."

The German people would all be Nazis, Hitler said, if they were not misled by the press.

Summing up the accomplishments of his movement, he said it had fostered the now general attitude that payment of reparations must cease and the "war guilt lie" be repudiated.

"But most important of all—we have given the German people new hope and confidence," he said, while his audience wildly applauded.

Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's emergency decree, he said, were merely a temporary solution of Germany's problems and were characteristic of "the inefficacy and demoralizing influence of the present system."

"All the present government has to show is misery," he said. The "reds" had increased from 35,000 in 1913 to probably 7,000,000 now, he asserted.

"We will smash chaos by the fist," he declared.

Hitler concluded with an appeal for the utmost sacrifice.

MISS GREW MARRIES AT AMERICAN EMBASSY

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Feb. 27.—(AP) Miss Anita Grew, daughter of the United States ambassador to Turkey, who is soon to become ambassador to Japan, was married today at the American embassy to Robert English, secretary of the American legation at Budapest.

The couple was married in a Turkish civil ceremony on February 25. Both are Bostonians.

Dr. Caleb Gates, president of Robert College, officiated today at the service which was attended by only 20 guests, including the embassy staff and several friends. The ambassador gave his daughter away.

Germany's Financial Crisis Analyzed by Noted Expert

(Note—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's newly repeated declaration before the reichstag outlining his government's intention regarding the payment of reparations again brings that subject to general attention. In the following article Dr. Max Winkler reviews the reparations question, not only up to the adoption of the Dawes plan, but from its adoption to the present time.)

BY DR. MAX WINKLER.
(Copyright, 1932, by N. A. N. A., Inc.)

The world of finance was neither surprised nor alarmed at the statement by Dr. Heinrich Bruening, chancellor of Germany. The reich, said Dr. Bruening, can no longer pay reparations. He issued no further explanations. He felt apparently that he was merely voicing the views held by a group of notable experts assembled at Basle to study Germany's capacity to pay.

For almost 13 years Germany's creditors have been struggling with the problem of reparations. From the outset they have been dealing with theories rather than facts. They naively believed that Germany could pay for all the damage that was said to have been caused by the war, and much more.

Whence the funds would come, no one seemed to care. Germany's creditors merely knew that Article 231 of the Versailles Treaty fixes upon Germany the responsibility for the damages suffered by the allied governments and their nationals resulting from the war.

They also knew that, by virtue of Article 232, a reparations commission would be created to fix the amount and the conditions of payment. They further knew that, by virtue of Article 234, the commission has the right to examine from time to time Germany's resources and capacity to pay, to extend the period or modify the method of payment, the right of complete investigation and control, as well as to adopt such measures, in the event of Germany's default, as may seem expedient, without these measures being considered by Germany as hostile acts.

Reparations Fixed at $33,000,000,000.

In July, 1920, a conference was convened at Spa, where the amount was fixed which each creditor was to receive. France was to get the lion's share, 52 per cent. Great Britain was to follow with 22 per cent, Italy 10 per cent, Belgium 7 per cent, Portugal and Japan three-quarters of 1 per cent each. In June, 1921, Serbia was listed as a future recipient to the extent of 5 per cent, and Rumania also was awarded a part.

In April, 1921, reparations were fixed at 132,000,000,000 gold marks, or about $33,000,000,000 gold. This is several times the total available supply of the yellow metal, but no one seemed to care about that. Of course, the amount was not to be paid at once. Bonds were to be created to the amount, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent, with a sinking fund of 1 per cent, or a total of 6 per cent. These bonds were to bear no maturity. Germany was to pay on forever.

Annual payments were to comprise a fixed amount of 2,000,000,000 marks (gold) and an additional sum equivalent to 26 per cent of the value of Germany's exports. The agreement, which is dated May 5, 1921, provides for payment either in cash or in kind.

Germany continued to make payments in accordance with these arrangements. Funds were derived from the sale of German paper known at the time as government, state, city and corporation bonds, and German currency. The decline in the mark was in direct proportion to the promptness of payments. Again, no one cared.

The toboggan of the mark continued. It declined to an infinitesimal fraction of its pre-war value. Cost of printing exceeded the price it fetched. Sales of marks ceased, and so did reparations. Germany defaulted in November, 1922. The Allies decided to act.

France and Belgium March In.

In January, 1923, France and Belgium marched triumphantly into and took possession of the Ruhr. Germany's collapse was complete, and the collapse of France, the victor, also was threatened. A rescue party was organized in November, 1923. In fact, two—one headed by Reginald McKenna and one directed by General Charles G. Dawes.

The McKenna committee was charged with ascertaining the amount of German capital abroad and with devising means of repatriating it. The Dawes committee was charged with seeking means of balancing Germany's budget and stabilizing her currency.

As might have been suspected, the McKenna group achieved little. The Dawes committee was eminently successful. The results were embodied in a document known as the Dawes plan.

It provided for reparation payments beginning with 1,000,000,000 gold marks per annum, and rising to 2,500,000,000 in the fifth year, the so-called standard year. Subsequent payments were subject to increase according to variations as expressed in an index of prosperity constructed for such purpose.

The plan gave representatives of Germany's creditors the right to par-

Japs Take Steps To Curb Concentrations of Chinese

TOKYO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Japan is ready to use her air force and her navy in interior China to prevent the Chinese from reinforcing their line at Shanghai, it was learned today on high authority.

The navy will be ordered to stop troop movements down the Yangtze river and air raids will be employed to discourage the Chinese from bringing up reinforcements by land.

The policy already has been put into effect on a small scale. The recent raids by naval planes on the Chinese air bases at Soochow and Hangchow were cited as examples of the method in which the air force will be used.

A government spokesman asserted that three factors have contributed in making the Shanghai conflict almost war on a national scale. He said these factors were the storm of censure against Japan from neutral powers, the attitude of the League of Nations, and fabricated reports of Chinese victories which have convinced the masses of China that the time is ripe to crush Japan.

The Japanese military authorities at Shanghai are known to have expressed alarm over the possibility of numerous and early reinforcements for the Chinese forces there.

Destroyers on Duty.

It was understood that Japanese destroyers will attempt to break up any additional Chinese troop movements across the Yangtze at Nanking. Thousands of men are reported to have crossed the river there en route to Shanghai.

Other warships will be ordered to intercept troop movements down the river from Kiukiang and Hankow. Information that General Chiang Fah-kwei's fourth army, known as "The Ironsides," had left Yoochow for Shanghai was believed to be partly responsible for this decision. According to these reports, the general had 30,000 men.

In official quarters it was intimated that it would be impossible fully to comply with the suggestions made by the ambassadors of the four great powers yesterday regarding protection of the Shanghai International Settlement.

One of the suggestions of the ambassadors—the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Italy and France—was that no more reinforcements be landed within the settlement. In official circles it was said that army commanders at Shanghai might not be able to commit themselves definitely in this matter.

It also was said that the removal of Japanese warships from their moorings off the settlement presented considerable difficulty.

Because of the informal character of the representations made by the four ambassadors, the foreign office may decide that written replies are not necessary, especially as Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa assured the ambassadors of Japan's earnest desire to refrain from any action that might harm the settlement directly or indirectly.

Royal Canadian Air Force Fliers Offer To Aid China Against Japs

BY MARSHALL YARROW.
(Copyright, 1932, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 27.—Five hundred soldiers of the skies, the cream of the Royal Canadian air force, have heard with eager ears the call to adventure and are planning to become soldiers of fortune in the far east.

Overlooked by the country, which they served for years, blocked in the career for which they have studied and trained, this doughty group of sky fighters now awaits from Chinese authorities a reply to their offer to break an aerial lance for China against the speedy air raiders of Japan.

According to spokesmen who have been conferring with Tchuin Li, Chinese consul general for Canada, the offer is likely to be accepted with gratitude. Brief cables from Ottawa to Nanking have impressed the Chinese government and military and they have asked further details. The airmen are eagerly anticipating action at Shanghai in four months.

A cut of $42,000,000 in the Canadian estimates two weeks ago spelled contraction in every government department and chiefly in the department of national defense. It spelled unemployment for hundreds of members in the non-permanent section of the R. C. A. F., stationed at various bases throughout the dominion.

Many of these threatened with the loss of the only jobs they knew at the

Stroke of Il Duce's Pen Again May Cut Rents

ROME, Feb. 28.—(AP)—A stroke of Mussolini's pen may again reduce rents in Italy, or at least in Rome.

The duce knocked 10 per cent off the landlords' bills in October, 1930, by his famous decree lowering wages about 12 per cent and ordering a general reduction of prices wherever the law could operate.

There are more than 5,000 vacant apartments in Rome, according to statistics published by Il Popolo Di Roma, yet the prices are rated by official statistics as the highest in Italy.

Rome rents, figures show, are more than half as dear again as in Turin, the next highest city, and two and a half times the average rent in 45 cities.

ALFONSO, UNCLE UNITE TO REGAIN SPANISH POWER

Traditional Pretender to Throne Given Immediate Rights to Throne by Former Monarch.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Former King Alfonso XIII and his uncle, Alfonso Carlos, traditional pretender to the Spanish throne, have issued a call to Spanish people, the Havas News Agency reported from Madrid today, to join together to overthrow the new republic in Spain.

Former King Alfonso's manifesto, the Havas correspondent said, declared he accepted his uncle as head of the family and that they both hold the same principle—that everyone must unite "to save Spanish society from the wave of anarchy and communism which has invaded it and to gather under the flag, the sacred flag to which I devoted my life."

Appeals for Unification.

He proposed to those who remained faithful to the monarchy to restore it as a form of provision government which would summon a Cortes to draw up a constitution. The present republic, he said, is no more capable of continuing in existence than was the short-lived first republic in the 1870's.

He made a sacrifice, he said, in April, 1931, when he left the throne, and he added: "Don't doubt that I would submit to a second ordeal and that I would not place any obstacle in the way of the acceptance of what is the will of the nation, freely and truly expressed. But let us unite to save Spain. I, who appeal to you, am ready to serve her as the least of her citizens."

The manifesto of the king's uncle, Alfonso Carlos, was reported to be in the same vein. The time has come, it said, to protest against the republic and "a constitution which may be the ideal of an atheist republic, born of violence in a time of misfortune, but cannot be the fundamental law of Spain."

Absolute Monarchy Not Asked.

The pretender, to whom former King Alfonso was reported Thursday to have resigned his immediate rights to the throne, declared he does not advocate an absolute monarchy but one which would collaborate with legislative chambers which really represent the people. He said he also advocated decentralization of the different regions of Spain and concluded by declaring his mission was one of peace.

"I appeal to all," the manifesto was reported to say, "and in the first place to my dearest nephew, Alfonso De Bourbon, upon whom all my rights devolve at my death, to collaborate in giving spain a truly Christian constitution.

JAPS DENY AIDING 'WHITE' RUSSIANS

International Crisis Not Likely To Occur, Says War Office.

BY GLENN BABB.

TOKYO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—There is no likelihood Japan will court another international crisis on the questions addressed by Russia to Japan in regard to Japanese military operations in northern Manchuria.

War office and foreign office spokesmen said Russia's "nervousness" over Japan's intentions in north Manchuria were based on distorted interpretations of the situation and raised to unwarranted dimensions a "purely local problem."

Official Tokyo was surprised by the Russian inquiries, which were presented by L. M. Karakhan, acting commissar for foreign affairs, to the Japanese ambassador in Moscow. It was pointed out the soviet government has been complacent towards Japanese military operations within the Harbin district.

The war office spokesman emphatically denied the Japanese military authorities in Manchuria were lending any encouragement to "white" (anti-soviet) Russians and he suggested reports of such activities emanated from the anti-soviet Russians themselves, who hoped perhaps to raise funds in that manner.

A foreign office spokesman indicated Japan might be preparing to hold Russia responsible for damages suffered by Japanese nationals in northern Manchuria unless the Moscow government permitted troop movements over the Chinese Eastern railway, which is jointly owned by Russia and China.

The Japanese Manchurian military command wants to use the road to transport troops to the vicinity of Imienpo, where 13,000 followers of General Ting Chao, Chinese leader, are reported to have occupied several towns and to have looted the property of Japanese and Koreans.

Duke Sells His Coronet To Increase Gold Supply

LONDON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Carrying his coronet under his arm like a derby hat, an English duke walked into a Bond street jewelry shop today and sold the ancestral headpiece for 15,000 pounds so that it could be stripped of its jewels and melted to increase the nation's gold supply.

The identity of the duke was not disclosed, but it was said that his family has held baronial rank for nearly five centuries. His action was cited as an example to other Britons to disgorge their gold.

This transaction was the latest development in England's "gold rush" in which thousands of golden trinkets, ornaments and coins have been sold so that their owners can benefit from the present high price of gold and England benefit by its export.

U. S. Chinese Reported Raising $100,000 a Day for 'War Chest'

BY BATES RANEY.
(Copyright, 1932, by the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(UP)—More than $100,000 a day is being raised by Chinese in the United States to fight Japan, a nation-wide survey revealed tonight.

Some of the money will provide for Shanghai refugees, but most of it is either being sent directly to General Tsai Ting-kai, defender of Shanghai, or is being used in various American cities to train a corps of Chinese-American aviators to fight Japan.

Chinese leaders in the United States hope to put into the front lines at Shanghai a corps of trained fliers equipped with the most up-to-date American airplanes within the next three months.

In New York the On Leong and Hip Sing tongs, which in years past have frequently clashed over political and business questions, have laid aside their differences and united in the fight to get funds for their stricken countrymen.

Arrangements have been made to lease an airport on Long Island, and a group of 25 young Chinese students and workers will shortly enter training as an air unit.

Every Chinese restaurant in the United States is said to be contributing to the "war chest." One restaurant alone, the Palais D'Or on Broadway, has collected more than $17,000 since January 29.

Next Sunday the Chinese women

BRITON'S ELECTION SEEN AS MOVE TO CURB FRANCE

Former British Foreign Secretary Wins Over Nickolas Titulescu, of Rumania, Candidate of French Delegation.

HENDERSON DENIES PLANS TO RETIRE

Preparations Go Forward at Secretariat for Impending Extraordinary Session of Assembly.

BY P. I. LIPSEY JR.

GENEVA, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Organization today of the constituent commissions of the world disarmament conference greatly magnified the importance of the role of Arthur Henderson and thereby placed a curb on the dominance of France.

Mr. Henderson was elected president of the political commission, which was formed on the insistence of Premier Andre Tardieu, of France, for the purpose of considering the French security proposals and other political questions. The former British foreign secretary won out over France's candidate, Nicholas Titulescu, of Rumania.

The American delegation took a leading part in this choice and had a hand also in electing delegates of four "neutral" states to head the military, naval and air commissions.

Mr. Henderson, who always has been a severe critic of the French thesis, now is president of the conference and of its three major organs.

Refuting reports that his health was about to force his retirement, Mr. Henderson asserted today he was growing stronger daily. If it became necessary for him to retire, Nicholas Politis, of Greece—an ally of France—would be left as chairman of both the general and the political commissions.

Preparations were going forward at the League of Nations secretriat for the impending extraordinary session of the League assembly.

The belief was expressed that the United States and other non-League members would not be invited, although they may have observers present at assembly committee sessions.

BIRTHS, DEATHS SHOW DECLINE

Japan Only Country in World Revealing Gain in Birth Rate.

GENEVA, Feb. 27.—(UP)—Since the beginning of the 20th century the world has been following two general tendencies as regards natural increase in population.

These consist of a double movement in the decline of the birth rate and also of the death rate.

The maximum of these movements has been attained in Germany where, since the beginning of the century, the decline in the birth rate has attained 47 per cent and the death rate decline 39 per cent.

These are the conclusions that have just been reached by the international health organization of the League of Nations.

The statistics are based on 26 European countries, and the three non-European countries, namely Australia, New Zealand and Japan. The variation in the different countries, however, is very marked.

In Germany, for example, the absolute decline in birth rate is 40 times greater than in Portugal and five times that in France.

Japan is the only country in the group studied that has had an increase in birth rate. Japan leads the rest of the world with a natural population increase of 900,000 annually.

The United States comes next with about 870,000 persons.

The states studied above constitute about one-third of the entire population of the world.

Immediate Truce Seen In Sino-Jap Situation

LONDON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—The Reuters (British) News agency correspondent at Geneva reported tonight that strong rumors were current there to the effect that an immediate truce was in prospect at Shanghai.

The correspondent said an important communication by Japan to the League of Nations' council might make possible an immediate cessation of hostilities.

The foreign office at Tokyo disclosed today that the Japanese representative at Geneva had been instructed to inform League authorities that Japan was ready to end the Shanghai conflict whenever the Chinese proved their willingness to withdraw 12 1-2 miles.

Such a withdrawal was stipulated in the Japanese ultimatum served on the Chinese before the recent big offensive started. At that time the Chinese refused to comply with it.

Cuba Denied Change In Sugar Agreement

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Representatives of sugar interests in Europe, Peru and Java declined today to accede to a request of the president of the Cuban institute to alter the production limitation agreement adopted at Brussels last year.

At the same time they issued a statement saying they were prepared to discuss any proposals which Cuba might make for alterations if the proposals were considered acceptable to all the contracting parties. Such proposals might be submitted, they suggested, at the next meeting of the sugar council in Paris on March 14.

The delegates recommended 2,350,000 tons as a fair and reasonable crop for Cuba. They said Java, having limited her planting for 1933 to about 1,350,000 tons, the statistical position would be much improved if Cuba limited her 1932 crop as indicated above.

Outlook in Germany Darker As Moratorium End Nears

Brother of Atlantan Writes From Hamburg That Nation Faces Situation Never Before Encountered.

To the native German, the political and economic outlook is assuming a darker hue than ever before, due largely to the approaching end of the war debt holiday granted Germany, according to a letter received recently by Sig Hamburger, 641 Collier road, from his brother, Leopold Hamburger, who is a member of a large importing and exporting firm of Hamburg.

France's relentless demands for fulfillment of the reparations treaty to the letter is making for extremely critical conditions in the German republic, Leopold Hamburger asserts in his letter, which paints a vivid picture of conditions in central Europe. In a previous descriptive account of the situation, the Atlantan's brother portrayed the problems confronted by the countries most greatly affected by the World War. In his most recent letter Mr. Hamburger writes that the war debts problem at present continues to constitute Germany's most closely hovering nemesis.

Commenting upon his previous letter, which was printed in The Constitution, Leopold Hamburger writes as follows:

"I was more than astonished to find my humble letter printed in a big newspaper. Of course, if I had known that my letter to you should ever find its way into the newapers I would have endeavored to put my thoughts in a more fluent English than I probably have done, and perhaps I would have smoothed some of my sweeping statements to a more moderate expression. With my lengthy description of all the countries I passed on my business tour, I wanted to give you a vivid impression of the countries you read about sometimes in your newspapers, and of which in an ordinary way one hardly knows where these small countries are to be looked for on the globe.

Says Europe Is Suffering.

"It certainly can do any amount of good if your countrymen at large are given a glimpse into the troubles and difficulties which Mother Europe is suffering. I am sure that your people, being used to think in continents, early understand n the petty rivalry, all the inborn hate, distress and old grudges which the numerous states of Europe feel against each other. From your standpoint, you might say: Let them turn down all the old jealousies, let them turn over a new page and start all over again. There are, of course, in every country in Europe a certain number of people broad-minded enough to think in the same category, but most of the people cannot get out of their old way of thinking, and every statesman and every political congregation has to take into account the state of mind just as it is.

"I am sure that your late President Wilson failed to achieve his aim—namely, to bring a real peace to the world, just because he did not know and could not know the state of mind of the numerous European nations. The historical developments and wars after wars for the last thousand years cannot be wiped out by a single act of will. There are ingrained in the hearts of men and children the same ideas, absorbed with the milk from their mothers' breasts. I quite agree with you that this state of things is horrible and most detestable, yet it exists and must be reckoned with.

"The political and economic development since I wrote you my last long letter has gone from bad to worse. The reparations conference, which was planned for January 25 at Lausanne, probably will not come off; if it will take place at all, it will be a small affair and will only carry a motion to adjourn the conference for about six or seven months. The underlying facts are these:

Puts Blame on France.

"Germany is absolutely unable to continue the reparations payments and, as the holiday year ends at the middle of this year, the question is, What is to be done after July 1? As I have written you before, we want to pay our private debts, but, considering the world crisis, we can only do so if our foreign creditors give us time to fulfill this task and under the condition that no reparations payments are pressed out of our impoverished country, which, as a consequence of the war, is bleeding yet from a thousand wounds.

"All the interested parties are willing to comply with this undeniable necessity, with the exception of France, which is adhering to the letter of the treaties which, in the opinion of all sensible men, are based on a tremendous error. It is clear now that it was very poor statesmanship to impose on one country such huge war debts which are not only a bare impossibility to pay, but a great danger to the economical structure of all the countries which are to receive such large amounts.

"The crisis we are passing through is certainly caused not only by the reparations and war debts problem, but there are other reasons which helped to compile the sad results. But I am pretty sure that principally it is the fault of the reparations and war debts problem which led the world into the present state of economic chaos. If a sound solution could be found for the many questions, I am sure every state in the world and every man in the world would feel the beneficial effects.

"Carlyle, the English philosopher and historian, said, about a century ago: 'Something must be entirely wrong in the world when people must go barefoot because too many shoes are manufactured.' This sentence you can vary on all possible commodities. Millions of people go hungry, not because there is not wheat enough for all, but because there is too much wheat, etc. The economic and the financial structure of the world is strained to the cracking point, and it is only to be hoped that the statesmen in responsibility will find the way out before everything tumbles down. Some people (in Germany) think that it is already too late and the remedies which would have done a great amount of good a year ago, will not help much now; and it is certainly true that in the last decennium the political and economic leaders arrived always too late at a right decision. . . .

"Your country holds the key position of the whole problem. Most of the reparations we are paying to the allied countries are finding their way to America in form of war debts they have to pay your country. Therefore the allies, especially France, is not willing to abandon their claim for reparations, if the United States does not at the same time wipe out the same amount of war debt your country is to claim from them.

"It is, of course, a difficult task for your statesmen to tell the people that it will be better for them at the end to renounce war debts in order to inaugurate a commercial boom. I am sure that if your country could be brought to take upon itself the big sacrifice of the renunciation of all war debts it would mean at first higher taxes for every one of your countrymen, but it would mean at the same time the re-establishment of prosperity to everybody.

"In our country spirits have fallen to a very low level, and most of the people despair of the wisdom of all those which are responsible for the leadership and for the welfare of all the people and nations all over the world. . . . It may be that I am painting in too dark colors, and I shall be only too pleased if the further development proves I was wrong; yet I cannot help thinking that the world is approaching an abyss. . . ."

CANADIAN FLIERS OFFER CHINESE AID

end of March have been decorated for war services. Over 90 per cent of the flying personnel are war-time pilots and the distinguished flying cross, the air force cross, the distinguished conduct medal and the military medal are proudly worn on many a breast in this strange little coterie of fighters with no one to fight for.

They read of the war in the east—of Japan's bombers pouring death from the skies at Chapei, of Japanese machine gunners in scout planes raking infantry columns from the safety of the air, and every news despatch illustrated the futility of Chinese courage on the ground against dashing Japanese skill in the air.

China needed airmen—and here were 500 of them who needed an employer. The conclusion was obvious and within two days the Chinese consul general here had received an offer of two air squadrons, tried in war and fire, ready to dare the finest that Japan has to offer.

"We do not feel that we are mercenaries," said one spokesman. "Flying and fighting in the air is our career. If an engineer or scientist is denied the right to serve his own country, he turns elsewhere. That is what we are doing. We are airmen and if our own country doesn't need us, China does.

"There we will get lots of flying. We will have foes worthy of our mettle and, with it all, we will still have that feeling that we are helping an underdog, defending the weak against the strong.

"With China grounded and Japan in the air, the latter is gambling for prodigious stakes with loaded dice. We want to make it fair."

This opinion, evidently echoed the sentiments in the hearts of many flying men in Canada. Scarcely had the news from Ottawa flashed over the wires when offers of service poured in from all parts of Canada.

DRY LAW REPEAL URGED BY SMITH

Former Governor Urges Democrats To Adopt Wet Platform.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(UP)—A plank calling for repeal of the eighteenth amendment in the democratic party's 1932 platform was urged today by Alfred E. Smith in a speech before the weekly forum of the National Democratic Club.

Smith described President Hoover as "the dry leader of the nation," and declared that the American people will not tolerate a last-minute reversal of policy on the part of the republican party.

"Relief," he shouted, "if it is to come, can only come through the agency of the democratic party. There's no use looking to the republicans. The public will not tolerate any eleventh-hour, any deathbed confession. The republicans have had 12 years to settle this question. They have ducked and dodged and hid behind lamp posts in one of the greatest examples of political hypocrisy ever written into history."

The former governor's speech, which though broadcast by a nation-wide chain of radio stations, was delivered in a small room packed to capacity with members of the club and was concerned wholly with prohibition.

"In case," he said, "that any mistaken notion exists, I want to say that I am personally still for repeal."

This statement brought a storm of applause, as did frequent bitter arraignments of the republicans, both in New York and in the national capital.

President Hoover, he declared, became the dry leader of the nation when he received the Wickersham report and "rejected the only good thing in it—the suggestion for a new constitutional amendment."

"To say that prohibition isn't an issue is stupid," Smith said, " and I believe the men who say it do not believe it."

He described himself as being amused at talk that the south is dry. "The south isn't dry," he declared. "The south's leaders are dry, but the people are wet." He quoted returns in the Literary Digest prohibition poll to substantiate this statement.

WET BLOC IS SEEKING TO FORCE DRY LAW VOTE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(UP) House "wet bloc" leaders are getting down strictly to individual cases in their attempt to round up the few signatures still necessary to force a vote on resubmission of the eighteenth amendment.

After a three-day campaign, their petition on Speaker Garner's desk was still 18 short tonight of the 145 names needed to bring before the house the Beck-Linchicum proposal which would modify the eighteenth amendment to let the states determine whether they want liquor.

Every vote now counts, and the anti-prohibitionists were busy today button-holing prospects and using their best persuasive manner. There arose the possibility that the house may be treated to the spectacle of sick members being brought into the chamber on stretchers to scrawl their names on the petition. Four known and avowed members of the "wet bloc" are in the hospital.

DEPAUL STUDENTS STRAWS AS OPPOSED TO DRY LAW

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—(UP)—Colonel Ira L. Reeves, west-central division manager of the Crusaders, anti-prohibition organization, said today that a series of straw-vote surveys is being made, and that the first shows DePaul University students overwhelmingly opposed to the eighteenth amendment.

U. S. CHINESE RAISE FUNDS FOR "WAR"

in New York, for the first time in local history, will hold a "dragon dance" in the streets of Chinatown to collect funds.

In San Francisco, thousands of dollars are being raised by Chinese contributing a portion of their incomes to the war chest. Chinese in Hartford, Conn., are doing the same. In Washington, D. C., the Chinese waiters are contributing one day's income each week. Other Chinese in the nation's capital are contributing funds as well.

Ten young Chinese waiters and laundry workers have begun taking lessons in flying at the Midwest airport in Wilwaukee. Six of them will be sent to China. Four are alternates. Three have already completed 20 hours of solo flying and are awaiting private pilots' licenses. Three others will be ready for tests next week. Their training is being financed by the Chinese Patriotic Society, which, in addition, is sending funds regularly to China.

The Chinese tongs in Cleveland have united with Chinese in Buffalo and Syracuse, N. Y., in the purchase of eight fighting airplanes, which will be sent to Shanghai as soon as possible.

In Chicago, where the Chinese are perhaps better organized from a national standpoint than anywhere else in America, a mass meeting will be held Saturday night to raise funds for a two-month aviation course at the Curtis-Reynolds airport for a corps of 35 young Chinese fliers, who will be sent to China as soon as sufficiently trained.

Several young Chinese are training as aviators at the Charlotte (N. C.) air school for service abroad.

In addition to funds being collected by Chinese societies and business firms everywhere, a definite Chinese boycott of Japanese goods is in effect from coast to coast. Cleveland Chinese refuse to buy Japanese sea foods and have formed a boycott society, which 600 Chinese have already joined.

Burial money accumulated over 20 and 30 years is being donated by the Detroit Chinese to the war chest. This money, according to Harry Chong, Detroit Chinese leader, is saved by every Chinese immigrant so he may be buried in China.

In Kansas City, a petition started by President Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University, advocating the boycott of Japanese goods, obtained 1,000 signatures in a few hours today.

Chinese from Tampico, Mexico, San Francisco and Indianapolis have made reservations at the Parks Air College, East St. Louis, Mo., and will arrive for training shortly.

A movement has been started by Chinese leaders to correlate all aviation activity so that when the fliers are trained in various parts of the country they will all come together as one huge air corps for use against the Japanese.

Bank Robbed.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—An unmasked bandit locked the cashier, president and the latter's son in the vault of the Bank of Port Tampa at that village today, and escaped with the available currency. James G. Yeates, the president, said the loss, about $3,500, was covered by insurance.

Russia in Transition

No. 20—FOOD FOR FOREIGNERS

One of the street markets in Moscow on a busy afternoon.

BY RAYMOND P. BRANDT.
(Copyright by St. Louis Post-Dispatch and Distributed by Central Press.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Feb. 27.—To be certain of getting adequate food in Russia the traveler should carry his own supplies, especially if he intends to stay any length of time or to make a tour of the country. Soviet economy and the facilities of the state tourist agency have not yet advanced far enough to provide the visiting foreigner with satisfying western meals.

Fair food is easily obtainable in Moscow, Leningrad and Rostov. In the provinces, unless one travels under the auspices of the state tourist agency, one can't be certain of anything except tea, black bread, fish, cabbage and cucumbers. The tourist agency gives its clients plenty of bulk but not much variety.

Tourists are allowed to bring in duty free supplies for their personal use. These should by all means include plenty of canned fruits and meats, a thermos bottle, a small alcohol stove and powdered coffee or cocoa. The writer's most closely guarded food was a 16-pound tin of powdered malted milk, the gift of a travel-wise colleague in Berlin.

Meat and Fish a Problem.

Foreigners are usually housed in one of four Moscow hotels, the Grand, the Savoy, the Europa and the Metropole. Breakfast, consisting of eggs, a fruit compote, tea and white bread and butter, must be taken at the hotel. The compote should be carefully inspected for worms. For other meals the experienced tourist goes to the Metropole, unless traveling under the tourist agency, in which case he usually is sent to the Grand for specially prepared group meals. Even at the Metropole the diners occasionally bring their own canned goods to the table to supplement the regular menu.

One of the first things a tourist learns about eating in Russia is that a cutlet is not a western cutlet but is ground up meat. If one is suspicious of sausage in the United States one won't be any too pleased with the Russian variety. Another thing quickly learned is that one portion of almost any dish will serve two persons.

The large hotel restaurants throughout Russia naturally specialize in caviar, both fresh and pressed, but fish itself presents a problem for the tourist. He must decide for himself how much faith he can put in the Russian refrigerating facilities.

The lack of drinking water throughout the union is a much more serious problem. In the large cities two excellent mineral waters are obtainable, Narzan and Borshom, either of which will compare favorably with American or European waters. Both are expensive—the writer averaged $3 a day for water in Moscow until he learned that Narzan could be bought more reasonably at the store for foreigners—and in many cities unobtainable.

Train travelers are somewhat protected by the station "kipyatoks," tanks of boiling or boiled water, but these are not in working order every place. There is also danger of being told that water has been boiled when it has not. The consequence is apt to be considerable discomfort for a week.

Good Water a Scarcity.

Russian substitutes for water leave much to be desired. Russian beer is flat and is rarely cold. Citro, a sweet synthetic lemonade, will not quench thirst. Wines are expensive and not always obtainable. Vodka is like dynamite—one needs experience to handle it. The Russians are strong for kvass, a slightly alcoholic sweet beverage made with black bread. In the Ural regions the natives drink koumiss, fermented mare's milk, which tastes like very strong buttermilk. It is said to be good for anemia but most Americans would have to be fairly well gone to be able to make a steady drink of it. In the long run, the best substitute is tea, which is obtainable in all restaurants and on most trains.

In traveling about Russia it would be possible but difficult to "live off the country." The buffets at the railroad stations usually have tea, black bread, boiled cabbage and fish on sale for those who can show railroad tickets, and at the small stations the peasants meet the train with berries, melons, eggs, rye bread, cottage cheese, milk and—very rarely—whole baked chickens. All these are not available at one station but several items usually are.

Prices for these foods are exorbitant if the rouble is figured at par. When white bread was available it cost a rouble—50 cents—for a small roll. A handful of wild raspberries cost a rouble and a watermelon, the size of a honey dew, cost two roubles. Eggs, raw or hard-boiled, cost about 15 cents each. At Samara, the writer and guide paid a rouble for three raw eggs at the local market for immediate consumption without salt. One was bad but there was no replacement or refund. On the Black sea boat peaches were offered at what amounted to a dollar a pound. Two portions of butter at a Babu hotel cost 2.50 roubles, but it was real butter.

High Cost of Food.

At Tiflis a Russian recommended a small place as "the best restaurant in town." We tried it, hoping to get a real plate of sharshlick, a lamb dish for which Georgia is famous. For two portions the charge was 13 roubles—$6.50. In the states the meals would cost $1 at the most. When protests were made, the waiter explained that the restaurant was a private concern and that taxes were enormous. The place, a cellar, smelled to high heaven.

Tourists traveling under the state tourist agency have specially prepared meals wherever they go. The general food situation was so undesirable that the writer joined with the agency clients wherever possible for meals. While there was plenty of pressed caviar at breakfast and lunch the other food ran pretty heavily to omelets, veal, macaroni and boiled potatoes—a fair diet for a short trip but apt to become tiresome if continued.

Foreigners living in Russia talk about food a great deal and have trouble in getting what they want. Many have tourist friends bring in canned goods, and others apparently have a diplomatic pipeline. The American women can do wonders with these raw materials and the results are excellent—for Russia.

The government and the state tourist agency are trying to attract more tourists to Russia by improving conditions. The best cooks and waiters in Moscow were recruited for the Metropole hotel. The Savoy and the Grand give weekly dances that last far into the morning. The Metropole has a resplendent gypsy choir several times a week.

In a Russian Bar.

The Metropole is the edge on the other hotels on two counts—its comparatively good food and its new bar, which is to the Moscow foreign element what the Adlon bar is to Berlin and the Ritz bar to Paris. The place has been given a specious British air by the presence of three well-dressed women — perhaps the best-dressed Russians in Moscow—behind the bar. One is a blonde, another is a brunet and the third is red-haired. Only occasionally do they mix drinks, and then only the simplest. Their job is to talk to the customers. The bartender, who probably was selected because of his linguistic rather than mixing ability, scorns a cocktail shaker and stirs up his concoctions in a glass.

The bar offers a wide range of choices, including the best foreign liquors and liqueurs, at reasonable prices. Whisky is 35 cents a drink, with soda 55 cents. Bronx and Manhattan cocktails fetch 35 cents and champagne cocktails 70 cents. To the Americans it is ironically amusing that ice cream sodas also cost 70 cents.

STATE CANDIDATES TAKE FIELD EARLY

Prospects of January Office Taking Speed Activity of Job Seekers.

BY R. E. POWELL.

Prospects of a change in the date for convening the session of the general assembly and the time for inaugurating the governor and state house officers whose terms are concurrent with that of the chief executive have hastened the biennial start of candidates in the legislative free-for-all.

Along with the favorable chances for adoption of the constitutional amendment which would bring the lawmakers together in January, 1933, instead of late June, is an early presidential preference primary, set for March 23, which now promises to be the pace-setter for state-house as well as legislative politics.

Opposition to Eugene Talmadge, commissioner of agriculture, and to William B. Harrison, comptroller general, is already in the field. Hamilton Ralls, of Troup county, would be head of the farm department, and Seward Smith, a former secretary of the highway commission, aspires to collect the state's ad valorem, gasoline and insurance taxes.

While at least one candidate, Ralls, has announced he will seek Talmadge's job, and another is being discussed, the militant commissioner is seriously considering offering for even higher honors. One of the most engaging questions at the capitol is whether he will be a candidate for United States senator or for governor of Georgia.

Sponsored by W. Cecil Neill, of Columbus, the last general assembly voted to submit, this fall, an amendment which, if approved by the people, would convene the legislature on the second Monday in January for a 10-day session. This would be, primarily, for the election of officers and for the selection of committees.

Thee same amendment would also change the time for inaugurating the governor from June until January and move up by six months the terms of the comptroller general, state treasurer, attorney-general and secretary of state. The term of Talmadge, who is not a constitutional officer, has been fixed by statue to begin in January following the general election.

Because of the potentially early gathering of the legislative clan, candidates for assembly honors, within the past week, have been shelling the woods to corral information about who is going to sit in the next legislature.

Probably the most significant development in this connection was the action of the fiftieth district senatorial committee last week in agreeing for each of the three counties, Clarke, Oglethorpe and Wilkes, to have the senator for two successive terms.

It was Oglethorpe's term to name the senator in 1931 and it named Hamilton McWhorter, who, although a first-term man, became a serious contender for the presidency of the upper house. It is understood that Oglethorpe will again name McWhorter and his legislative friends count him far out in front for the presidency next time.

On the house side, most of the discussion centers around whether Speaker Arlie D. Tucker, of Berrien, will choose to be a candidate to succeed himself or offer as a candidate for congress against Representative W. C. Lankford. If Tucker comes back, it is not certain he will be opposed for re-election as speaker. If he does not come back, there are at least half a dozen candidates anxious to preside over the house.

Most of the candidates for state house jobs and for legislative honors, will shy formal announcements until the presidential primary. After that, if signs still count for something, the political fur will begin to fly from Rabun Gap to Tybee light.

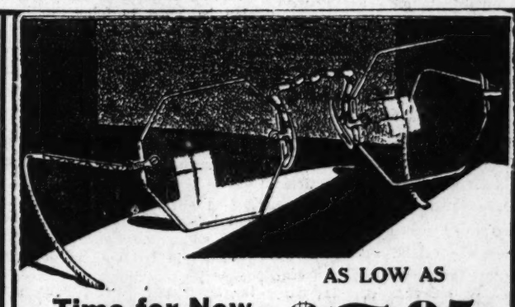

Third Party Appears In North Dakota

WILLISTON, N. D., Feb. 27.—(UP)—A third party appeared in North Dakota today under the sponsorship of the non-partisan league and on a platform built especially for the agricultural districts of the middle west.

Framers of the new party hope it will gather up all those discontented with the "regular" republicans and the democrats. They will draw its planks from those prepared by a committee appointed at the recent non-partisan convention.

The "regular" republicans will support Hoover for re-election, and the democrats will vote at the preference primary on March 15 whether to support Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, or Governor William H. Murray, of Oklahoma.

Whom the new party would support for president is undecided.

GEORGIA CITIES SLASH TAXATION

One Hundred and Seven Report Reduction in Levies for 1932.

One hundred and seven out of 411 cities and towns reporting to Comptroller General William B. Harrison reduced their 1931 taxes, which are now being paid.

The little town of Alma, slicing its millage from 20 to 8, topped the other municipalities in reducing local government expenses to the taxpayer.

Two smaller towns, Runger and Nicholson, had a one-mill levy in 1930 and retained it to hold the spotlight as the lowest city tax in Georgia.

Waycross, with an eight-mill cut, led among the larger cities in reducing operating cost. The city, with a 30-mill levy in 1930, was among the high tax towns in the state. This was cut to 22 mills. Among the cities of the Waycross calls, Albany and Thomasville had 3-mill reductions and Moultrie cut 2 mills.

Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah, Columbus, Macon, Athens, Rome, Tifton, Griffin, Brunswick and Cordele retained their levies of last year.

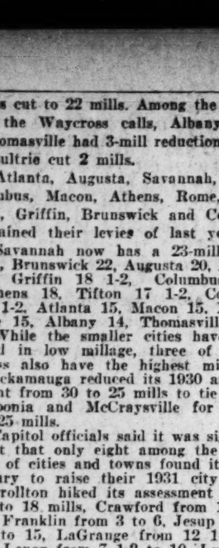

Savannah now has a 23-mill city tax, Brunswick 22, Augusta 20, Rome 20, Griffin 18 1-2, Columbus 18, Athens 18, Tifton 17 1-2, Cordele 17 1-2, Atlanta 15, Macon 15, Moultrie 15, Albany 14, Thomasville 14.

While the smaller cities have the lead in low millage, three of their class also have the highest millage. Chickamauga reduced its 1930 assessment from 30 to 25 mills to tie with Lubonia and McCraysville for high at 25 mills.

Capitol officials said it was significant that only eight among the long list of cities and towns found it necessary to raise their 1931 city tax. Carrollton hiked its assessment from 17 to 18 mills, Crawford from 11 to 12, Franklin from 3 to 6, Jesup from 14 to 15, LaGrange from 12 1-2 to 15, Lenox from 7 1-2 to 10, Lumber City from 5 to 7 and Cornelia from 19 to 22 1-2.

The range of reduction among the 107 cities and towns was from one-quarter of a mill to 12 mills. There were a large number that cut a single mill but the reductions generally were from 2 to 3 mills.

U. S. LOSES BATTLE IN DRY LAW CASES

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(AP)—The government today lost an important tilt in its fight to send scores of alleged bootleggers to the penitentiary on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Cancelled checks and other records seized in a cafe in June, 1930, and on which the government based a conspiracy indictment against 20 persons, were ordered returned to the cafe owners by District Judge Harry B. Anderson.

The records were obtained by special prohibition agents when they went to the cafe with a warrant charging Nelson McCary with selling liquor, and another warrant authorizing a search for liquor. Judge Anderson held that the search warrant did not give the agents the right to seize records in the cafe, and denied the government permission to impound the records pending an appeal.

GEORGIANS PROTEST DELAY IN SEED LOANS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—A delegation of southern congressional representatives, including Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia; Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, and Congressmen Larsen and Lankford, of Georgia, called at the department of agriculture today to protest against the delay of the government in affording seed loan relief under provisions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act.

Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of the extension work department, received the delegation and said that the rules of the department which now require farmers who wish to secure production loans to reduce their tobacco acreage as low as three acres would be so amended as to in no event require any farmer to plant less than four acres. Representative Lankford explained that the urgent need of this modification was called to his attention by W. R. Wilson, president of the Douglas Chamber of Commerce, who wired the Georgia member that tobacco barns are so constructed that there is great waste and unnecessary labor and expense if less than four acres of tobacco are planted by the farmer. Dr. Warburton also indicated that a liberalization of the rules might be made so as to include loans for producers of apples, peaches, truck produce, etc. He also assured the delegation that relief application blanks are now going out and will reach farmers of the south early in March and that a change in the rules might be made so that the maximum limit of loans to any one farmer would be increased from $1,600 to $2,500.

Dr. Warburton also explained that the secretary of agriculture was still considering the matter of establishing a branch office in the southeastern section of the country and that Atlanta or Columbia, S. C., probably would be selected.

Senator George told Dr. Warburton that the department's delay in sending out application blanks was causing untold embarrassment to the southern farmer in view of the fact that planting time was near at hand, and that if relief was to be given, quick action was essential.

"It is now a little over a month," said Senator George, "since the reconstruction finance bill was enacted into law, and it is high time the various departments of the corporation start functioning and do something to relieve stringent financial difficulties of our farmers."

Senator McGill, democrat, Kansas, said that rules fixed by the secretary of agriculture had rendered the $50,000,000 "impotent as an aid to the farming industry."

In a statement issued through the democratic national committee, he said the attitude of the administration toward agriculture was illuminated by limitations and other regulations surrounding the loans.

CIVIC GROUP BACKS TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE

Other Organizations and Firms Aid in Effort To Organize Voters.

The Ansley Park Civic League, through its secretary, J. Hope Tigner, Saturday night mailed letters to its 600 members urging their immediate enrollment in the Taxpayers' League "in an effort to effect good government now before 1932's tax burden is upon you."

Officials of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' Association, the Atlanta Builders' Exchange, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the Associated General Contractors of Georgia also took notice of the league when an officer of each organization called at the headquarters of the league, 52 Broad street, to secure literature and application blanks for members of their organizations.

Further evidence of co-operation came to G. M. Stout, acting executive secretary of the league, in offers from numerous sources to display cards advertising the league. Rogers stores secured cards for display in all their places of business. The General Outdoor Advertising Company, through Russell Fay, branch manager, donated billboard space for 150 three-sheet posters.

Mr. Tigner's letter stated that "your city, county and state present governments feel the need of more taxes with which to carry on a wild, reckless expenditure of the people's money for what the professional politicians calls 'efficient' government. It is up to the individual citizen taxpayer to take counsel with his fellow taxpayer and check up on who is spending your tax dollar, and for what purpose, and how 'efficiently' it is spent."

With more than 1,500 already enrolled in the league, plans were being perfected Saturday for an intensive and concentrated drive for additional members. It was stated that members of the organization committee desire to perfect a permanent organization at an early date and hope through this drive to secure at least 5,000 members before this is done so that as large a representation of voters as possible will have an active voice in the election of the league's officers.

Edgar Neely, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the league, who is assisted by John Candler II, as secretary, Saturday announced that formation of the bureau had progressed to the state where speakers could now be supplied upon request, but the bureau would like as much advance notice as possible. Requests should be sent to Mr. Candler, in the Palmer building.

John P. Stewart, chairman of the committee appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws to be submitted to the membership for ratification, stated that he is studying the experience of organizations of taxpayers in other cities and that in nearly every section of the country voters are forming associations to promote good government.

McCormick, who claims to be the country's oldest drummer, will celebrate his eighty-ninth birthday tomorrow and will be back on the job the first of next week.

Lack of Funds To Improve School Buildings, Equipment Makes Voting of $700,000 County Bond Issue Necessity

Antiquated equipment of many Fulton county schools seen on a survey last week of a number of the institutions revealed the great need of improvements to come from a proposed bond issue of $700,000 to be voted on March 9. At the upper left is shown the Hammond school, where an ancient two-story frame building, dark and uncomfortable, houses many students with an ever-present threat of fire. In the upper right picture, children of the Guinn school on Roswell road, are huddled about an old "country store" stove for warmth against chill winter blasts which come in through broad cracks. Students at Hammond school are shown in the lower left picture descending a make-shift fire escape. A view of the obsolete school building at Bolton is shown at the lower right. Staff photos by Sandy Sanders.

BY BEN COOPER.

Features of the little red schoolhouse of bygone days, outlowed by modern trends in education and health, persist in many schools of the Fulton county system because of the lack of sufficient funds to improve buildings and equipment.

The necessity of floating a $700,000 bond issue, which would be retired over a period of 15 years from the capital outlay taxes now given to the county schools without further increasing the tax rate, was clearly seen on a visit to some of the schools last week.

At Liberty Hill school, a two-room building, where an ancient stove caught fire to the woodwork last year, students drink with the aid of a bucket from an old well inadequately protected by a wooden cover. Most of the other schools in the remote sections of the county are served by wells, though in some cases the holes have been covered and pumps installed.

In the majority of the county grammar schools heating arrangements are menacing as well as inefficient. Old stoves of the "pot-bellied" type scorch the nearer students and freeze those in the corners of the rooms, and frequently overheated woodwork catches fire.

Sanitary arrangements of many county schools are unsatisfactory and threaten the health of the students, but nothing can be done to remedy the situation unless bond money is made available.

Old desks, uncomfortable in design, have been replaced in only a few instances with modern equipment, and it was only last year that the system managed to replace finally its antique double desks.

Old buildings of the system are about to go to pieces. At Bolton school, for instance, large holes and cracks have appeared in the stucco-type walls, giving access to rain and wind and hastening the work of destruction. A happy contrast, showing what bond money will mean to the system, was seen at the school on Venetian drive, where a modern, well-equipped building has replaced the antiquated wooden structure.

The West Haven school on Hightower road is typical of the county institutions which need replacement. Built on a sharp rise close to the highway, the schoolhouse has a playground full of rocks ready to stump little toes. A dangerous set of stairs at the rear of the school building daily threaten the lives of children, and in bad weather students have no protection in moving from the main building to a portable in the rear.

Jere A. Wells, superintendent of the county schools, said that if the bond issue is successful, many bad features of the county schools will be eliminated, and Fulton county children will be able to obtain an education under satisfactory conditions.

"It is alarming that our children face so many hazards in their daily schooling, and this condition should be corrected at once with the provision of modern buildings and equipment," Mr. Wells said. "Correction of the county school deficiencies will require many years by using the capital outlay of each year, but by issuing bonds and retiring them with the capital outlay we can make the improvements now and pay for them while the children are receiving the benefits."

NORMAN THOMAS HITS HOOVER AID PROGRAM

Socalist Leader Also Denounces Senate for Not Aiding Unemployed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for president in 1928, branded Hoover's financial program "unsound" and "short-sighted" today when he spoke at a luncheon of the League for Industrial Democracy.

He also called the rejection by the senate of direct federal aid for the unemployed "a crime of the first magnitude" and said that the senate was "doubtless following Hoover's wishes."

"The Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation was not introduced until wages had been forced down and labor thoroughly defaulted, both by wage cuts and unemployment," he said. "Then, help was provided for railroads, banks and industrial enterprises.

"But no stipulations were made that the corporations aided should wring water out of their capitalization or hold up wage levels, or give the public a voice in the management of enterprises the public was forced to save.

"The so-called Hoover program is classical proof of the class nature of our government, of economic interest so short-sighted that it even gives us bad economics."

Consecration of Mission Group To Feature Methodist Session

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.

The peak of popular interest in the program of the Woman's Missionary Council, to be held here March 9-15, will be reached at the evening service Monday, March 14, at Wesley Memorial church, when 32 young women who have been accepted as candidates for home and foreign mission work will be consecrated according to the familiar Methodist ritual and be assigned to their respective fields of labor. Of the 32 young women to be consecrated, 11 will engage in foreign work exclusively, while 21 will devote themselves to home and foreign work.

The special consecration service will be held at the Wesley Memorial Methodist church at the time stated. It is said this particular service will be attended by several thousand spectators, requiring a larger auditorium than that afforded by the St. Mark Methodist church, where all the other services connected with the Missionary Council meeting will be held, beginning Wednesday night, March 9.

Bishop John M. Moore, president of the North Georgia conference, will deliver the consecration address and dedicate the workers. Special music will mark the occasion. Mrs. Boone Moss Bowen, of Atlanta, a former missionary to Japan, will read the scripture passages and offer the invocation. The new workers themselves also will play an active part in the service, as they will be given opportunity to give brief talks explaining their calls to service, and the special reasons for selecting their fields of work. Mrs. J. W. Perry, president of the Missionary Council, of Nashville, will present the candidates for consecration.

List of Candidates.

Mrs. Hume R. Steele, of Nashville, secretary of candidate work, furnishes the names of the 32 candidates for consecration, most of whom are members of the senior class of Scarritt College for Christian Workers, at Nashville. The full list of candidates to be consecrated as deaconesses for home and foreign work is as follows:

Miss Mary Josephine Carpenter, Madison, Va.; Miss Mary Humphrey Carter, Woodlawn, Ky.; Miss Margaret Amelia Cornett, Marion, Va.; Miss Elizabeth Covington, Clio, S. C.; Miss Johnia Frances Dodson, Ravenscroft, Tenn.; Miss Sara Estelle Fernandez, Tampa, Fla.; Miss Leona Belle Giles, Brevard, N. C.; Miss Eunice Glenn, Richland, Ga.; Miss Evelyn Elizabeth Holmberg, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Miss Annabelle M. Johnson, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Miss Katherine Lorena Kelly, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Miss Pearlye Maye Kelly, Newnan, Ga.; Miss Alpharetta Verna Leeper, Muskogee, Okla.; Miss Clarice Leone Lemons, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Mary Beth Littlejohn, Pacolet, S. C.; Miss Dorothy Lorena Lundy, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Felicidad Mendez, Fort Worth, Texas; Miss Shiela Elizabeth Nuttall, Shreveport, La.; Miss Lucille Elanore Robinson, Bonne Terre, Mo.; Miss Anna Mae Taylor, Crossville, Tenn.; Miss Ollie L. Willings, Waco, Texas.

Young women who will be consecrated as foreign missionaries exclusively, and the fields to which they will probably be assigned, are as follows:

Miss Margie Louise Avett, of Norwood, N. C., to China; Miss Thelma Juanita Colvin, of Ennis, Texas, to Japan; Miss Elizabeth Palmer DeLoache, of Camden, S. C., to China; Miss Leannie Beulah Hubbard, of Wheeler, Texas, to Mexico; Miss Juanita Margaret Kelly, of Augusta, Ga., to Cuba; Miss Lillian Mildred Maxfield, of Muskegon, Mich., to Brazil; Miss Alma Frances Metcalfe, of Decatur, Ga., to Japan; Miss Margaret Poteet Pilley, of Greenwood, S. C., to China; Miss Annie Clyde Price, of Waco, Texas, to China; Miss Mary Alberta Tarr, of Nashville, Tenn., to Japan; Miss Hester Dale West, of Floydada, Texas, to China.

The annual session of the Woman's Missionary Council, assembling in Atlanta for the 22d meeting March 9-15, will bring to Atlanta some 350 of the leading churchwomen of Southern Methodism. Additional visitors to the number of several thousand are expected to attend the gathering. Railroads have granted reduced fares on the certificate basis. Atlanta Methodists have opened their homes for the entertainment of official delegates. The Atlanta Biltmore hotel has been designated as official headquarters. In addition to the accredited delegates coming from some 22 states of the Southern Methodist church, there will be a score or more coming from foreign lands.

Study on Program.

The tentative program indicates a special study by missionary women, not only of missionary work, but also various features demanding attention at this period. Studies of industrial relations, rural development, international relationships, world peace are noted as themes for special study.

In addition to the officials of the Missionary Council, who will deliver messages, a number of eminent workers have been secured for special addresses. Dr. Paul B. Kellogg, of New York, editor of the Survey, will speak on "Want in the Midst of Plenty;" Dr. Fletcher Brockman, of New York, will speak on "Missions and the World Today;" Dr. Luther A. Weigle, of the Yale University divinity school, will speak on "The Coming Revival;" Dr. Forney Hutchinson, of Oklahoma City, will deliver a series of meditational addresses; Dr. E. C. Peters, of Augusta, will speak on "The Work of Paine College." Bishop Warren A. Candler and Bishop John M. Moore also will be heard on the program.

Foreigners who will appear on the program are Miss Helen Hodgson,

Wife Was Fat
No Longer Attractive
Lost Husband's Love

The above headlines appeared in a New York newspaper of April 4 in connection with a divorce trial that has attracted wide attention.

"She was a beautiful woman," one witness testified, "but she got fat and is not attractive any more."

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do.

If you are fat how would you like to lose it and at the same time gain in physical charm and acquire a clean, clear skin and eyes that sparkle with buoyant health?

And gain in energy and activity?

Why not do what thousands of women have done to get rid of pounds of unwanted fat? Take one half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and keep it up for 30 days. You can help the action of Kruschen by cutting down on pastry and fatty meats and going light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar. Then weigh yourself and see how many pounds you have lost.

Kruschen Salts are a blend of 6 mineral salts most helpful to body health. Best of all, a bottle of Kruschen Salts that will last you for 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Ask Jacobs Pharmacy or any druggist for a bottle and start to lose fat today.

Its the safe way to reduce but be sure you get Kruschen—your health comes first and remember this if you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.—(adv.)

BANKING MEASURE SIGNED BY HOOVER

President Thanks Members of Both Parties for Aid in Enacting Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Hailing the Glass-Steagall credit expansion bill as a "national defense measure" capable of placing the resources of the federal reserve banks beyond any conceivable raid from at home or abroad, President Hoover late today signed it into law.

Immediately after affixing his signature, the president issued a statement in its praise. He coupled appreciation for the non-partisan action upon it with a plea for a continuation of the submersion of politics in congress.

The chief executive was optimistic tonight over its effects. He saw in the bill's provisions for a theoretical credit expansion of $10,000,000,000 and a possible currency expansion of $3,500,000,000. A direct bombardment upon the credit corporation, he believes, has partially barred the path to economic recovery.

End to Hoarding.

Believing the series of more than a score of economic blows from abroad have come to an end, the president feels that with the bill's controlled credit expansion and a turn in the tide of hoarding the ... will be an end of the conditions that have slowed agriculture, industry and commerce.

Highly technical in its provisions the bill provides that for one year, until March 3, 1933, member banks with a capitalization of less than $5,000,000 may rediscount paper not previously eligible. It will open new credit chrannels to all but 62 of the 7,600 member banks of the federal reserve system.

Groups of five member banks may enjoy these special rediscount privileges permanently beyond the one-year limit.

Officials have estimated that approximately $750,000,000 in gold now used as backing for currency above the 40 per cent requirement will be released by the measure. Under it government obligations may be used as backing for new currency.

Hoover's Statement.

The president's statement follows in full:

"In signing this bill, which comprises an essential part of the reconstruction program, I desire to express my appreciation to the leaders and members of both senate and house of both parties, who have co-operated in its enactment. The fine spirit of patriotic non-partisanship shown in carrying out the emergency program is, I know, appreciated by the whole country.

"The bill should accomplish two major purposes.

"First. In a sense, this bill is a national defense measure. By freeing the vast amounts of gold in our federal reserve system (in excess of the gold reserve required by law), it so increases the already large available resources of the federal reserve banks as to enable them beyond question to meet any conceivable demands that might be made on them at home or from abroad.

"Second. It liberalizes existing provisions with regard to eligibility of collateral and thereby enables the federal reserve banks to furnish accommodations to many banks on sound assets heretofore inavailable for rediscount purposes.

Cause of Depression.

"The gradual credit contraction during the past eight months, arising indirectly from causes originating in foreign countries and continued domestic deflation, but more directly from hoarding, has been unquestionably the major factor in depressing prices and delaying business recovery.

"The measure I am signing today, together with the additional capital provided for the federal land banks and the creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will so strengthen our whole credit structure and open the channels of credit as now to permit our banks more adequately to serve the needs of agriculture, industry and commerce.

"I trust that our banks with the assurances and facilities now provided will reach out to aid business and industry in such fashion as to increase employment and aid agriculture.

"I am confident that the further non-partisan measures of reconstruction to assist the earlier payment of depositors in closed banks, to apply rigid economy in government expenditures, to balance the budget, to reform railway regulation, etc., will be dealt with by the congress in the same spirit of co-operation that these great questions have already received."

COUNTY ARRANGES SECOND BIG LOAN

Finances for Operating Expenses for Year Are Assured by Deal.

With a final loan of $1,000,000 obtained on Saturday morning, and with an additional loan of $1,100,000 obtained last Thursday, George F. Longino, chairman of the finance committee of the Fulton county board of roads and revenue, will report to the board at its meeting next Wednesday afternoon that the county's operating expenses for 1932 are financially assured, and will back this assertion by placing the $2,100,000 in the county treasury.

Both loans were obtained through the Trust Company of Georgia and Robinson-Humphrey Company, stated Mr. Longino, after the county had been given the cold shoulder in New York city by bankers there. The New York bankers informed Mr. Longino that the county's audit showed it more than a good risk but that they had application from 3,000 other counties for loans and should they make one they would have to serve all, which they could not do.

Mr. Longino came back to Atlanta and negotiated the loans, completing the last one Saturday morning. The entire amount will be paid into the county vaults next Wednesday, March 2, and will be due on December 31. The bank authorities have informed Mr. Longino that the tax anticipation notes will be sold locally and that they have already found a ready market for the securities. Local holders of the securities will receive 5 1-2 per cent on their investment.

"The local bankers came to our aid because they knew the county was being operated on a conservative financial basis," said Mr. Longino, "and it is the most gratifying thing of it all to me, that local people will get the benefit of the transaction instead of Wall Street. All of the money will be circulated locally and that is what will go a long way in striking at the depression, at least in Fulton county."

Life Serene at Fifty, Says Geraldine Farrar

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Geraldine Farrar, the tall beauty of the golden voice, is content to be fifty.

Just a little family party with a birthday cake at her Ridgefield, Conn., home will herald her turn into middle-age tomorrow.

"Why should I mind?" she asked today. "I have had so much. My life has been so rich; it has had so many facets and so many categories. It has been a succession of high moments, and I have tried to keep the pattern perfect.

"I have no respect for those modern women who cling so pitifully to youth, spend their time in beauty shops or in dimly-lit rooms so that they may hang on to its illusions. It seems to me to be unimportant. Life should be dignified and suitable."

Free Thinkers Will Seek Ritual For Burial of Agnostics, Atheists

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 27.—(UP) Members of the Southwestern Rationalist Association, which opposes the Christian religion, today expressed the need for a non-Christian ritual which may be used at the burial of men who doubt the existence of God. Plans for this new service were announced after the funeral of one of the association's members.

Albert A. Voruz, free thinker, had asked in his will that "no preacher or any ecclesiastic of any cult or religion of any kind whatsoever shall be allowed to officiate at my funeral, but that the services of an agnostic or atheist be secured if available."

The service conducted by members of the association contained no religious music, no burning tapers, no prayers, no preachers. Instead, T. A. Hutchins, snowy-haired honorary president of the Rational Association, read a service that may form the basis of future rationalist funerals.

"It matters not what one believes or hopes for after death," Hutchins read. "We come upon the stage of life enveloped in mystery, play our part as destiny decrees and pass away in like mystery.

"We receive the gift of consciousness and we lose it. These events form the bounds of man's information. Believe what we will, hope for what we may, knowledge still eludes the search of man."

It was pointed out that H. L. Mencken, editor, on several occasions, has decried the absence of a suitable funeral ceremony for those who hold no belief in God.

MOTOR CLUB TO OPEN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

With more than 150 volunteer workers divided into three competing groups, a two-week campaign of the Atlanta Motor Club to enroll 500 new members will be launched at a dinner of officials, directors and workers of the club to be held at the Henry Grady hotel Monday night at 6:30 o'clock, it was announced by Goodloe Yancey, president of the club.

In announcing the campaign, Mr. Yancey pointed out that the Atlanta Motor Club, which is affiliated and exchanges courtesies with more than 1,000 other similar clubs, is a strictly non-profit organization not only offering many services to members, but which also is engaged in many activities of benefit to the general public as well.

He detailed numerous direct services to members and listed legislative activities, safety work, highway improvement efforts and travel information services of the club and among many endeavors, making it deserving of the support of the general public.

The workers will be assigned equally to the red division, the blue division, and a third group, composed of women, to be known as the gold division, it was announced by Russell R. Whitman, chairman of the membership campaign committee. Robert P. McLarty will be colonel of the red division, Carlton Y. Smith, colonel of the blue division and Mrs. Russell R. Whitman, colonel of the gold division.

Members of the membership committee include Mr. Whitman, chairman; Goodloe Yancey, C. L. Emerson, Robert McLarty, Jere A. Wells, B. C. Broyles and B. C. Miller.

Present plans call for an extensive campaign of two weeks, in which time it is hoped to exceed the quota of 500 new members. It will be necessary for the club to enroll at least that number if the extensive campaign, which has been outlined for the club this year is to be accomplished, according to Mr. Yancey.

BANKING MEASURE SIGNED BY HOOVER

President Thanks Members of Both Parties for Aid in Enacting Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Hailing the Glass-Steagall credit expansion bill as a "national defense measure" capable of placing the resources of the federal reserve banks beyond any conceivable raid from at home or abroad, President Hoover late today signed it into law.

Immediately after affixing his signature, the president issued a statement in its praise. He coupled appreciation for the non-partisan action upon it with a plea for a continuation of the submersion of politics in congress.

The chief executive was optimistic tonight over its effects. He saw in the bill's provisions for a theoretical credit expansion of $10,000,000,000 and a possible currency expansion of $3,500,000,000. A direct bombardment upon the credit corporation, he believes, has partially barred the path to economic recovery.

End to Hoarding.

Believing the series of more than a score of economic blows from abroad have come to an end, the president feels that with the bill's controlled credit expansion and a turn in the tide of hoarding there will be an end of the conditions that have slowed agriculture, industry and commerce.

Highly technical in its provisions the bill provides that for one year, until March 3, 1933, member banks with a capitalization of less than $5,000,000 may rediscount paper not previously eligible. It will open new credit chrannels to all but 62 of the 7,600 member banks of the federal reserve system.

Groups of five member banks may enjoy these special rediscount privileges permanently beyond the one-year limit.

Officials have estimated that approximately $750,000,000 in gold now used as backing for currency above the 40 per cent requirement will be released by the measure. Under it government obligations may be used as backing for new currency.

Hoover's Statement.

The president's statement follows in full:

"In signing this bill, which comprises an essential part of the reconstruction program, I desire to express my appreciation to the leaders and members of both senate and house of both parties, who have co-operated in its enactment. The fine spirit of patriotic non-partisanship shown in carrying out the emergency program is, I know, appreciated by the whole country.

"The bill should accomplish two major purposes.

"First. In a sense, this bill is a national defense measure. By freeing the vast amounts of gold in our federal reserve system (in excess of the gold reserve required by law), it so increases the already large available resources of the federal reserve banks as to enable them beyond question to meet any conceivable demands that might be made on them at home or from abroad.

"Second. It liberalizes existing provisions with regard to eligibility of collateral and thereby enables the federal reserve banks to furnish accommodations to many banks on sound assets heretofore inavailable for rediscount purposes.

Cause of Depression.

"The gradual credit contraction during the past eight months, arising indirectly from causes originating in foreign countries and continued domestic deflation, but more directly from hoarding, has been unquestionably the major factor in depressing prices and delaying business recovery.

"The measure I am signing today, together with the additional capital provided for the federal land banks and the creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will so strengthen our whole credit structure and open the channels of credit as now to permit our banks more adequately to serve the needs of agriculture, industry and commerce.

"I trust that our banks with the assurances and facilities now provided will reach out to aid business and industry in such fashion as to increase employment and aid agriculture.

"I am confident that the further non-partisan measures of reconstruction to assist the earlier payment of depositors in closed banks, to apply rigid economy in government expenditures, to balance the budget, to reform railway regulation, etc., will be dealt with by the congress in the same spirit of co-operation that these great questions have already received."

MOTOR CLUB TO OPEN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

With more than 150 volunteer workers divided into three competing groups, a two-week campaign of the Atlanta Motor Club to enroll 500 new members will be launched at a dinner of officials, directors and workers of the club to be held at the Henry Grady hotel Monday night at 6:30 o'clock, it was announced by Goodloe Yancey, president of the club.

In announcing the campaign, Mr. Yancey pointed out that the Atlanta Motor Club, which is affiliated and exchanges courtesies with more than 1,000 other similar clubs, is a strictly non-profit organization not only offering many services to members, but which also is engaged in many activities of benefit to the general public as well.

He detailed numerous direct services to members and listed legislative activities, safety work, highway improvement efforts and travel information services of the club and among many endeavors, making it deserving of the support of the general public.

The workers will be assigned equally to the red division, the blue division, and a third group, composed of women, to be known as the gold division, it was announced by Russell R. Whitman, chairman of the membership campaign committee. Robert P. McLarty will be colonel of the red division, Carlton Y. Smith, colonel of the blue division and Mrs. Russell R. Whitman, colonel of the gold division.

Members of the membership committee include Mr. Whitman, chairman; Goodloe Yancey, C. L. Emerson, Robert McLarty, Jere A. Wells, B. C. Broyles and B. C. Miller.

Present plans call for an extensive campaign of two weeks, in which time it is hoped to exceed the quota of 500 new members. It will be necessary for the club to enroll at least that number if the extensive campaign, which has been outlined for the club this year is to be accomplished, according to Mr. Yancey.

21 COUNTY RACES IN HOME STRETCH

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Lines in the 21-cornered race for the seven contested positions for which 45,000 Fulton county voters will cast ballots in the March 9 primary were drawn tightly Saturday and the various aspirants laid plans for a whirlwind finish with only 10 days remaining before the verdict will be reached.

Indicative of the intensity and the seriousness with which the various candidates are taking the races and the vigor with which they are prosecuting their campaigns, 17 rallies were scheduled Saturday for the coming week.

Last week's activity ended Saturday when from four stumps the 21 candidates seeking the seven posts voiced bids for votes in the primary elections.

Hewitt W. Chambers, secretary of the Fulton county democratic executive committee, announced that the balloting will take place in 59 precincts scattered throughout the county.

He called special attention to several changes, saying there will be two precincts for the first time at Peachtree district; that seventh ward, precinct "A" will be divided into two boxes, "A" through "K" and "L" through "Z;" that the Buckhead precinct has been moved from its old location to the corner opposite the Fulton National bank, and that the College Park precinct has been moved to the building formerly occupied by the First National bank.

3 Races in Spotlight.

As the time for balloting neared, it was evident that the race for sheriff, clerk and tax receiver will continue to command the political spotlight, with the seven-cornered fight for the two posts as county commissioner being subordinated to the three departmental races.

Sheriff James L. Lowry, incumbent for the last 15 years, is fighting four opponents for his place for a fourth term. He is opposed by Cal Cates, Captain H. M. Patton, A. M. Corrie and Ben Daniel.

Several of the candidates Saturday issued campaign statements.

J. Walton Simmons, incumbent, and B. C. "Tut" Broyles are waging a heated campaign for the nomination as clerk. There have been several sharp exchanges of personalities.

Edwin F. Johnson, incumbent, and Guy A. Moore are fighting it out for the tax receiver's position, and in this race, too, there have been several tilts.

George F. Longino Jr., incumbent; George B. Lyle, W. A. Lynn, W. A. Jones, J. A. Ragsdale. Dr. A. H. Cochran and Ed Almand are waging drives for two vacancies on the commission.

Tax Collector W. S. Richardson is opposed by A. C. Minhinnett for renomination and interest is growing in this race.

Mrs. Mabel Abbott McNeill, incumbent; Mrs. Beulah Donehoo Mauston and R. H. Conway are engaged in a three-cornered tilt for treasurer.

Thursday night—Inman school at 7:30 o'clock, and Patton meeting at Fulton High and a Lowry meeting at Georgia Avenue schools beginning at 8 o'clock.

Friday Night—Highland school at 7:30 o'clock, and a Patton rally at Tenth Street and a Lowry meeting at Harris schools, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Saturday afternoon—A Lowry rally at Fairburn, beginning at 3 o'clock.

In addition, Lowry announced the following radio addresses by the following prominent Atlantans, who are taking the stump in behalf of the incumbent:

Wednesday night, March 2, from 7 to 7:15, station WSB, Judge Shepard Bryan, attorney and former judge of Fulton superior court.

Thursday night, March 3, from 6:30 to 6:45, station WJTL, William G. Grant, attorney and former president of Atlanta Lawyers' Club.

Friday night, March 4, from 9 to 9:15, station WGST, Herbert E. Choate, prominent businessman and foreman of several grand juries during Sheriff Lowry's service.

Saturday night, March 5, from 8:45 to 9, station WSB, Ivan E. Allen, president of Ivan Allen-Marshall Company, and civic leader.

Monday night, March 7, from 9 to 9:15, station WGST, Robert B. Troutman, of the law firm of Colquitt, Parker, Troutman & Arkwright.

Tuesday night, March 8, from 6 to 6:15, station WSB, William Schley Howard, prominent attorney.

Tuesday night, March 8, from 8:15 to 8:30, station WGST, George P. Whitman, attorney, city attorney of College Park.

Statement by Longino.

Longino issued the following statement:

"I am making my race for renomination solely on my record of constructive, efficient and faithful service. If the people of Fulton county re-elect me, it shall be my privilege to continue to serve their every interest and to administer the affairs of the county as I have in the past."

Lyle made the following statement:

"It is my desire to serve the people of Fulton county as their commissioner. I have a record of public service in the council of Atlanta and I invite close scrutiny of it. I am proud of the constructive measures I have championed and promise the people of Fulton county an efficient, economical and business-like administration of their affairs, co-operating with all sections."

Broyles made the following statement:

"Attention has been called, by some of my friends, to the fact that Judge Thomas designated a deputy clerk to hold certain funds and the inference was that this indicated a lack of confidence in the clerk.

"I am now informed that this designation was made at the suggestion of the lawyers in the case, and that there is no warrant for any conclusions that Judge Thomas lacked confidence in the clerk.

"In this connection I do not know that any of our judges lacked confidence in, nor do I believe that these gentlemen are taking any part whatsoever for or against the present clerk."

Cates Bids for Votes.

Headquarers of Cates made the following announcement:

"From the impetus gained by Mr. Cates' candidacy since he announced for sheriff, it is evident that the good people of the county approve of the high-type manner in which his campaign is being conducted.

"His friends have stressed the importance of an honest, efficient and sober personnel in the sheriff's office. They have consistently urged the merits of their candidate, not once stooping to disparage the characters of others in the race. They are endeavoring by all honest methods to bring the record of Cal Cates as a private citizen and as a public official to the attention of the voters.

"How well they have succeeded is apparent by the current comments to be heard in political circles, in homes, places of business and wherever serious-minded citizens gather. Today Cal Cates looms the strong man in the sheriff's face, because he began 39 years ago to build, in this county, a reputation for honesty, sobriety and integrity that we would all like to have but few of us can honestly claim.

"He has added to his other qualifications for sheriff experience gained by 14 years' service on the police force of Fulton county. A service that is marked by conscientious effort. The finger of suspicion has never been pointed toward Cal Cates. His friends attest this. The voters are learning it in sufficient numbers to assure him victory on March 9."

GAIN DAY

New Commander of Fourth Corps Stresses Relationship Between Army and Civilians

BY IDA FRANCES WING.

"A close relationship between the army and civilians is most desirable," said Major General Edward E. King, commanding general of the Fourth Corps area, Saturday in an interview which he graciously granted the writer in the midst of his busy day in his office in headquarters building at Fort McPherson.

Tall, dynamic, forceful, with the build of an athlete and the high forehead of the thinker, possessing a wholesome admiration for humanity and an ardent love of sports—such is the general.

Well versed in world affairs, a thorough knowledge of his profession, a brilliant conversationalist, he was most entertaining as he talked of army sports, relations with civilians, of his pet hobby, football, and his favorite mount, Proctor. Sitting at his desk, beneath pictures of past commanders of the corps, he emphasized his statements by emphatic gestures with his pipe. His character is one of strength and forcefulness coupled with a most enjoyable sense of humor expressed by sudden gleams of laughter in steel blue eyes and a contagious chuckle.

"In times of war it is toward the civil population that we must look for our national armies and an intimate and thorough understanding can do much toward perfecting a perfect whole," he continued, "it is a privilege for the army to come in contact with the civilians. Since I have arrived at the garrison I have been impressed with the cordiality of the south and everyone has been most gracious.

"Back in the old days of the army when officers and men were stationed in frontier posts in Indian-infested country there was, naturally, no opportunity to contact civilians. Travel was too hazardous and distances too great. The Spanish-American War with its call for volunteers and later the World War brought about a more intimate knowledge of the service. Civilians and regulars learned a healthy respect and admiration for each other and today there is true friendliness between the army and civil ranks."

Served in South.

This is not the first time that the general has served in the south, for in 1917 General King was chief of staff of the Twenty-eighth division with the rank of lieutenant colonel stationed at Augusta. It was there that he learned an admiration for southerners, for although he has the accent of a true Virginian, he is a native of New England, claiming Massachusetts as his own state. In Augusta, too, serving with him was a junior officer who won his high regard, for Major Clark Howell Jr. was also a member of the command.

Athletics are very near to the heart of General King, a perfect type of athlete himself, and he is a hearty advocate of sports for the men, especially football. Believing that this game requires more quick thinking, more test of skill, and perfect physical make-up, he places it first in development. And his information on this subject is first hand, for he captained the football squad of the United States Military Academy for two years prior to his graduation in 1896 and led his team in numerous victories. Today he is the senior officer in the army to have held that position.

In addition to his football hobby General King shares a love of other sports. He plays golf and was most enthusiastic over the Georgia-Georgia Tech basketball game, which was played in the auditorium Tuesday evening, declaring it to be one of the best exhibitions he had seen. Riding, too, claims his interest and is his favorite form of exercise during his holiday hours. Since my presentation to his magnificent mount, Proctor, a light bay gelding over 16 hands, I could readily understand his love of equitation. Stabled with General Pershing's string of mounts during the war, Proctor was one of the horses admitted to the army Olympic team and this beautiful Irish hunter gives a perfect performance over the hurdles and has a most lengthy pedigree. He was brought by the general from Fort Meyer, Va., when he came to Fort McPherson, to be his private mount.

General King possesses an array of medals and decorations which he modestly refuses to discuss. Just as emphatically as he refuses any question concerning the Chinese and Japanese troubles. But the official records show that the general was awarded the Legion of Honor by the French, the French Croix de Guerre with palm, a silver star citation for gallantry in action against insurgent forces near Paranaque, Luzon, Philippine Islands, and the distinguished service cross and the distinguished service medal.

Citations and Awards.

The citation for the distinguished service cross reads as follows: "Near Imus, Cavite province, Philippine Islands, October 6, 1899, while serving as captain, 11th cavalry, his great personal bravery in disarming a hostile Filipino saved the life of a brother officer."

His distinguished service medal citation reads:

"He served with marked distinction as chief of staff of the 28th division. Later as brigade commander he planned and directed operations resulting in the capture by the 65th infantry brigade of Chateau d'Aulnois and Marchevillo, where he displayed great tactical skill and demonstrated his abilities as a commander."

Such is Major General Edward L. King, United States army. As someone aptly expressed it: "He is a big, two-fisted soldier with a fine mind and the attributes of a true gentleman." A broad-minded, purposeful man. Well may the friendliness of army and civilian ranks increase and strengthen under such a leader. A big man, physically and mentally, for a big job.

Tsk! Tsk! Those Reporter Fellows.

The antics of the garden variety of newspaperman are at times hectic and often almost tragically funny. One incident that has taken its place in the yarn-telling line as an epic, occurred at the police station recently on a Saturday night.

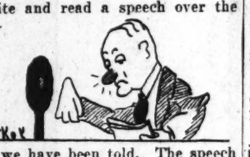

The boys in the press room told Lit and Tobe, visiting reporters, that a prisoner had tunnelled his way to freedom with a spoon. They went to see the tunnel. The door clanged behind them. There was no tunnel.

However, there was a drunk present in the cell who recognized Tobe as a newshound who had written him up in the past, and the ruckus began. It seemed that the police station would fall apart until the turnkey took compassion on Tobe's yells of bloody murder and gave the two boys their liberty. Oh, well!

Got in Draft Drafting Talk.

Recently Earl Sunkes, of the state board of health laboratory, was asked to write and read a speech over the radio, we have been told. The speech was to be on the subject of how to avoid winter colds, grippe, flu, et cetera.

According to our informant, Mr. Sunkes spent much time preparing his talk. He wrote a masterpiece, and gave all of the ways possible to avoid catching that nasty cold in the head. The night arrived for him to read the speech——.

However, when the dials were twisted for the speech, it was read by E. L. Webb. Mr. Sunkes had such a bad cold that he could hardly whisper!

Penny Club To Close Tuesday After Five Months' Work Here

Five months of active work to relieve unemployed and needy people in Atlanta will come to a close Tuesday, when the Penny Club, formed by Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, will cease collection of coins used to employ more than 300 men during the period of operation.

Originally formed to continue from October 1 to March 1, the club has aided greatly in relieving distress, according to records of Mrs. Glenn, who said she would issue a complete statement regarding activities at an early date.

All those who have penny collection boxes issued by the club were requested to turn them in not later than Tuesday.

"I believe," said Mrs. Glenn, "that if all boxes are turned in their contents will enable us to continue the employment of 300 men through March, which will be one month more than we anticipated at the time we formed the club."

Mrs. Glenn requested that her gratitude be extended to all contributors, members and workers who helped make the Penny Club a success, and a pattern upon which were formed hundreds of similar clubs throughout the United States.

HOUSTON POET NAMED AS TEXAS LAUREATE

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Texas has acquired a poet laureate.

Judd Mortimer Lewis, of Houston, was chosen by a legislative committee today for the honorary position created last year by resolution of the legislature.

His first book of verse, "Sing the South," was published in 1905, and since have appeared "Lilts O' Love," "The Old Wash Place," "Toddle Town Trails," "Christmas Days," and others.

Mr. Lewis is a vice president of the American Folk-Lore Society and an ex-president of the Texas Press Association.

2 CHICAGO MOTORISTS ARE VICTIMS OF FATE

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Fate played strange tricks with two motorists today.

After ramming a telephone pole and knocking it down, Vernon Baker drove away uninjured, but was caught by a motor policeman and returned to the scene, he picked up one of the tangled wires and was electrocuted.

Louis Wisener drove his machine in front of a speeding freight, which ground it beneath the wheels. The first force of the collision, however, knocked one of the sedan's doors open and tossed Wisener through it to safety on a siding 40 feet away.

2 ALABAMANS RUN ON WET PLATFORM

Candidates for Senate Post Call for Change in Prohibition Laws.

BY T. M. DAVENPORT.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Prohibition was thrust squarely to the front as an issue in the Alabama democratic primary on May 3 by two candidates who announced for the nomination for United States senator with planks in their platforms calling for a change in national dry laws.

J. Morgan Burns, Selma attorney, who, a week ago, said he probably would enter, today qualified as a candidate and issued a short statement of his views on repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"I favor repeal of the eighteenth amendment," Mr. Burns, who is a representative in the state legislature from Dallas county, says, "because such repeal restores to the people in each state the right to determine the liquor traffic as they see fit.

"I will prepare and publish a formal statement of my position on the paramount problems confronting the people of Alabama within a few days."

Almost simultaneously with this announcement, Charlie C. McCall, of Montgomery, assistant attorney-general, announced his candidacy on a platform that declared for a referendum on prohibition and for "home control."

"On the matter of the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution," said Mr. McCall in his formal statement, "my belief is that congress should refer this matter of national prohibition to the sovereign people of America and let them render their verdict by individual votes. I believe in the doctrine of state rights.

"I think the home rule plan is the best. I will favor submission to conventions of the people of a proposed amendment to the constitution which will substantially provide that nothing in the eighteenth amendment shall apply to any state after a majority of the people in that state in a popular referendum have declared by their votes that they do not desire their state to remain under the eighteenth amendment."

Entry of these two candidates brought to three the men seeking the post now held by Senator Hugo Black, of Birmingham, who is a candidate to succeed himself. In political circles here today it was reported that former Governor Thomas E. Kilby, of Anniston; Forney Johnson, Birmingham attorney, and C. W. Ashcraft, of Florence, were considering entering the race Monday.

H. L. Anderson, Birmingham attorney and former assistant attorney-general, announced his candidacy Wednesday with a dry plank and favoring direct federal relief to the unemployed, the Muscle Shoals commission plan of disposing of the big project, and for extension of payments on federal farm loans, where "extensions are vitally necessary and reasonably safe."

Aid to Poor Jumps 4 Times in 2 Years

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Poor folk in 81 large American cities received four times as much help in 1931 as they did in the year before the stock market crash, the Russell Sage Foundation announced today.

More than 500 public and private relief agencies in these selected cities in every section of the country expended in excess of $167,000,000 in the 12-month period as compared with $42,370,000 in 1929, according to figures sent to Ralph Q. Hurlin, director of the department of statistics.

Dr. Hurlin predicted that if the records of the two previous years is repeated, further increases in the amount of relief necessary will occur throughout the winter, with the peak coming in March.

Chicago Grain Broker Better as Weatherman

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—John F. Barrett, a grain broker, who also offers weather bets with no takers, has a "sure thing" for spring. It is:

"There won't be another really cold day."

The man who took $1,250 from his fellow members of the Chicago Board of Trade by wagering that the winter of 1931 would be devoid of zero weather expected no takers when he made his latest prediction today. His offers went begging last December when he forecast that the mercury would not reach zero more than twice this winter.

Even the federal forecaster turned him down, apparently proving his own astuteness, for there was no zero weather at all.

Last September the amateur "prophet" ventured to say there would be no killing frost before December. Again he was right.

ORDER OF THE CARABAO HOLDS ANNUAL WALLOW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Satiric travesties for the past and ironic interpretations of present events were presented tonight at the thirty-second annual wallow of the Military Order of Carabao.

The organization is made up of veterans of the Philippine insurrection. It numbers among its members some of the highest ranking officers of the army and navy.

In a setting reminiscent of Manila in the days of Aguinaldo's guerrillas, the Carabaos began their festivities by singing the original third verse of "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," expurgated from modern school books—

"The wine cup, the wine cup bring hither
And fill ye it full to the brim—"

Among those who attended were General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff; Secretary of Navy Adams and Major General Ben H. Fuller, commander of the marine corps.

FILM COLONY DENIES BROOKHART CHARGES

Survey Shows Only 3 Per Cent of Pictures Were Gangland Features.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 27.—(AP) The film colony raised its voice today to answer the charges of Senator Smith W. Brookhart Jr., republican, Iowa, that the industry went goggle-eyed last year over gangster pictures and was headed this year toward a run of productions dealing with indecorous women.

The reply was framed from a survey of the 550 pictures released in the 13-month period between January, 1931, and January, 1932. It disclosed that only about 3 per cent of those films portrayed the story of the gangster and slightly more than 2 per cent were based on shady women.

In an analysis of the survey, Joseph Breen, assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Incorporated, said most of those pictures were released to theaters at close intervals.

As a matter of record, he pointed out that only 19 of the 550 films were gangster pictures and only 13 dealt with women.

The cycle of the gangster film has passed definitely for the present. Others of this type are being studied but the executives have decided that in the future the police will be the heroes and the racketeers the villains. Only one of the old type is under production.

It is Howard Hughes' "Scarface," a daring film based on the gangland exploits of Chicago's vice lord, Al Capone. Producers are shaking their heads about it as they think of what the censor boards might do to it.

VOTE FOR

A. C. MINHINNETT, Jr.

"A Sure Winner"

For Tax Collector of Fulton County

To the White Voters of Fulton County:

I am grateful for the increasing assurances of my election on March 9th. It has been, and is my purpose, to conduct my campaign on a practical and fair basis, and I will say nothing to reflect on my opponent, personally. I deem it proper, however, that I do discuss the work of this important office, and the matter of cost of its operation, which is of direct concern to every voter and taxpayer in Fulton County.

A. C. MINHINNETT JR.

President Cleveland was right when he said that a public office is a public trust, and the hundreds of my friends in this fight who want a change, shall not be disappointed in my promise and purpose to place this office on a more practical and economical basis. I definitely promise:

First: To employ only such a number of assistants as will be actually necessary to do the work of the office.

Second: To keep the office open on Saturday afternoons during the tax-paying and registration seasons.

Third: I will avoid the practice of placing relatives in that office.

I believe that the public treasury should be guarded with the same care, economy and honesty as the private purse—even more so—and as a public official, it shall be my purpose to operate this office with as little cost to the taxpayers as possible. There can be a very considerable amount saved, annually, by the proper handling of this office, and if elected I intend to see that this saving is effected.

Very sincerely,
A. C. MINHINNETT, JR.

CAPONE SENTENCE UPHELD BY COURT

Special Guard Placed at "Al's" Cell Following Rumors of Escape Plan.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—"Scarface Al" Capone's 11-year sentence for income tax evasion was sustained today by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Thus the world's most notorious gangster was brought nearer a prison sentence, although it was on a bookkeeping charge of tax violation rather than for any of the higher crimes charged to his regime of violence and murder.

The decision in favor of the government left the gang leader with but two faint rays of hope: A rehearing by the appellate court and a review by the United States supreme court. None of his underlings had succeeded in these final appeals.

Capone, when the news reached him in his county jail cell, turned without a word and flung himself on a cot, his face out of view.

The burly gangster has been in the county jail since October 24 when Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson gave him the stiffest penalty ever recorded in an income tax case, 11 years' imprisonment and $50,000 fine. For four months he had been awaiting the outcome of the appeal and getting no credit on his sentence.

The appellate court, working rapidly, found no basis for Capone's contention that the indictments against him were insufficient and that he had been deprived of his constitutional rights. On the contrary, the court found that the language of the indictments "follows explicitly the language of the statute" and that Judge Wilkerson made no error when he overruled the demurrer and motion in arrest of judgment filed by Capone's counsel.

Even if a slight mistake had been made in the wording of the indictments, the court held, the defect would be of a technical nature not affecting the substantial rights of the appellant.

The appellate court usually awaits 20 days before ordering a defendant to prison, giving his attorneys time to file a petition for rehearing. It was announced at the district attorney's office, however, that "because of the unusual nature of the case" the high court would be asked Monday to dissolve the writ of supersedeas now holding Capone in Chicago and to order his immediate removal to prison.

EXPERT ANALYZES GERMANY'S CRISIS

ticipate in the management of the Reichsbank and the state railways. The reich's finances were to be inspected and supervised by an agent of the reparations commission, with headquarters in Berlin.

Reparations Since Dawes Plan.

By virtue of the provisions of the Dawes plan, Germany was reduced to a vassalage of the victorious allies. She now took her place in the realm of finance with Haiti, Santo Domingo and Nicaragua. Once more, the amount to be paid by Germany was left in abeyance.

On August 30, 1924, the Dawes plan went into effect. Germany's borrowing on a large scale began. The first transaction involved a loan of 800,000,000 gold marks, of $200,000,000. Thus, she obtained funds with which to carry out the provisions of the plan. The latter was a huge success, largely because Germany succeeded in borrowing. She secured funds from Peter to pay Paul. During the first four years in which the Dawes plan was in operation, Germany borrowed $1.84 for each dollar paid in reparations. This process could not go on.

In February, 1929, a committee of experts, headed by Owen D. Young, convened at Paris, Germany, for the first time, participated in the hearings. In June, or four months after the conference first met, a new plan was announced, the Young plan. It eliminated all the mechanism of control. The reparations commission was dissolved. The agent general for reparations payments returned hom.

America Proposes Moratorium.

From then on, the reparations payments of Germany were to be commercialized—that is, transferred to the people. In May, 1930, the Young plan was formally adopted. It began with the flotation of a large bond issue in the markets of the world. Things had changed radically in the meantime. Bonds could no longer be placed successfully—especially foreign bonds. Since Germany could not borrow, she could not pay. Suspension of payments was imminent.

America came to the rescue. In June, 1931, President Hoover proposed a one-year moratorium on all political debts. All nations received it enthusiastically. France hesitated. She finally yielded, but the damage had already been done. Confidence was destroyed. Balances in Germany were withdrawn. A financial panic in the Reich was the result. The Danat, one of the oldest and most substantial institutions, closed its doors. The Dresdner bank required governmental assistance. The stock exchanges were forced to shut down.

In November, the German government requested the Bank for International Settlements to have an examination made of the country's finances by a committee of experts. A report was rendered under date of November 22. It proposed, in brief, a suspension of the transfer of conditional annuities and suggested concerted action for attaining a better settlement of international debts.

Which Debts Shall Be Paid First?

In July, the one-year moratorium expires. Something will doubtless be done in the meantime. What form such action will take, is difficult to state at this time.

Germany's economic situation does not permit of the continuance of payments of both political and commercial debts. Which come ahead? Legally, the former; but, as a matter of sound business, every effort should be bent to continue payments on account of bonds and securities sold to and held by the investing public, individuals as well as institutions. If default should be permitted to occur in securities of this type, Germany's credit will be impaired to such an extent that, sooner or later, even political debts will have to be suspended.

In other words, those who insist upon the prompt payment of both political and commercial obligations, or upon the unqualified priority of reparations over private debts, will bring about the very situation which they do not wish brought about—namely, the inevitable suspension of payment in respect to both categories of debts.

FORGERY CHARGES SWAMP CITY HALL

Office of City Clerk Gets Scores of Calls Protesting Recall Names.

FOSTER TO DEMAND REMOVAL OF NAME

Councilman Homer C. Foster, of the ninth ward, personal and political friend of Major James L. Key, Saturday returned to Atlanta from a business trip to Detroit and announced he would investigate the signature of the "H. C. Foster" signed to the recall list from that ward.

The name was written on the petition, but no address was given. Councilman Foster said Saturday he is the only H. C. Foster registered from the ninth ward, and that he will demand its removal from the list as a forgery.

"I did not sign the petition, was not asked to and would not have had I been approached," he said. "The mayor is my personal and political friend."

Sworn statements charging forgery began piling up Saturday as an aftermath to publication of the list of alleged signers of the Key recall petition.

Many others who found their names among those furnished by J. Henson Tatum, city clerk in charge of the petition, called in person or used telegraph and telephone to disclaim any knowledge of how their signatures were placed on the paper.

Previously, scores of indignant citizens from virtually every one of the city's 13 wards, seeing their names among the published list, had issued denials, and, as the day wore on Saturday the number of those protesting against inclusion of their names on the recall document assumed impressive proportions.

In an effort to solidify means of action against those responsible for the alleged forgery of citizens' names, affidavits were being prepared Saturday on instructions from Mark Bolding, Atlanta attorney, representing petitioners who Friday obtained a rule nisi from Judge E. E. Pomeroy ordering City Clerk Tatum to permit the purging of the list of fraudulently-obtained signatures. The object of the sworn statements, it was said, is to show that the entire petition is honeycombed with subterfuge.

Score Sign Affidavit.

The following form of affidavit was signed by more than 20 citizens Saturday:

Personally appeared before me, an officer duly authorized to administer oath, the undersigned, who, after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he did not sign his name on any petition to recall the Hon. Mayor James L. Key. The affiant further says that his name was put on the recall petition without his authority, knowledge, or consent.

Up to noon Saturday the following had signed the foregoing affidavit:

S. S. Dudley, 1050 Ponce de Leon avenue; T. M. Ward, 417 Augusta avenue; J. C. Mitchell, 347 Atlanta avenue; C. C. Lanier, 297 Georgia avenue; M. A. Beiter, G. T. Phillips, L. A. Thomas, H. G. Smith, 357 Felton drive; G. E. Veazey, 1428 Peachtree street; D. E. Lanford, 498 Boulevard; H. Golden, 644 Washington street; J. M. Hooks, W. C. Randolph, 974 Capitol avenue; Mrs. Eulie J Cooper, J. T. Broome, Edgar Chambers, L. Pilgrim, C. L. Wooddall, E. H. Elrod, 1384 Morningside drive; T. H. Conslen, 609 Woodland avenue; Mrs. Irma Merry, 711 St. Charles avenue.

Paul H. Butler, son of G. H. Butler, father-in-law of the former Miss Ruth Key, the mayor's daughter, signed a separate affidavit in which he denied that the elder Butler had affixed his signature to the recall petition. The Butler affidavit sets out that the elder Butler "died on January 16, 1932, and that during the month prior to that time was seriously ill . . . and had no opportunity to sign the petition."

Barber Issues Statement.

O. D. Doster, barber at the Henry Grady hotel, whose name appeared in the list of ninth ward signers submitted to City Clerk Tatum, made the following statement Saturday:

"My name appeared in the list of those signing the petition to recall Mayor James L. Key, but not only did I not sign any such petition, it was never presented to me to sign. The statement that I did sign it is the biggest lie I ever heard. I am the only O. D. Doster in the city directory, and the only way I can account for my name being there is that it was taken from the city directory or the registration lists. I have never voted for Key before, but now I intend to do everything in my power to help keep him in office. Compared to those seeking his recall and their dirty, underhand methods, he is a prince among men."

Richard L. Brannen, 846 Ponce de Leon avenue, wrote:

"In your edition of today I note my name appears under the ninth ward heading as favoring the recall movement. I have not signed any such petition, and do not favor the simple-minded, foolish movement; have always voted for the Hon. James L. Key and expect to continue voting for him when the opportunity offers. I shall be obliged if you will give this note the same publicity that has been given the list."

Calls It "Rank Forgery."

J. A. Peterson, 463 Formwalt street, S. W., in a letter to Tatum, says inclusion of his name to the petition is a "rank forgery."

"I note with surprise," Peterson wrote Tatum, "that my name has been turned over to you as a signer of the recall petition. This is to notify you that I have not signed a thing pertaining to this dastardly move to besmirch our good mayor, Jim Key, or this fair city of ours.

"My name appearing on such a list and published by all three of the daily papers has done me much harm, and if the party can be found that forged my name he will have to answer to me personally as well as to the courts. In due time I shall call at your office and, if possible, I would like to see the original slip that purported to have my name signed to it, thereby enabling me, if possible, to locate the party guilty of such rank forgery. Thanking you in advance for any support rendered by you or your office in my efforts to locate this dirty criminal, I am, etc."

J. B. Callaway, of 899 Williams Mill road, in a letter to The Constitution, said:

"I would like very much for you to insert in your columns that I did not sign any recall petition and had no idea my name appeared in this list until my attention was called to it appearing in this morning's issue of The Constitution.

"I want the public to know this is not my way of expressing my opinion. I regret very much for this insertion of my name without my consent, for a portion of the public may not believe I did not sign it. But I would be glad to show the difference in the signatures to show that I positively did not sign it."

One Not Registered.

The names of two persons who inadvertently were omitted in the published list but whose signatures are on the original petition, were added Saturday. They are Miss Rosalind Shepherd, 560 Moreland avenue, and Elizabeth Wellington, 849 St. Charles avenue, both of the ninth ward. A third person who contended his name was signed to the petition but had not been publicly printed caused City Clerk Tatum to explain that it had been removed from the list because he was not a registered voter. This was the name of W. W. Hardigree, 112 Georgia avenue, S. W., in the second ward.

In addition to the foregoing names of those denying by affidavit, telegram, letter or otherwise that they had signed the petition, the following persons Saturday likewise claimed to have no knowledge of the manner in which their signatures were included:

M. P. Phipps, 1075 Arlington avenue, S. W.; J. E. Mooney, 1423 Beattie avenue, S. W.; R. C. Irwin, 1479 Lee street, S. W.; W. T. Mueller, 666 Elbert street, S. W.; W. T. Morton, 1586 Elixir avenue; Mrs. J. L. Dudley and Mrs. E. M. Forshaw, 120 Howard street, S. E.; Mrs. Mattie Grogan, 957 Albion avenue; J. W. Clarke, 381 Lawton street, S. W.; Marion E. Patterson, Atlanta coal dealer; J. W. Barlow, 654 Cascade avenue, S. W.; S. H. Tesler, 194 Atlanta avenue; E. G. Banks, 360 Windsor street, S. W.; P. W. Hollinshead, 400 Mathewson place, S. W.; W. H. Barbour, 781 Marion avenue; Mrs. Irma Merry, 771 St. Charles avenue, N. E.; B. J. Meadow, 446 Windsor street, S. W.; Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Armstrong, 1404 North avenue, N. E.; J. E. Denton, 207 Doane street, S. W.; Charles Lefkoff, 528 Grant street, S. E.; Charles Berlin, 416 Grant street, S. E.; Harry Lefkoff, 528 Grant street, S. E.; W. I. Callaway, 419 Oakland avenue, S. E.; Mrs. H. Epstein, 828 Washington street, S. W.

FORGERY CHARGE WIRED BY CITIZEN

The following telegram was received Saturday by The Constitution from Tallahassee, Fla., Saturday:

"In your morning issue twenty-seventh my name appears as signer recall petition Mayor Key from tenth ward. Any document you may have with my signature attached is unauthorized and a distinct forgery. You will therefore omit my name from further publication as a signer to this recall racket. Retain any evidence you may have of forgery my signature.

"W. A. COPPAGE."

MONEY-HOARDING DRIVE IS MAPPED

Governor Richard B. Russell Jr. has accepted the chairmanship of the advisory council of the statewide organization that is being perfected for a campaign to bring hoarded money back into circulation, it was announced Saturday by P. S. Arkwright, Georgia chairman of the nationwide movement inaugurated by President Hoover and headed by Colonel Frank Knox, of Chicago. Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, will serve as vice chairman of the advisory council, it was announced.

Names of six additional division chairmen who will be in charge of the campaign in the sections surrounding the cities in which they reside also were announced by Mr. Arkwright, thereby completing with one exception the list of leaders in the 16 sections into which the state has been divided. The campaign will run from March 7 to 15 for the sale of a special issue of government bonds of small denominations designed to appeal especially to those who now have their money hidden away.

The new division chairmen announced by Mr. Arkwright Saturday were George West, former president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, for the Atlanta division; Joseph Belding, for the Augusta division; Malcolm McKinnon, for the Brunswick division; W. K. Moore, for the Dalton division; Hill Freeman, for the Newnan division, and Harvey Granger, for the Savannah division. A chairman is yet to be selected for the Moultrie division.

Chairmen previously announced to be in charge of the divisions surrounding the cities in which they reside are: John Davis, Albany; Frank Lanier, Americus; Abit Nix, Athens; Willis E. Battle, Columbus; Edgar Dunlap, Gainesville; W. T. Anderson, Macon; John M. Graham, Rome; R. H. Ferguson, Valdosta, and Jack Williams, Waycross.

"The quick response to the appeal by many of Georgia's leading citizens indicates a lively appreciation and a widespread realization of the great need for bringing hoarded money back into circulation and of the far-reaching benefits that will result if this can be accomplished in dispelling fear, restoring confidence, loosening restricted credits and thereby creating jobs for the unemployed and stimulating business and trade of all kinds," Mr. Arkwright said. "Although only one week is available in which to complete the statewide organization, the ready cooperation that has been given so far gives me confidence that Georgia will be ready for the active campaign beginning on March 7.

"It seems to me that this campaign strikes at the very root of our troubles and that its success will have a tremendous effect in bringing Georgia and the nation out of the depression. Contraction of credits, that is, the inability of individuals and of businesses, large or small, to borrow money on reasonable terms is the chief reason for the slowing down of construction and business expansion, thereby setting up a vicious circle of unemployment, reduced purchasing power, poverty and business failure. It is not difficult to understand why credits are restricted when it is estimated that nearly a billion and a half dollars have been taken out of circulation in the nation and hidden away in safety deposit boxes, mattresses, tin cans and old coffee pots.

"If this money can be brought back into circulation, and that is the entire purpose of this campaign, we can and will reverse that vicious circle and start things rolling the other direction. Every dollar of money is the basis of from $5 to $10 of credit. Every dollar that is taken out of hiding and put back at work will help to loosen credit, thereby stimulating business activity, providing new jobs and reducing the economic pressure that has been bearing down on all of us."

Spring-Like Weather Seen for City Today

More spring-like weather will be Atlanta's lot for today, according to C. F. von Herrmann, meteorologist, who gave the official forecast as "fine, clear weather." Sunday, with no change in temperature from that of Saturday." The temperature range Saturday was between 53 and 70 degrees and today's mercury readings will be an exact carbon copy, he stated.

Constructive Work Regains Good Name for Congress

Waster of Year Ago Has Become Saver; Economy Is Keynote of Program in Both Houses.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Whatever the cause, whether the new democratic control, the national economic depression or the approaching presidential election, congress, since its meeting in December, has undergone a striking sobering influence. Its reformation has left all the political forecasters bewildered.

During the coming week the nation's lawmakers will have sat just the duration of last year's short session. When they left the capital on March 4, 1931, it was with the reputation of spendthrifts, scolds and trouble makers. The country's relief at the dispersal of house and senate was only equalled by its fear that they might be reassembled again in special session. "Just let us get back to business," was the popular cry.

Now, only 12 months later, congress is the teacher's pet. The waster has become a saver. The shrew has become a glad girl. The chip has dropped off the bully's shoulder. The politicians on the hill have become a body of economic experts to whom commerce and industry come for advice and aid.

Same House Leaders.

The acquisition of about 10 per cent of new blood in the physical structure of the present body cannot account for the 100 per cent improvement in its spiritual frame, especially in view of the weakness of newcomers under the seniority system. The shift to democratic dominance of the house brings a new set of names to the doors of important suites of offices, but the same leaders as last year, regardless of party, are shaping the measures whose swift passage is exciting such favorable comment.

Although in a minority, republican leaders have been active in aiding their political opponents in framing the bills. In adopting the proposals, the democrats have been the major driving force. In other words, the distinguishing feature of the present congress is its non-partisan attitude, seldom, if ever, equalled in our history, not excluding war times.

If the administration proposes economy, the opposition goes the White House one better and lops off more expenditures. If the president suggests consolidations of federal departments, it is the democratic house which out-Hoovers Hoover by appointing a commission to ferret out the costly "duplicity" in government, as a representative from Oklahoma sagely described the evil. A formerly combative congress co-operates in squelching a dole.

Economic Necessity.

One of the most astute students of legislative practice attributes the good behavior of congress in large degree to its bewilderment at the economic issues before it. Never before have the intricacies of finance, involved banking practices, practical sociology and all phases of the science of commerce so dominated all the issues before congress. The multiplicity of the topics for action adds to the confusion. The lay congressman is quite content to trust to the judgment of his colleagues who have specialized in these particular branches.

Regardless of the whys and wherefores of the change, the whole atmosphere in the capital has been different than it was last winter. The political forecasters freely admit they were all wrong. Before the session began, the congress was hailed as the panacea congress, a body which would be notable for its wild remedies, its bitterness, its wranglings, its obstruction. As a matter of fact, without the benefit of a pre-session start, it has advanced the 11 major supply bills nearly as far as they were last year. In addition, it has pushed through a half dozen important reconstruction measures.

It has approved a fundamental change in the governmental machinery—abolition of the lame duck session of congress. It has passed on several important executive appointments. It has heard volumes of testimony with a view to eventual improvement of economic conditions.

Major Legislation.

Last year even the routine appropriation bills were a subject of sharp bickering. Seven of the most important of them were held up until the final week as a threat to force a compromise on federal relief. The record this year is good, even comparing the progress in the last year of the long session of congress, when by this time only seven of the appropriation bills had been passed by the house. This year the house already has passed the first deficiency bill, the agricultural bill and the interior bill, and has reported out the state, justice, commerce and labor and the treasury-postoffice bill. The war and navy bills are ready, but are being held up because of the uncertainties of the Far Eastern situation.

There was no thought of saving money in last winter's session, even though distress was facing the country almost as bleakly then as now. The congress apparently did not fully realize it and had no qualms in expanding public works as an aid to unemployment. This year it has readily reversed itself in curtailing public works to save money as the best step toward balancing the federal budget.

Bitter attacks from the floor of the senate marked last winter's treatment of relief problems, overshadowing the concrete action which provided $65,000,000 in loans to farmers, $500,000,000 for public works and a sum still unbounded for loans to war veterans in cash payment of the bonus. Some of the other actions of congress so different from its present conduct have almost been forgotten. Even the republican force in the house, which was the administration's mainstay, was stampeded for the bonus and for increased pensions for Spanish war veterans.

Prohibition Issue.

The ever-controversial subject of prohibition provided less controversy last winter than many apparently more harmless topics, yet this session congress has been still quieter in that regard. Perhaps it is the calm before a storm, but whether the wets have been saving their strength for a supreme effort, or whether they are heeding the cry that the country is more interested in business than beer, the absence of genuine struggles on the issue has been noticeable.

Congress now has the moratorium to its credit, the reconstruction corporation, broadening of the federal reserve structure, a start toward a more logical arrangement of its own sittings, a move toward drastic economy in government, a step in the direction of diminished bureaucracy, at least a study of long-range planning of national economics, plus a restrained consideration of temporary revenue-raising expedients. No one wants hard times, but hard times have done more than anything else to give its good name back to congress.

Only during the last week or 10 days has there been heard much talk of breaking up the non-partisan working arrangement. That was prompted by the over-zealous utterances of some of the president's outside political family. The claims of administration credit for the economic relief program, which have brought sharp replies from democratic leaders, have come for the most part from members of the cabinet and the president's political advisers. Republican members of congress, more familiar with the facts than those on the outside, have generally refrained from engaging in such vapid verbal tactics.

Condition of Harris 'Entirely Satisfactory'

TWO-MAN JUMP IS SLATED TODAY AT CANDLER FIELD

Thwarted last week by inclement weather, William Conner and "Red" Horst, of Candler field, will stage a double parachute jump at the municipal airport at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon, it was announced Saturday. The pair plan to jump from about 3,500 feet, Conner to leave the plane first and Horst following immediately.

The parachute jumpers will be taken aloft in a six-place cabin monoplane, piloted by Gus Leazar, base manager here for the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service.

Charles E. James, negro licensed pilot, and Alexander Nelson, negro parachute jumper, have announced a stunt flying-parachute jumping program for this afternoon at Dodd field, located on Brown's Mill road. Flying exhibitions will be put on at 2 and 3:30 o'clock and parachute jumps at 2:45 and 4:15, it was said. A small admission to the field will be charged, it was announced.

PREPAREDNESS VIEWS DEBATED OVER RADIO

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Opposing views of preparedness were presented tonight by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, and Father Joseph Lonergan, former national chaplain of the American Legion, in a debate broadcast by the Columbia system.

Rabbi Wise said that "war preparedness kills peace preparedness," asserting a better purpose would be served if the millions of dollars necessary to build a battleship were used for the relief of the unemployed.

Father Lonegan said congress should enact the Legion's national defense program, and urged that voters defeat congressmen who failed to support legislation for an adequate army and navy.

He said China with her manpower, beset by Japan with a vastly inferior population, was an example of what happened to unprepared nations.

CHURCHMEN TO BACK NEW RELIEF MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—A statement issued tonight by the joint committe on unemployment said that ministers and religious leaders over the country had been asked to organize meetings to urge enactment of a bill similar to the La Follette-Costigan relief measure recently defeated in the senate.

The statement said among those writing ministers, priests and rabbis urging such action were the Rev. Father John A. Ryan, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York; Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore; Bishop Francis J. McConnell and Dr. John Dewey.

Crackers Report for First Practice Wednesday

KENTUCKY IS UPSET; GEORGIA ADVANCES

CRACKERS OPEN SPRING WORK ON WEDNESDAY

Batterymen Report Early. 19 Signed Contracts in Club Office.

"Chick" Roos, the man behind the mahogany out at Ponce de Leon park, made a mental check of things yesterday morning and decided that everything was in readiness for the reception of the first Cracker players Wednesday.

The playing grounds, despite a siege of rain, are in excellent condition and there is a sparkling emerald triangle out there on the infield. The clubhouse has been repainted and remodeled and will present a cheery aspect to the incoming ball players.

On Wednesday, Manager David Irenus Barron will greet his battery men for the first spring practice, which means that baseball is here to stay until September.

OTHERS ON WAY.

While only the pitchers and catchers are due Wednesday, there will be other players straggling in from day to day and the entire squad will be on hand by March 7.

Rube Marquard, the new Cracker coach, is expected to reach the city today, accompanied by Pitcher Wilbur Wedhe.

Roos announced Saturday that he now has a total of 19 signed contracts on hand and that only 15 players are unsigned. Of this number, at least 10 will sign immediately upon arrival, the business manager believes.

"Some of the players want a personal talk with me before signing," Roos explained. Which is only natural, as our ball players are given to many conferences in the spring of the year.

CARLYLE READY.

Roy Carlyle, the big outfielder who batted .356 last year, will come in from Norcross Monday to sign up. Roy declares himself in good condition and has been working out for several weeks.

Signed contracts from Eddie Roetz, infielder; Jim (Powerhouse) Hammond, young outfielder and first-sacker, and Fred Polvogt, catcher.

Following are the players who have affixed their John Hancocks to "de poipers":

Hal Bejin, first baseman; Danny Lynch, Cliff McGaughey, Claude Herrin, Tommy Rich and Amos Martin, infielders; Climax Blethen, Bun Hearn, Andy Messenger, Chick Howard, Fred Elrod and Wilbur Wedhe, pitchers; Manager "Red" Barron, Freddie Sington, Duck McKee and Jim Hammond, outfielders; Ike Farmer and Fred Polvogt, catchers.

GARLAND UNSIGNED.

This is a good percentage of the roster of 34 players. A few slight cuts here and there have accounted for the delay in cases of the others. Pitcher Lou Garland, who comes from the White Sox, has been slow coming to terms. He is rated as quite a prospect.

Jack Sheehan, new Columbus manager, will report with the full Cracker squad Monday, March 7, and will work out with the local players until he gets ready to take his cut of the youngsters to the Electric City.

While Sheehan has been furnished with a list of players from which he will take his pick, it will not be made public until they are actually turned over to him.

BILL DALY UP.

Trainer Bill Daly was up and about yesterday, getting things ready in the clubhouse and doing quite well after his motorcar mixup, thank you.

Manager Barron and his family have moved over from Monroe, Ga., and henceforth will be close to the scene of activity.

Business Manager Roos further announced yesterday that he is not through with his plans of beautification of the grounds. He is going to plant a row of shrubbery on the terraces forming the outfield bank, as a sort of green background relief for the fans' eyes.

Mr. Roos is dangerously near developing into a baseball idealist, his tendency toward landscape gardening has revealed. At any rate, the ball grounds will be a more attractive spot for the dear public this year, thanks to Mr. Roos' altruistic propensities.

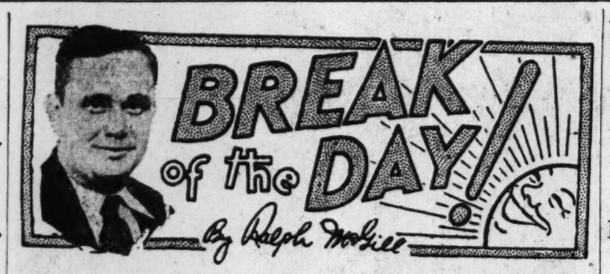

"Duck" McKee, the Georgia Tech boy, was in the office yesterday, seeking a uniform. He and Ike Farmer, another rah, rah ropeful, may steal a march on the old heads and work out at the park Monday, along with Manager Barron and Climax Blethen. McKee weighs 187 pounds and both he and Farmer are in good condition.

It was the Fourth of July, a hot, sticky morning in Cleveland, Ohio. Trains were taking away the last of the crowd that had come to see a heavyweight fight with the world's title at stake the night before.

W. L. Stribling, a game, great boy from Georgia, had gone through near 15 withering rounds in the roaring pit of the great stadium. He took a beating that began with the body and shifted to the head as the rounds wore on.

Sitting in his hotel room on that hot July morning, with the headlines of newspapers strewn on the floor shrieking the end of his dream, he said to a confidant, "I guess I got my chance three years too late."

And today W. L. Stribling is on his way back south again with the newspaper headlines telling of the end of his comeback bid in the ranks of the heavyweight fighters. He showed them rare, gallant courage, but he lost by a wide margin.

And now, because he is a great boy and a worthwhile boy, I hope he quits. He has a great future in aviation. He is young enough to go in and make something of it. There are no real marks on his face now. After 350 ring battles he is practically unmarked.

It would be too bad were he to go on and keep fighting when the dream is gone. The years and the grind of the ring have taken their toll. He can quit now with a great record. There can be but one end. There will be more losing fights. And Stribling wasn't meant to go on fighting losing fights and ending up punch-drunk.

The Striblings, "Pa" and "Ma" and W. L., are the people one describes as "the salt of the earth." Those who really got to know the Striblings have a genuine affection for them as I have. And it is because of this affection for them that I say I hope W. L. quits the ring.

It is difficult to see, somehow. There was Tommy Loughran, beaten by Steve Hamas and Kingfish Levinsky, kids who couldn't have laid a glove on him three or four years ago, saying that he was as good as ever and would keep on going. He isn't as good as ever.

They never seem to realize what has happened. There are many fighters whom W. L. Stribling can beat. But there are those he can't. And, because he is a great boy, I hope he turns to the air and the machines he loves. He has given the ring his best and he leaves it with an honorable and a startling record of endurance and courage.

THE YOUNG EDISON.

Harry Mehre, the Young Edison of the Southern conference, had the coaches out all day Saturday looking at his tackling dummy which was set up on Grant field.

The dummy is so nearly perfect that it can look vicious or mild, as the coach desires. It does everything. I haven't seen the dummy, but from all I can hear it stiff-arms the tackler, gives him a leg and takes it away, side steps and yells "down" when tackled. Coach Mehre is now busy perfecting a gadget which will protest to the official if the tackler makes a flying tackle, forbidden under the new rules.

Coaches who saw the dummy were enthusiastic. They all called it the best dummy yet made for teaching tackling. Ralph Sasse, of the Army, is likely to order one, as are several other coaches who viewed the dummy. A well-known sports goods house is thinking of taking it over and marketing it.

ALAS, POOR FRANK.

Frank Thomas, the rotund coach who has made such a splendid record at Alabama, was the recipient of much sympathy from his fellow coaches Saturday as they gathered here for the tournament.

It seems that Frank Thomas began spring practice with 150 men out. Coaches who asked Frank how things were going learned the sad news that the squad had shrunk all the way down to 115 men, a very pitiful total indeed.

This caused strong coaches to break down and sob. "Poor, poor Frank," they said, "just 115 men. Think of it, just 115 football players!"

THE KING'S ENGLISH.

Phil Perkins, former British amateur champion and member of the English Walker cup team, has been with us so long he does not speak his home tongue any more. After being wounded when bandits attempted to hold up a Miami club, he said:

"They looked like flustered palookas to me."

Thus showing the evil effects of slang on the king's English.

SPEED RECORDS.

Speed records of automobiles have advanced almost as fast as the cars themselves. Major Malcolm Campbell, who will let his record of 253.968 miles per hour stand for another year at least, set the last record on February 24.

In the past five years the speed record has jumped 50 miles per hour. In 1927 the late Sir Henry Segrave established a mark of 203 miles per hour.

Five years later Campbell is going 50 miles faster per hour over the same course. In five more years, or earlier, someone will go 300 miles per hour.

ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Albany High school won its third championship of the second district tonight by defeating Sylvester High, 44 to 13.

Gray Wins Crown In Sixth District

DUBLIN, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Gray won the basketball championship of the sixth district tonight, by defeating Tennille, 24 to 20, in the final game.

VENZKE BREAKS WORLD RECORD; BEARD WINNER

Pottstown Flash Sets 1,550-Meter Mark at New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(UP)—Gene Venzke, of Boyertown, Pa., reigning sensation of the current track and field season, established a new world's record of 3:53.4 for the 1,500-meter run in the annual Knights of Columbus games tonight.

The old record of 3:55.8 was set by Lloyd Hahn, in Washington, in 1925.

Venzke ran in third place until he was two laps from the end and finished 25 yards ahead of his nearest rival, Frank Crowley, of Manhattan College. Frank Nordell, of New York University, was a close third.

N. Y. U. WINS.

New York University, with L. Williams, H. Lamb, S. Shefflar and H. Hoffman running, won a one-mile collegiate relay. Georgetown University was second and Manhattan College third. The time was 3:32.8.

Carl Aschenback, of the N. Y. A. C., won the one-mile walk with a handicap of 20 seconds. Earl Rugle, of Stonewall, D. C., was second and Mo Davis, of New York, was third. The time was 7.07 :8.

Percy Beard, Alabama professor, won the 60-yard high hurdles at the annual Knights of Columbus game before a crowd of 9,000, in Madison Square Garden tonight. His time was 7.5 seconds.

LEADS FROM START.

Beard led from the start and broke the tape a pace in front of F. J. Mardulier, of the Boston A. A. Charles Summerill, of Princeton, was third and H. M. Alcorn, of Boston A. A., fourth.

Emmett Toppino, of Loyola University, of New Orleans, won the 60-yard dash, final of the sprint series, equalling the world's record of 6.2 seconds.

Toppino jumped his field at the start and beat Al Kelly, of Georgetown, to the tape by a yard. Eddie Tolan, former Michigan star, was third, and George Weinstein, of N. Y. U., was fourth.

The trial heats of the 60-yard dash were run at 50 yards. The first man of each qualified for the final.

Tournament Notes

W. D. Stayton, forward of the L. S. U. team which upset Tech Friday night, is a logical boy. He was a member of Boys' High school's team of three years ago.

Biff Jones, the new coach at L. S. U., is eyeing Jack Torrance, the big Tiger center, with a view to using him in his football line next fall. Torrance weighs 250 and is quite active for a big fellow.

Although his team fell by the wayside, Forrest Sale, the tall Wildcat center with the streak of grey hair, tallied 20 points against North Carolina yesterday.

That Auburn spirit was everywhere last night as the Tigers went into the semi-finals. A horde of student rooters invaded the town, coming over from the Plains. That was an interesting meeting between Mike Donahue and John Shirey, the old Auburn halfback. It recalled the days when Mike coached the Plainsmen to great victories and Shirey led the scoring parade.

Macon, Ga., is well represented in the tournament with six players—Pool, Gooding and Slocumb, of Tech, and Moran, Smith and Young, of Georgia.

Vienna, Ga., has two players in Horne, of Duke, and Raines, of Tech—before Tech was 'liminated.

Biff Jones has been trying to persuade Ted Twomey, Georgia assistant coach, to have his face lifted and come over to L. S. U. and play tackle for him.

Gus Tebell, Virginia coach, who had a tourney champion with N. C. State a few years ago, makes no alibis. Asked if he had a statement to make after the game, with Georgia last night, Gus said:

"Yes, you can say that they beat us very convincingly."

Chuck Collins, the popular Carolina football coach, was taken for a sports writer by mistake last night by a certain gentleman and was asked to put an item in the paper. Chuck obligingly took out a pencil and pad and proceeded to get an interview. The "certain gentleman" never knew the difference.

Josh Cody's superstition is the talk of the tournament. The Vanderbilt coach kept two of his substitutes sitting in identically the same spot on the bench, fearing that if they moved his team would be hoodooed. But this did not keep Josh's team from losing Friday.

Just Good---That's All

A bit tired, yes, but happy. That's how Wilmer Hines, stellar forward of the North Carolina Tarheels and famous tennis star, following his team's great 43-42 victory over Kentucky yesterday. Hines is shown talking with his coach, George Shepherd, immediately after the Tarheels' victory over the Wildcats. The tennis star has been highly instrumental in keeping his team in the running. NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(AP) The Nashville club of the Southern association today signed Alex Lindstrum, for a number of years a pitcher in the league, to umpire the Vols' exhibition games and to assist Manager Jo Klugman in the spring training of young pitchers. KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Release from the Knoxville Smokies of Dick Brown, rookie outfielder, last year with Jackson of the Cotton States league, and signing of Rudolph Laskowski, 19-year-old Chicago rookie infielder, was announced by Edgar Allen, secretary of the Knoxville club.

Joe Schepner, manager, assisted by Stuffy Stewart, will start training for pitchers, catchers and rookies March 7. The Smokies will don uniforms March 10.

AUBURN, DUKE, N. C. U. SURVIVE SECOND ROUND

Florida, Virginia, L. S. U. Are Other Teams To Meet Defeat.

By Jimmy Jones.

The 11th annual Southern conference basketball tournament assumed a tri-state aspect at the close of yesterday's round, which found North Carolina, Duke, Auburn and Georgia moving into the semi-finals by virtue of quarter-final victories.

The result is the following schedule for Monday night that will determine the finalists who are to meet for the right of succeeding Maryland:

8 P. M.—Auburn vs. North Carolina.

9 P. M.—Duke vs. University of Georgia.

BULLDOGS ADVANCE.

Rex Enright's Bulldogs from Athens upheld the home state interest on Saturday night by eliminating Gus Tebell's University of Virginia five that put Alabama out in the first round by the comfortable score of 40 to 19.

Sam McAllister's Auburn Plainsmen stuck in the fight by ousting L. S. U., conquerors of Georgia Tech, in the after-dinner contest, 30 to 22.

The standout of the day's play, however, occurred along about 5 p. m. when North Carolina's hard-fighting Tarheels arose to meet the call of intense courage and defeated the highly favored University of Kentucky quintet, 43-42, in the most spectacular game of the tournament to date.

BLUE DEVILS WIN.

Duke's Blue Devils, coached by handsome Eddie Cameron, bowled over the Florida Alligators, heroes of the first day, 33-22, to give the sovereign state of North Carolina two big hopes in the semi-finals.

Cameron, who employs a unique system of coaching in that he caters to average-sized plays with lots of speed and uses no football players, has displayed one of the smoothest working teams of the tournament and a fine player in Alpert, his accurate shooting center.

The game was an epic struggle of life and death throughout. The first half ended with the doughty Tarheels trailing, 25-24. The second half was a dogfight, with first one team and then the other surging ahead.

With one minute, 45 seconds of play left, Worthington, veteran Kentucky guard, cracked down with a one-handed shot that apparently settled the issue at what would have been a 42-41 score. Then the Tarheels got the ball out of bounds. There was a flurry of passing and Weathers dribbled under the goal. He rimmed the ball through in a hurry. The pistol banged and the game was over. What a finish!

There was a general rush of supporters on the court to hug and congratulate the Carolina players.

Kentucky had a great club, there's no denying that. The Wildcats worked the ball down court with a clever attack, that found Sale, the tall center, dropping the ball through for goal after goal. But in the second half the Carolina coach made a smart substitution. He sent in Brandt, a rugged football player, to replace Edwards and jump against Sale. The Wildcats star, who has been ill from flu, seemed to tire and was taken out.

Ellis Johnston, the crack running guard, played a great floor game and made a desperate attempt to save the day, but his efforts were diminished by Weathers' last minute shot. Alexander was high scorer for Carolina with 13 points while Sale tallied 20 for Kentucky.

'Tis said that Eddie Cameron starts light basketball practice along about October, hence the finished work his blue-clad warriors have exhibited in their two games.

Both of the semi-final games Monday night should be colorful contests. Duke and Georgia will make a good

TECH, GEORGIA BOXERS BEATEN

Virginia Boxers Retain Southern Conference Ring Crown.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Feb. 27.—(AP) Virginia retained its team championship for another year and individual boxing champions in seven weight divisions were crowned here tonight as the sixth annual Southern conference boxing tournament finals were held before a crowd taxing the capacity of Memorial gymnasium.

The Virginia Cavaliers, although forced to forfeit in one match, won by a clear margin with a total score of 16 points. Duke and Tulane tied for second place with eight points each, and South Carolina, North Carolina State and Mississippi State each scored five points. Three points each were scored by Washington and Lee, North Carolina and Georgia.

Two individual titleholders, Goldstein, Virginia featherweight, and Hill, Tulane heavyweight, successfully defended their crowns. Goldstein won by decision over Levinson, North Carolina, while Hill won on forfeit by Gentry, Virginia, who was too badly battered in his afternoon bout with Stark, V. P. I., to be allowed to enter the ring tonight.

A third champion of last year to advance to the finals lost out tonight as Myers, Virginia middleweight, took the count from the hard-slugging Page, of Mississippi State. John Minardi, Florida bantamweight, advanced only to the quarter-finals before yielding to Zachariah, surprising young find of Louisiana State. In the semi-finals, however, Zachariah lost by decision to Lloyd, Duke, who continued his triumphant march

Surf Board Winner; Pays Backers $20.40

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Surf Board, four-year-old gelding of the Greentree stable, won the fifth race at one mile at the Fair grounds today and paid his backers $20.40 for a $2 mutuel ticket. Abdel ran second an Angry third.

Jockey H. R. Riley brought Surf Board to victory by a scant head in a driving finish. The payoff on the basis of a $2 ticket stood: Surf Board $20.40, $9.40, $4.80. Abdel $10.60, $6. Angry $3.40.

Kentucky Center Sets Scoring Pace

Five centers are among the six high scorers through the first two rounds of the Southern conference basketball tournament here.

Forrest Sale, of Kentucky, leads with 41 points; Bill Strickland, of Georgia, is second with 33, while Alpert, of Duke, has 27. Spurgeon Cherry, of Florida, has 22 and Jack Torrance, of Louisiana State 21. Darby, Kentucky forward, has 25.

Major Sasse Rates Southern Football With Best in Country

COACH AT ARMY WILL VISIT TECH FOR PRACTICE

Coach Wade Discusses Rules; Major Helps Poor Lad at Meet.

By Ralph McGill.

Major Ralph Sasse, whose Army team beat Notre Dame last season in the first decisive defeat suffered by the Irish in several years, will spend a few weeks in the south visiting the spring training practices of the various teams which have come to his attention.

Major Sasse will spend a day or so with Tech, whose practice begins tomorrow, and then move on to Georgia for another stop and a look at Harry Mehre's Bulldogs.

"I never saw a football team I couldn't learn something from," said the major. "And I think the south is playing some of the best football played in the United States today. I wouldn't be down here if I didn't think so.

"In the past few years the south, through fine play by many of her teams, has established herself as one of the best football sections in the country. I like to visit the basketball tournament and then finish off with a swing around the football practices in the spring."

VERY POPULAR.

Major Sasse is very popular in the south, and his Army teams have a great following when the football season is on.

An interesting commentary on the new football rules is furnished by Major Sasse. He and Wallace Wade, the latter being one of the leading southern coaches, see the new rules as being beneficial to the game.

"Let's give the rules a chance," said Major Sasse. "I never saw a rule yet that could ruin a game which is as well established as football. I think the rules will be especially beneficial to the high schools and prep schools who were perhaps not as well prepared to meet the specialized game as the better-trained college teams."

One little incident will serve to show the human qualities which make Major Sasse so popular. Most army men are pictured as hard-boiled, cold-blooded characters. Not so with Major Sasse. As he was leaving the auditorium between games Saturday night a youngster came up and asked for a ticket stub which would admit him to the game.

"Just a minute, son," said Major Sasse. And he left his taxi and walked to the ticket window and bought an admission for the boy.

"If the boy is basketball conscious I guess we'd better take care of him," he said with a grin.

Wallace Wade who is by way of being the Nestor of southern coaches, is of the same mind as Major Sasse.

FOOLISH, PLAIN FOOLISH.

"Why, it's foolish to say that the rules will ruin football," said Wallace Wade. "The only rules that really change the game were the ones which increased the distance to be gained from five yards to ten yards and the rule which allows the forward pass. As a matter of fact the forward pass wasn't a rule. It developed itself. As soon as they learned they could throw a pass they started using it. That's all."

Wade thinks the new rules will not be noticed except on the kick-off. "I think the kicking team will not have quite the advantage it used to have now that the punt is permitted on the kick-offs," he said.

"And yet that is by no means sure. The teams which have the choice will see that the kicker has to kick against the wind. And that will nullify the punts to some extent.

OTHER INVISIBLE.

"The other rules won't be seen. The hands can still be used. The flying tackle has been barred for years. That rule isn't new. And blocking won't be hurt."

Wade also believes that the new substituiton rule will be beneficial and an aid to injured men. "I think the substitution rule will do more to avoid injuries than any rule made," he said.

The coaches, that is, the great majority of them, see the new rules as having the tendency to decrease injuries. Few of them actually oppose the rules.

They will hear a discussion of them this afternoon at 3 o'clock when H. J. Stegeman, of the rules committee, will lead a discussion. Mr. Stegeman said that it was by no means an interpretation. That must wait on the rules committee.

Frank Anderson Tells 'Em How

Baseball practice got under way at Oglethorpe University last Tuesday and Frank Anderson was greeted with one of the most promising layouts of materials he has ever had. BULLDOGS OPEN DIAMOND WORK ON WEDNESDAY

Forty Candidates To Report To Bill White at Georgia.

By Al Smith.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 27.—Forty candidates for the Georgia baseball team will report to Coach Bill White Wednesday, March 2, for the initial practice of the season.

Numbered among those reporting will be 12 lettermen from the 1931 squad, which won 10 out of 20 games in the Dixie College league and placed three of its members on the All-Dixie league team. Veterans returning include a catcher, first and second basemen, three outfielders, and six pitchers.

Lettermen are: Leroy Young, catcher; Ray Fleming, first baseman; Homer Key, second base; "Catfish" Smith, Buster Mott and Marion Gaston, outfielders; Spurgeon Chandler, Lefty Simpson, Kenneth Hamilton, Andy Anderson, Joe Costa, and Nick Nicholson. Costa, a senior, did not play last spring.

Several promising players will come up from last spring's freshman squad and Bill White expects to use them in molding the team with which Georgia has hopes of winning a Dixie league flag this season. Coach White took a squad of green players in 1931 and, with a few regulars to help, made the green men into a team that was good enough to earn a percentage of .500 in the Dixie league.

The first four days of the workouts will be devoted to loosening up kinks in long-unused muscles. Then Coach White will get down to business. His squad will begin learning inside baseball as taught by one of the old masters of the game. Georgia will play its first game about the first of April.

Austie Downes, captain of the 1931 football team, will be ineligible for baseball. Downes, a regular outfielder and third baseman the last two seasons, was declared to be ineligible after January 1, 1932, by the Southern conference eligibility committee last fall.

Marvel Returns

Above is Pete Sauer (also Ray Steele), who will wrestle Blue Sun Jennings, the Cherokee Indian, at the auditorium Wednesday night. The pair will meet in the main bout on Promoter Weber's all-star card. Father Lumpkin, former Tech football star, will battle Milo Steinborn, the German strong man, in the semi-windup.

SAUER TO MEET JENNINGS HERE ON WEDNESDAY

Father Lumpkin To Battle Steinborn in Semi-Final.

Pete Sauer, known to many wrestling fans also as Ray Steele, and always a favorite with Atlanta fans has been matched against Blue Sun Jennings for Wednesday night at the city auditorium, it was announced Saturday by Henry Weber, the promoter. Sauer is being substituted for Steve Znosky, who, it was learned, was already booked for Wednesday night.

Roy (Father) Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech football star and considered one of the greatest professional stars in the game last fall, has been signed to meet Milo Steinborn, the world's strongest wrestler in the semi-windup.

And what a card that quartet offers, four well-known athletes, who have always proven popular with the spectators.

Sauer is rated next to Londos, the present world's champion, and is building his way up to another match for the title. He always provides plenty of excitement and thrills and is a clever showman.

Jennings put up a great scrap with Londos here some time ago and is another of the youngsters who is seeking another chance at the title. Jennings lacked only experience when he was defeated by the champion, but has won several hard bouts since that time.

Both wrestlers will give everything they have to win, as it will mean just another step forward toward a return match for the heavyweight wrestling crown with Londos. They will wrestle to a two-hour limit with the best two out of three falls determining the inner.

Lumpkin and Steinborn will wrestle two out of three falls in a one-hour limit, in what promises just as much action as the main attraction.

The former Georgia Tech star, after joining professional football ranks, trained for many weeks for wrestling and has made a success of it on eastern mats. He also went in for fighting, but found that wrestling was more suited to his physical makeup and has devoted his entire time to football and wrestling.

Tickets are on sale at Davison-Paxon's and at the Piedmont Hatters.

SAVANNAH WINS G.I.A.A. TOURNEY

Cop Third Straight Title Over Poets; Smithies Place Third.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Four Blue Jackets shot field goals almost at will and Savannah High School defeated Lanier High, 55 to 36, here tonight to win their third G. I. A. A. championship in as many years.

Harry Shore, Bobby Cheves, William "Bo" Johnson and "Peggy" Cupstid raked the basket for one point after another as the Jackets established an early lead and made a runaway race of the contest for the state's highest prep and high school basketball honors.

In the opening mae of the night Tech High suppressed a third-quarter rally, in which their lead was cut to nine points, to beat Benedictine, of Savannah, 63-38, in the game for third place. Except for a momentary tightening of the defense and a game struggle for points that checked the Atlantans in the third period, Benedictine was outclassed.

Savannah High established a 16-6 lead at the end of the first quarter and stretched it to 29-12 at the half as the Blue Jackets kept up a steady scoring drive. At the end of the third period the champions were in front, 40-16, and the remainder of the game saw the Poets, hopelessly beaten, striving to hold down the score.

Roy Poole and Macon's other sterling shotmakers had no chance to get going during the game, as Savannah retained possession of the ball and the Poets had few chances to score. They made good a large percentage of their attempts, however.

Perkins' Shot Forfeits Match

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Officials of the Dixie amateur golf tournament today awarded championship honors to Tommy Goodwin, 18-year-old Monroe, N. Y., golfer, and ruled that T. Philip Perkins, British golfer and co-finalist, who was shot during a holdup of the fashionable Embassy Club here early today, had defaulted.

The decision to call Perkins' nonappearance a default was not reached until after the officials conferred with the physician attending the Briton, defending champion. The physician said Perkins would not be able to play golf in competition for at least a month.

Tournament officials had entertained the hope that the tournament finals might be played at a postponed date, in case Perkins were able to play within a few days.

PREPMEN TURN TO SPRING SPORT

With the closing of basketball during the past week, prep athletes will turn their attention to football, baseball, track, golf, tennis, swimming and other sports Monday afternoon in preparation for a busy spring program.

Marist College will start a series of four weeks of football practice, which will be devoted entirely to a study and application of the new rules, recently passed. Baseball also will be started at Marist Monday afternoon.

Tech High, Boys' High and G. M. A. will start active baseball practice along with the other individual sports Monday afternoon.

Coach Tolbert, on his return from Savannah and the G. I. A. A. basketball tournament Saturday night, was not positive whether or not spring football will be started at Tech High this week. Neither was Coach Doyal, of Boys' High, certain of his starting football.

Atlantan Is Liked On Gotham Cards

George Harben, Atlanta boy, has crashed into wrestling in a big way during the last few weeks. Harben, who also wrestles under the name of Gene Gotch, has gone to New York and is wrestling top bouts at the St. Nicholas arena.

On February 17 he wrestled Jack Sherry, one of the better heavyweights in the feature event, and stayed 11 minutes 44 seconds with him. On February 20 he stayed 14 minutes 32 seconds with Charlie Hansen at Jamaica arena.

Harben weighs 207 pounds. He is booked for bouts in Elmira, N. Y., this week.

EVENING COPS FLORIDA DERBY

Widener Entry Flashes To Win by Five Lengths.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Evening, owned and bred by George D. Widener at his Erdenheim farm near Philadelphia, reached the peak of her brilliant career when she smashed her way to a glorious victory in the $10,000 Florida Derby, outstanding event of the Hialeah park 39-day meeting which closed today.

The largest crowd of the season let out a mighty roar as the daughter of St. James-Crepuscule, with Bobby Leischman sitting still in the saddle, swept past the judges' stand five lengths in front of R. N. Eastman's Cathop, a half-brother of Mike Hall, from Chicago. G. W. Ogle's Trombone was a close third.

Lucky Tom and Renaissance, J. J. Robinson's highly regarded invaders from New Orleans, never figured seriously in the race as Evening ran the one and one-eighth miles in 1:50 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the track record. Renaissance led for the first quarter of a mile but finished fifth. Lucky Tom, with which Robinson declared to win, acted fractious at the post and was placed on the outside. He was outrun from the break, finishing last in the field of seven.

Evening's victory, her fifth straight in Florida, was a popular one, the filly ruling a close favorite at $5.60 for $2. The triumph was worth $9,725 to Evening's owner, a nephew of Joseph E. Widener.

The Widener filly's high speed asserted itself as the field straightened out for the run up the back stretch and with little urging she drew away into a good lead. Renaissance, Trombone and Cathop endeavored to keep pace but found the task too much.

Through the stretch Evening just toyed with her opposition. Trombone held on surprisingly well as Cathop staged a strong fipish to take the runner-up position in the final stride.

Boys' High Riflemen Win Triangle Meet

Breaking 892 out of 1,000 targets, Boys' High rifle team won the opening round of a series of dual and triangular matches with other Atlanta prep schools Friday night on the Boys' High range against Tech High and Fulton High.

Tech High placed second with 847 and Fulton High was third with 787 targets.

Each of the three teams used four positions from which to shoot. They were prone, sitting, kneeling and standing.

Knight, of Boys' High, set the pace in the individual scores with 186 out of 200, while Lokey, Rogers and Turner finished second, third and fourth, respectively. Tomlin, of Tech High, was fifth in the individuals.

Sargent Takes Over Duties Tuesday

George Sargent, former national open champion and professional at the Scioto Country Club, Columbus, Ohio, will become professional at the East Lake Country Club courses Tuesday morning. Sargent succeeds Frank Ball, who will leave during the latter part of the week for Florida to participate in some of the spring tourneys.

Sargent is one of the best known teaching professionals in America and the one who introduced slow motion pictures of Bobby Jones and other international champions into professional teaching circles. He also has taken particular pains in the development of promising young stars and should be a great acquisition to Atlanta golf circles.

Errie Ball, southeastern professional golf champion, will continue as the assistant at East Lake, but will participate in more tournaments this year than before, while Sargent will devote practically all of his time to teaching the youngsters.

TECH SWIMMERS SWAMP GEORGIA

Georgia Tech's varsity swimming team continued its victorious march toward its sixth straight Southern conference championship Saturday night at the A. A. C. by swamping the University of Georgia's tankmen, 50-25. A large crowd overflowed the stands and filed along the downstairs sidelines to view the match.

Fred Hodgson, University of Georgia, set a new Southern conference record in the 200-yard breast stroke, the only event in which Georgia placed first, with a time of 2:52.3. "Snowball" Stover, Tech, won first places in both the fancy diving and the 50-yard free style for high scoring honors.

Stover and Brown, of Tech, and Ventulett, of Georgia, put on a pretty exhibition in the fancy diving event. The Tech men finished in first and second place in the order named.

Pairings will be made Monday night at the Y following the close of the entries.

"IRON MAN" STAR.

Andy Wyant, star lineman with Bucknell and Chicago back in the '90s, played in 98 college grid games without substitution. Since the games in those days lasted 90 minutes it is figured Wyant played 8,820 minutes of college football.

Speaking of Legree, What About Hornsby?

Rajah and McGraw, Toughest Managers, Players Say; Smith Episode Is Recalled.

By Jimmy Jones.

Speaking of tough gentlemen, there are a couple of them managing baseball clubs in the National league. We are thinking of Jawn J. McGraw and Rogers Hornsby—particularly Rogers Hornsby.

After getting an earful from southern boys who have performed on the ball clubs of both men, it is indeed a question of which is the most exemplary Simon LeGree—old man McGraw or the fiery chap who drove the St. Louis Cardinals to the 1926 pennant. Certainly neither ever hurt a ball player with gentleness.

George Stallings, the late Georgian, was one of the sterner task masters of the dugout. There was nothing so scorching as the Stallings' ire when properly aroused. But Stallings was a kindly man in his quieter moments and well liked by all his players.

As for Messrs. McGraw and Hornsby, they undoubtedly have the respect of their henchmen, but we are led to doubt that they have their personal liking.

The writer has had occasion to talk to a couple of Hornsby's men this winter. One of them played under his managership, both at Boston and Chicago.

"Personally I get along with Rogers all right, but he is very exacting on the field and rubs some of the players the wrong way," said Bob Smith, the Atlanta boy who pitches for Hornsby in the summer.

REGAL RAJAH.

Frequently the regal Rajah will dash in from his post at second base to give a pitcher a raking over or one of the infielders in most vociferous tones. Once he dashed in and crawled all over Bob Smith, but only once. There was something in the demeanor and the calm tone of the Georgia Cracker that set Mr. Hornsby back on his haunches.

It happened in a game between the Cubs and the Giants at the Polo Grounds last summer. Bob Smith was on the mound. Ethan Allen, Giant outfielder and a deadly high ball hitter, was up. Smith knew that Allen's weakness was a low curve ball outside.

Just as the average smart pitcher would do in such a case, Smith elected to get Allen off the plate on the first pitch and then work on him with a curve ball. So Bob served Allen a high fast one inside. The ball got away from Smith a bit and wasn't exactly where he wanted to get it, but at that it was almost a perfect "waste" pitch, being high and "on the handle," as the players say.

SMACK.

But what does Mr. Ethan Allen, of the Green Mountain Ethan Allens, do but reach up with his bat and smack a clean single over second base to score a couple of runs and beat the Cubs, 2-1. It was a thoroughly unorthodox thing for Ethan Allen or any other batter to do, but there Bob stood feeling like a child who has had his toy snitched from him.

The Rajah came dashing in and proceeded to put Smith in the grease for what he termed a bum pitch. Bob, who is a quiet fellow, did not defend himself for an instance. He looked his chief in the eye. Then he asked him a question.

"Would you go after a high pitch like that, Roger?"

Hornsby never said a word. He turned and walked back to his position. From that day on, Hornsby never told Smith how to pitch again. But this does not mean that Mr. Hornsby will not tell other pitchers how to pitch, for the Rajah is just naturally built that way.

Atlanta Dogs Vie in Show April 8

Atlanta Kennel Club, cooperating with the Atlanta Junior League, will stage its 19th annual dog show on April 8 and 9.

The proceeds will go to the Henrietta Egleston hospital.

The Atlanta show is the oldest in the south and entries are expected from more than 20 states. The show will be a championship affair, held under the American Kennel Club rules, and will be judged by Charles C. Hopton, of New York, an international authority and judge of many of the country's outstanding dog competitions.

Premium lists and entry blanks will be mailed out about March 15 by Mrs. R. C. Hackman, who will furnish interested parties with further information about the event.

ATLANTA FIVES TO PLAY FINALS

CHAMBLEE, Ga., Feb. 27.—Fulton High and Commercial High, rival Atlanta members of the North Georgia Interscholastic conference, will battle here Monday night for the fifth district basketball championship by virtue of their victories Saturday night in the semi-finals.

Fulton defeated Clarkston, 39 to 24, and Commercial made it unanimous for Atlanta teams to meet in the finals with a 24-to-18 triumph over Chamblee before a packed house.

Fulton had little difficulty in eliminating Clarkston, despite the excellent play of Johnston, who scored 18 of the 24 Clarkston points. Excellent passing and superb teamwork of the Fulton team was the feature. Every Fulton player scored at least one field goal. Moore was the offensive star for the winners with 13 points.

Commercial and Chamblee, the defending champions, played the best game of the night with neither having any advantage until the closing minutes, when Berger's marksmanship gave the Atlantans a small margin.

Prentice Made Davis Cup Head

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(UP)—The appointment of Bernon S. Prentice as chairman of the Davis cup committee has been announced by President Louis J. Carruthers, of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Prentice succeeds Holcombe Ward, who, following his election as president of the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association, asked to be relieved of his Davis cup duties.

Prentice inaugurated his tennis career at St. Paul's school at the turn of the century. At Harvard he won the university singles and doubles title and captained the Harvard team.

He has been a member of the Davis cup committee for nearly 10 years and was donor of the Prentice cup for biennial competition between the Yale-Harvard and Oxford-Cambridge teams. During the past 32 years Prentice has won more than 65 tennis titles.

A Good Season Yet a Bad One

Georgia Tech's basketball team has finished a season that was brilliant, despite its disappointments.

In pre-tournament games Tech defeated Auburn, Vanderbilt, Florida and Georgia (twice each), yet was eliminated in her very first tournament game by L. S. U., 36-33.

The game marked the end of the careers of Ted Raines, center; Bill Perkins, forward, and Hugh Gooding, three of the finest players in Tech's history.

JACKETS START HARD FOOTBALL DRILLS MONDAY

New Rules To Be Stressed in Tech Workouts.

Spring football practice will be ushered in at Georgia Tech in a big way Monday, when Coach W. A. Alexander meets his entire squad for a period of conditioning that will last for about six weeks.

Line Coach Jack Cannon has had some of the linemen out for calisthenic, but there has been little in the way of instruction, other than the simplest fundamentals.

Alexander and his entire staff will take charge of the Jackets who compose the 1932 Golden Tornado squad.

Two players, Tommy Peeler, halfback, and Jimmy Branch, guard, will be missing from the fold because of delinquency in studies, while five others will be lost by graduation.

They are Duck McKee, Ike Farmer, Buck Flowers, Ray Isaacs and San Fincher.

These will be supplemented by a large list of freshmen that include some excellent prospects.

The changes in the new rules will come up for considerable discussion in the early "skull practices."

Plenty of attention will be given the young linemen and backs.

Tech's chances for next fall are considered brighter than they have been since 1928. The players are young and a fine spirit prevails on the squad.

The workouts will start at 4 p. m. each day.

Bulldogs Rest Over Week-End.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 27.—Georgia's 50 football candidates scrimmaged their fourth time this week and ended their four weeks of spring practice as Head Coach Harry Mehre announced a cessation of spring work until Monday. Georgia coaches will attend the Southern conference basketball tournament and the conference meeting during the week-end. Buck Chapman and Jodie White, two of Mehre's backfield candidates, were outstanding in today's scrimmage, along with Charley Turbeyville, who is being good at doing his bit to make the end situation a little less irritating to Harry Mehre.

The three have come along rapidly since spring practice began. "Crude, but improving," was the way Harry Mehre grouped his squad as a whole, after the fourth week's practice ended.

The Georgia coach is of the opinion that his squad has improved a great deal since February 1, although it still has a long way to go.

Spring activities will be resumed Monday afternoon, although members of the squad will be permitted to drop out and take part in baseball and track when practice for those two teams gets under way. Several of the players expect to make bids for varsity baseball and track berths.

'Sharks' Shatter Skeets

Skeet shooting is becoming very popular with Atlanta sportsmen and Saturday the clays out at the Adamsville road traps had a bad day indeed. Above are shown two of the skeet "sharks" doing their stuff. H. J. Field (left), former state champion, is pictured with Paul (Kingfish) Klassett, secretary of the Skeet club. The club shoots every Saturday and the public is cordially invited to come out and shoot.

match and so will Auburn and Carolina.

The Tarheels, coached by George "Bo" Shepherd, furnished the biggest feat of the day when they defeated Kentucky's crack team in the second game of the afternoon. The Tarheels' comeback from apparent defeat at superior odds was beautiful to behold.

HINES AGAIN.

Again Wilmer Hines, the slightly-built tennis star, and a player with a great competitive heart, stepped into the niche to furnish the spark of victory. It was a field goal by Weathers, forward, in the final minute of play that beat the Wildcats by one point, 43 to 42, but previously the deadly shooting of Alexander, veteran guard and captain, and that of Hines, had kept Carolina in the battle.

The Wildcats made a mistake in attempting to freeze the ball with 10 minutes left to play and the score only 36-27 in their favor. But Kentucky has a young team and all those stars will be back next year, more experienced and wiser.

AUBURN ADVANCES.

In the night games, Auburn proved the steadier team in beating L. S. U., 30-22. Jack Stewart put the bridle on big Jack Torrance somewhat, while "Little Papa" Lumpkin did some spectacular shooting under the basket. Stewart also came in with some handy shots.

The final setto found Georgia's Bulldogs far superior to Virginia. Wild Bill Strickland again was the key man of the Red and Black and scored 15 points before going out via four personals. The versatile Catfish Smith moved to center and outjumped the Virginia pivot man for the rest of the game. Leroy Young played another fine game at guard, while Terrell, Smith, Chandler and Costa came through with timely baskets late in the game. Moran and Smith also went out of the game but not before both boys had done their bit.

Things have simmered down to the semi-finals in one of the most exciting tournaments of history.

Georgia Enters Semi-Finals.

For the sixth time in the eight-year history of the Southern conference tournament here, the University of Georgia last night entered the semi-finals round with a 40-to-19 victory over the University of Virginia. The Georgians rang baskets from all corners of the court.

W. L. UNCERTAIN ABOUT RETIRING FROM FIGHTING

Georgian Rates Bostonian at Top of Heavyweight Class.

Schaaf Can Kayo Max, Says Strib

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 27.—Ernie Schaaf, the two-fisted terror who defeated W. L. Stribling here Friday night, can knock out Max Schmeling, the champion, in the opinion of Stribling, who has fought both men within the space of seven months.

"I think Schaaf can not only beat Schmeling but knock him out," said W. L. as he prepared to depart from Chicago for his home in Macon. Stribling lost to Schmeling in Cleveland, Ohio, July 3, 1931.

By Charles Dunkley,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Another Boston "strong boy" was hammering his mammoth fists against the portals of heavyweight championship fame tonight.

This time it wasn't the Boston strong boy of old, the great John L. Sullivan, but one of his closest counterparts, 25-year-old Ernie Schaaf, who seems to have established himself as the second ranking American challenger for the world's championship as a result of administering a terrific defeat to the pride of Georgia, W. L. "Young" Stribling, last night.

Those who watched Schaaf's tireless bombardment of leather rip "Pa" Stribling's boy to a bleeding, helpless, pathetic figure were unanimous that another Boston strong boy had arrived on the scene, 209 pounds of fighting power, framed by 6 feet 1 1-2 inches of marvelous physique.

VICIOUS BEATING.

Schaaf gave Stribling such a vicious beating that the Georgia youth was knocked right out of the heavyweight picture, perhaps forever. "Pa" Stribling, the father-manager, wouldn't say yes, or wouldn't say no tonight as regard the suggestion that Stribling would hang up his gloves and say good-bye to the sport that made him famous.

"Pa" Stribling said that his Willie would rest for a couple of months, and then the question of retirement, if it came up, could be discussed. It was the elder Stribling's personal opinion that his son needed two months in which to build himself up to match the rugged strength of bruising opponents, and that he might content himself with taking on minor foes.

"W. L." wasn't hurt much last night, but he certainly looked bad, didn't he? That was because of those two gashes under his eyes. Those body punches didn't hurt him, but that Schaaf is a big, powerful fellow. He is as strong as a bull."

ERNIE'S FEAT.

Schaaf, in removing Stribling from the heavyweight situation, accomplished something that Max Schmeling failed to do until he had pasted the Georgian for 14 rounds—that was knocking Stribling down. Schaaf floored the courageous Georgia youngster in the fourth round just before the bell ended the assault, while Schmeling did not knock Stribling down until the fourteenth round.

It was much like the night in Cleveland seven months ago when Stribling, as America's first challenger to the German titleholder, was stopped by Schmeling in the last round of their fight. Last night Stribling again was a battered hulk, finishing the fight on his feet only through the gameness and cunning.

Stribling, peering out through two blood-smeared and partly closed eyes, pleaded with Referee Dave Barry to be allowed to finish the tenth round. Barry walked to Stribling's corner with the conclusion of the ninth round to inspect the gashes under his yes.

Keeps Your HAIR NEAT

Rich-looking . . . Orderly

IF your hair lacks natural gloss and lustre, or is difficult to keep in place it is very easy to give it that rich, glossy, refined and . . . orderly appearance . . . so essential to well-groomed men.

Just rub a little Glostora through your hair . . . once or twice a week . . . or after shampooing, and your hair will then stay, each day . . . just as you comb it.

Glostora softens the hair and makes it pliable. Then—even stubborn hair—will stay in place of its own accord.

It gives your hair that natural, rich, well-groomed effect, instead of leaving it stiff and artificial looking as sticky lotions do.

Glostora also keeps the scalp soft, and the hair healthy by restoring the natural oils from which the hair derives its health, life, gloss and lustre.

Try it!—See how easy it is to keep your hair combed—any style you like—whether brushed lightly or combed down flat. If you want your hair to lie down particularly smooth and tight, after applying Glostora, simply moisten your hair with water before brushing it.

A large bottle of Glostora costs but a trifle at any drug store.

J.P.C. Five Meets Savannah Quintet

The Jewish Progressive Club basketball team will continue its fight for another southern Jewish championship in a week-end game against the Savannah Jewish Educational Alliance team on the South Pryor street court.

The Savannah team is undefeated in 12 starts this year and have one of the strongest Jewish basketball teams in the south.

Atlanta's bid for 1932 southern Jewish crown received a severe setback three weeks ago in the Birmingham Y. M. H. A. defeat, but the Progressives avenged that defeat with a victory last week over the same team.

A victory in the Savannah game will give the Progressives an inside track to the 1932 title, with only Jacksonville left on the schedule.

Extension Given Lesson Seekers

An extension of one week has been granted for Atlantans to register at Spalding's, on North Broad street, for the group plan of golf instructions to be given by Wallace Linquist, professional at the Candler park municipal course, it was learned Saturday. The extension of time was necessary because of the bad weather last week.

The series of instructions will begin Monday, March 7, and continue until 10 lessons have been given with three each week.

Classes have been arranged for morning, afternoon and nights each week, and use of the Glen Iris driving range has been secured for the night work.

Special classes for men who work during the day have been planned for three nights each week.

College Golf Meet Is Awarded Athens

By Al Smith.

The annual Southern conference golf tournament, held at Athens under the auspices of the University of Georgia in 1931, will return to the Classic City again this year, the conference golf committee announced Saturday afternoon.

Dates for the tournament were left up to Georgia by the committee. The tourney will probably be played May 9, 10 and 11, H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics at the University of Georgia, announced immediately following the action of the committee. In asking for return of the tourney to Athens, Georgia athletic authorities suggested the above dates.

Albert (Hot) Wheeler, of Vanderbilt, 1931 champion of the Southern conference, will not defend his title in the coming tournament. Tulane, team champions of the conference, will probably enter. Wheeler won his championship by a stirring uphill fight that saw him edge out his opponent in the finals on the second extra hole.

Described by participants in the 1931 tournament as an ideal championship course, the Athens Country Club course, where the tournament will be held, is one of the finest golf courses in the state. Designed several years ago by a well-known course architect, the Athens course will test the metal of aspiring golf champions.

The course is built on a series of small hills located about two miles from the heart of Athens. There are hazards, traps and other tests of golfing ability, and plenty of them. Water hazards on the course are especially hard. A small lake flows through the heart of the course. The ninth hole is divided by the lake.

SAZERAC TAKES LOUISIANA RACE

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Jockey C. Landolt steered Sazerac, three-year hopeful of A. B. Letellier, of New Orleans, to victory over six other nominees for the March 19 Louisiana derby in the $3,000 derby trial handicap today at the Fair Grounds.

A 4-to-1 shot, Sazerac beat E. R. Bradley's Bertjohn, the favorite, to the wire by a nose, paying $10.60 to win, $4.60 place and $3.60 show on the $2 mutuels. Bertjohn paid $3 and $2.80, and P. C. Thompson's Crystal Prince, taking the show money, paid $4.60. S. W. Labrot's Springsteel was fourth.

The race over a mile, was run in 1:39 3-5 on a fast track. The record is 1:37 4-5.

The victory was worth $2,540 to Letellier.

The trial early developed into a duel between Sazerac and Springsteel, with the pair fighting it out head and head. Springsteel appeared to have the advantage over the first three-quarters. The Labrot horse, however, failed to keep the pace in the stretch where Bertjohn moved up and made a real bid, only to be beaten by a neck.

Bertjohn finished a length and a half in front of Crystal Prince, who held a contending position throughout, passing the judges' stand a length in front of Springsteel.

Prince Farthing, Jimmy Sutro, Princess A. O. also ran.

Although the derby trial featured the day, Jockey Gilbert Elston, recently laid up by a leg injury, returned to defend his title of leading Fair Grounds rider by bringing in three straight winners, Worldly Lad in the second, Donna Dear in the third, and Chimney Sweep in the fourth.

Campbell, With Five New Speed Records, Ends Further Attempts

BAD CONDITIONS CAUSE DECISION OF BRITISH ACE

Briton To Give Dinner Today for Mechanics and Officials.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27. (UP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell's record-breaking attempts for this season are over.

The English speed demon today announced that he will make no further attempts for automobile records and that he has already ordered his famous Bluebird crated and shipped home.

Campbell reached this decision after taking an early morning spin on the beach and found the course unsatisfactory for further trials.

When he sails for England, Campbell will take with him five new world speed records. They are

One mile, 253.968 miles per hour.

One kilometer, 251.340 miles per hour.

Five miles, 242.751 miles per hour.

Five kolometers, 247.941 miles per hour.

Ten kilometers, 238.669 miles per hour.

With the exception of the 10-kilometer, Campbell held all other previous records.

In addition to the above named titles, Campbell will return home the only person ever to travel 267 miles per hour on land.

The fact that he had attained that speed out of his car on the record-breaking run south last Wednesday, made Campbell reluctant to abandon further attempts to create better times for the mile and kolmeter. Yesterday he made another try but failed to reach the desired speed. He had hoped that the beach today would prove to be in better shape but the early morning trial convinced Campbell that his run yesterday was the last here this year.

Tomorrow night Campbell will give a dinner to his mechanics and members of the racing organization.

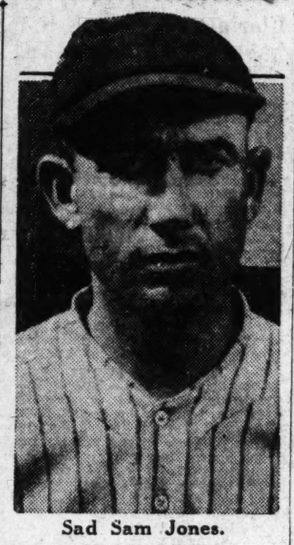

He plans to leave here either Tuesday or Wednesday for Washington and sail March 4 on the Berengaia.

Campbell tentatively accepted an invitation to return here next year with the Bluebird.

Jones and Grimes, Most Traded Aces, Each To Hurl for Sixth Club in 1932

Burleigh Grimes.

Sad Sam Jones.

By Bill Ritt,

Central Press Sports Editor.

The same star must guide the fates of Pitcher Sam Jones and Pitcher Burleigh Grimes, the big leagues' two most traveled veteran pitchers.

Both began their professional careers in the midwest in the same year—1913.

Both have been traded to their sixth major league team.

Both will pitch for Chicago in 1932, but in different leagues.

Both weigh the same—175 pounds, are right-handers, and have pitched for New, Boston, St. Louis—and now—Chicago—clubs.

But never have they been opponents or teammates. Their first chance in 18 years to face each other in battle may come next fall in the Chicago city series—if there is one and they happen to pitch in the same game.

Though Jones and Grimes have been heavy winners in pennant play, neither has been able to win more world series games than they lost.

Jones appeared in four world series—five games—lost two, won none and did not get a decision in three. Grimes has appeared in three World Series—seven games—won three, lost four.

Both pitchers figured in the two oustanding player deals in the majors since the 1931 season closed.

Grimes went from the St. Louis Cardinals to the Cubs in exchange for Outfielder Hack Wilson, the one-time major league home run king, and Pitcher Bud Teachout.

Jones was sent to the White Sox by Washington along with Pitcher Irving Hadley and Infielder Jack Hayes for Outfielder Carl Reynolds and Infielder Johnny Kerr.

There was a time when you could not buy either Jones or Grimes—when Jones was winning pennants for Boston and New York, and Grimes was copping a flag for Brooklyn.

But there was also a time when you could have had the two of them for $1,200. Detroit, in 1913, paid Ottumwa, Iowa, $400 for Grimes and then let him get away without a trial. Cleveland paid $800 for Jones in 1914 in getting him away from Zanesville, Ohio, and then traded him to Boston in the Tris Speaker deal.

LEADING DOGS MAKING READY FOR BIG EVENT

National Field Trials at Grand Junction Start Monday.

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(AP)—The old atmosphere of the hunt is returning to Grand Junction with the influx of trainers and bird dogs who will pair off in the first heats of the national championship field trials Monday morning.

As in years past for more than a quarter of a century, the country's finest pointers and setters will race one another to coveys on the Hobart Ames plantation two miles north of here.

The stake, which probably will be somewhat smaller this year, included a guaranteed purse of $1,000 and a leg on the coveted sterling silver trophy.

TWENTY STARTERS.

Twenty dogs probably will start, although 24 have been nominated. The four that are not expected to start are the setter, Chief's Lad Whitestone, owned by W. H. McNaughton, of Jersey City; the famous pointer bitch Junedale Allie, owned by Dr. W. F. Lakey, of Boston; Berris Lady Bimpkins, owned by Miss Claudia Phelps, of Aiken, S. C., and Rosedale Jack, pointer owned by Dr. W. F. Vail, Greenwich, Conn.

Favor of many of the early comers has ben put on Superlette, pointer bitch of A. G. Sage, New York sportsman. Superlette won the American field futurity in 1926 and has taken the free-for-all championship three times. Clyde Morton, sage trainer, has been here getting the dog ready.

RUNNER-UP GROOMED.

Yankee Doodle Jack, runner-up in the national last year, also is being groomed for the long marathon, with regular workouts.

Algonquin and Susquehanna Tom, prime entries of the Lebanon kennels, of Lebanon, Pa., are being trained by Jake Bishop. Shore's Carolina Jack and Rex's Tarheelia, favorites of T. Carey Bailey, Baltimore sportsman, arrived today.

Three other dogs which might end up in the final competition, Norias Roy and Norias Annie, owned by W. C. Teagle, of the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey, and Kremlin, outstanding entry of Jacob France of Baltimore, will arrive tomorrow morning.

Harness Mark Is Broken by Pair

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 27.—(AP) Coolidge, owned by the Pine Needles stables here, and Happy the Great, owned by H. Stacy Smith, of Newark, N. J., smashed the world's record for the half-mile double harness exhibition trot, covering the distance in 2 minutes, 9 1-2 seconds. Smith drove himself.

Smith's horses, Happy the Great and Laurel Leaf, held the previous record, 2:10 1-2.

The exhibition today had been intended merely as a workout for a later attempt to lower the world mark, but a large crowd was on hand, and judges expressed amazement at the speed shown. One judge timed the horses at 2:9 flat.

George Little Made Rutgers Sport Head

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 27.—(UP)—George Little, former head of the department of physical education at the University of Wisconsin, has been appointed the first director of physical education at Rutgers University. He will assume his duties April 1.

Little, who will be in charge of intercollegiate athletics, physical instruction and student health at Rutgers, was head football coach at Wisconsin in 1926 and 1927. He resigned as coach in 1928 to give his full attention to administrative duties.

After graduating from Ohio State University, he became head football coach at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and later coached football at the University of Michigan.

The division of physical education at Rutgers was established last July.

SCHAAF CAN KAYO SCHMELING—STRIB

It was then that Stribling asked to be allowed to continue.

SHARKEY PLEASED.

Jack Sharkey, Schaaf's teacher and co-worker, was pleased with his protege's achievement, but he felt the greatest sympathy for Stribling. He declared the Georgian made one of the gamest fights any heavyweight had ever made.

"It took the highest sort of courage to go through with what he did," Sharkey said. "I was anxious to go to his corner and congratulate him for it."

Stribling was up long before sunrise today, his face puffed and his eyes cut, and he started out on an 800-mile automobile trip with a companion to his home in Macon, Ga.

While Stribling was tearing over the roads they were attempting to match Schaaf for a 10-round battle with Mickey Walker, the toy bulldog, who was credited with giving Sharkey such a hard fight a few months ago. The bout, if closed, probably will be staged at the Chicago stadium March 18, with King Levinsky meeting the winner.

"OLD FRED" DIES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 27.—(UP)—"Old Fred," reputed oldest horse in the world, owned by Howard G. Ferguson, Canadian high commissioner in London, is dead at the Ferguson estate at Kemptville. The horse was believed to be 43 years old.

BURKE IS LOW IN FLORIDA PLAY

Open Champion Takes Lead in West Coast Tournament.

BELLEAIR HEIGHTS, Fla., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Billy Burke, national open golf champion, shot two sub-par rounds of 70 each in the first 36 holes of the Florida west coast open championship here today to win medal honors with 140.

Three strokes behind came Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., tied at 143 with Johnny Farrell, Quaker Ridge, and Wiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, while three other veteran campaigners, Bill Mehlhorn, Harry Cooper and Herman Barron, were tied at 144.

Runyan's morning round of 75 was undistinguished but on his afternoon round he turned in 68, low 18 for the day. Farrell had 73-70—143 and Cox 70-73—143.

Gene Sarazen, defending champion, was off form and required 78-74—152, 12 strokes behind the flying Burke, which eliminated him from the fight for the Plant memorial trophy and the winner's purse.

Walter Hagen, playing with Burke, took 73-75—148, a score equalled by Densmore Shute, Clarence Clark and Ray Mangrum. Three strokes better, however, was Johnny Kinder with 145.

Babe Ruth, making his initial tournament appearance, got away to a fair start with 37 on his outward nine, one over par, but slipped to 42 coming back and closed out the day, 79-78—157.

5 Horses Barred In 'Ringer' Case

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(UP)—The Florida racing commission at a meeting today ruled off the men and horses connected with the recent Gailmont "ringer" case at Hialeah park, following the recommendations of the Miami Jockey Club.

J. P. Crawford and Willis Kane, owners; and Trainer A. F. Tavenner and the horses Dunrock, Lindby, Polish Prince, Danish Prince and Gailmont were affected by the action.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(UP)—The license of Jockey William Smith was revoked by the Florida racing commission today in connection with alleged irregularities practiced by the stable of W. T. "Fatty" Anderson at Hialeah park. Anderson was suspended by the Hialeah stewards about two weeks ago and Smith's case was turned over to the racing commission for disciplinary action.

Lott and Allison Meet for Crown

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Wilmer Allison, Austin, Texas, tennis star, was forced to the limit here today to defeat August Vollmer, Cuban champion, in the semi-finals of the Pan-American tennis championships. The score was 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4.

Vollmer was steady and full of drive in the first two sets, but weakened thereafter under Allison's brilliant baseline play. The Texan early learned the danger of attempting to play the net against the Cuban's smashing forehand play.

In the other bracket, George Lott, Chicago, won a tough battle from S. Gilbert Hall, of East Orange, N. J., 7-9, 6-2, 7-5, 6-3. Lott's brilliance at the baseline and steadiness in general, told.

Lott meets Allison for the title on the Flamingo courts here Sunday. Lott and Marcell Rainville, of Canada, meet Allison and Hall for the doubles title.

Dawson Club Shows Great Improvement

DAWSON, Ga., Feb. 27—Organized less than a year ago, the Dawson Golf Club bids fair to become one of the best in this section of the state, improvements now being made giving to enthusiasts of the game an ideal nine-hole course.

Work of making permanent greens at all holes, rolling and mowing fairways, placing benches, trellises and shrubbery at suitable places and erecting a caddy house is in progress and will be completed at an early date.

Macon Meet Is Called By Loop

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Roy Williams, president of the Southeastern league, today called a directors' meeting for next Sunday to complete details for operating the loop this year.

The meeting will be held in Montgomery, Ala., at 11 o'clock in the Exchange hotel.

Mr. Williams said a proposed schedule would be ratified, umpires considered and other routine matters cleared up.

The call was taken here as indicating Macon had obtained sufficient backing to assure this city of a place in the league.

STATE TOURNEY OPENS MARCH 3

Athens Will Be Host To Annual High School Play.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 27.—High school basketball teams representing the ten congressional districts of Georgia and one from the state at large will gather here Thursday, March 3, for the annual state high school tournament, sponsored by the University of Georgia Athletic Association.

Teams for the tournament have not yet been selected, although tournaments are being played. The ten district tournaments will be over Monday. The G. I. A. A. will form the district-at-large and the winner of that tournament will appear in the state tourney.

The basketball teams will arrive in Athens Wednesday and Thursday and will be quartered at Athens hotels for the durations of their stay in the tournament. The teams will be guests of 11 Georgia fraternities at meals during the three days. Winner of the tournament will be given a silver loving cup by the Georgia Athletic Association.

Carnesville High school was 1931 state champions.

Foster, of Howard, On All-Dixie Quint

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 27.—(AP) Captain Cherry Foster, of Howard, the one-man circus of the Dixie conference basketball tournament, headed the all-conference team selected by 10 coaches and officials.

Foster, easily the class of the tournament, was the only unanimous choice for the team. His shooting and generalship in engineering a rally that enabled the Bulldogs to come from behind and defeat Millsaps in the semi-finals, was the outstanding feat of the three days of play. He was selected for a forward post.

Reno, Mississippi College, received one less vote than Foster to clinch a guard post. Haley, Chattanooga, was selected for his running mate with eight votes.

Davis, Mississippi College, was the choice of six to play forward opposite Foster, and Knight, Southwestern, received a like number of ballots to nose out Taylor, Mississippi College, at center.

The second team selection included Walter, Birmingham-Southern, and Taylor, Mississippi College, forwards; Olinger, Chattanooga, center; Stonestreet, Millsaps, and Lane, Millsaps, guards. Lane, a forward was shifted to guard.

Sylvester Defeats Donaldsonville, 19-16

SYLVESTER, Ga., Feb. 27.—Sylvester defeated Donaldsonville, 19 to 16, here last night in the finals of southwest Georgia Boys' High school basketball tournament. It was the best played game of the tournament. Sylvester will meet the winner of the Albany-Quitman game for the championship of southwest Georgia. The game will be played on a neutral court.

GAME FORFEITED.

Sacred Heart was given a forfeited game over the Atlanta Opportunity girls Saturday afternoon when the latter failed to appear at the Y. W. C. A. court on Auburn avenue. The Sacred Heart team will close its season next Saturday against Saint Joseph at the Y. W. C. A.

'Wop' Glover Signs To Coach Football

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—(UP)—It was reported reliably here today that Harry "Wop" Glover, star halfback of the Tulane Green Wave, had signed as assistant coach to Ralph Vince, at John Carroll University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Crisler Leaves To Assume New Post

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler, athletic director at the University of Minnesota, will leave tomorrow night for Princeton to meet officials and students there. He will become head football coach at Princeton next fall.

Crisler, who came here from the University of Chicago coaching staff two years ago, is expected back within a week. While in the east he may decide on associates in the 1932 football staff at the Big Three institution.

Meanwhile, four names were mentioned as possible successors for Crisler's position as athletic director. They were Bernie Bierman, former Tulane football coach who returned to Minnesota this winter; Elton C. (Tad) Wieman, who was head football line coach under Crisler; Dr. L. J. Cooke, assistant director of athletics at Minnesota at the present time, and Vernon Williams, former Gopher football star and former assistant dean of student affairs here.

Atcheson Retains Y Handball Crown

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Sam Atcheson, of Memphis, Tenn., today retained his national Y. M. C. A. handball singles championship by decisively beating Albert Hobelman, of Baltimore, 21-17, 21-6.

Atcheson displayed the same coolness and steadiness which enabled him to march through the field. In the first game he got off to a big early lead, but let down somewhat and Hobelman brought the score to 19-17. Atcheson won handily in a final spurt.

In the second game the Tennessean had little trouble and toyed with Hobelman, himself a former champion, throughout.

John Endzevick, of Cleveland, defeated Joe Godreau, also of Cleveland, for third place in the tournament, 2-21, 21-17, 21-20.

A. A. U. Basketball Play Starts Tuesday

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 27.—(AP)—One of the largest and strongest gatherings of men's basketball teams in history will congregate here next week for the southern open A. A. U. championship.

First games are scheduled for Tuesday and the tournament will extend through Friday.

Texas entries thus far exceed other states, but strong teams from several Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi towns will be here. These include the Gifford-Hill Company team of Forest Hills, La. Teams from Shreveport, Monroe and Baldwyn, Miss., are expected.

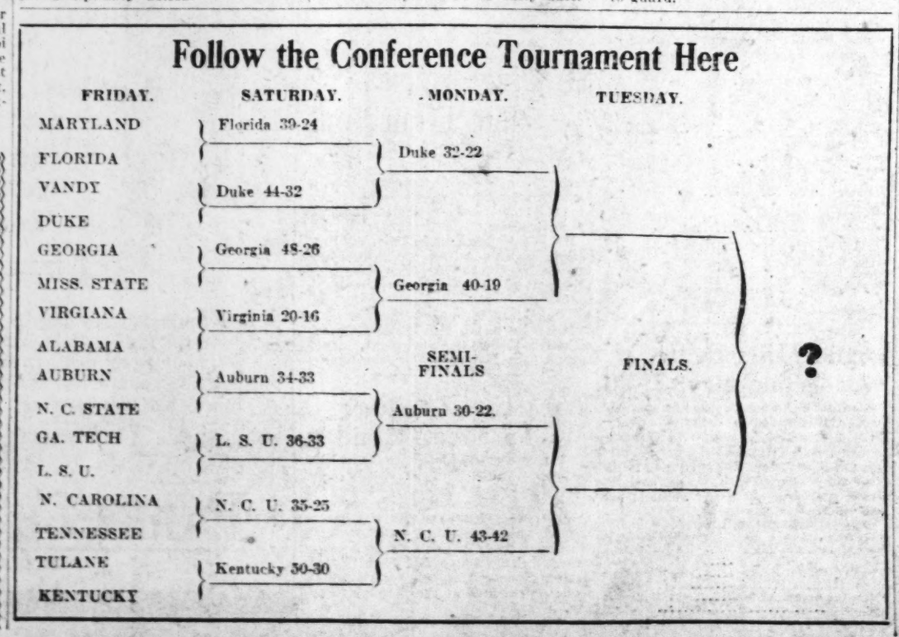

Crowley Follows 'Advice of Rock'

EAST LANSING, Mich., Feb. 27. (UP)—Following the advice of his old friend and coach, Knute K. Rockne, that he stay in one place and build for the future, James E. (Sleepy Jim) Crowley, one of the country's outstanding young football coaches, today turned down an offer to become head football coach at the University of Iowa.

Crowley, who gained fame as one of the "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame, will remain in charge of football at Michigan State College. His contract expires here in 1933.

Crowley was not offered more money to remain at East Lansing, it was said, although friends and alumni of the college probably will make up privately the difference between his salary and Iowa's offer.

CONTROL, NOTABLE ADVANCE IN MOTOR CARS, USED BY 8 MAKERS

Use of Vacuum for Clutch Reduces Foot Pedal Effort

BY DR. E. Y. WATSON.
(Copyright, 1932, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

DETROIT, Feb. 27.—Control, one of the notable advances credited to automobile design of 1932, is utilized on eight different makes of cars. On a limited number of lower-priced lines, it is listed as optional equipment at extra cost.

Its use falls into two divisions. The first is vacuum control with free-wheeling as incidental or a "by-product," as engineers term it. The second is a combination of the vacuum principle with free-wheeling, in which the vacuum operation is limited but nevertheless effective.

These are the chief ways in which the new method of operating a clutch becomes effective. A third is the attachment of a separate vacuum mechanism which may be placed on any car of modern design as optional or extra. In such instances, the cars in all probability have not been designed with a view to the use of it.

Free-wheeling without vacuum mechanism is now standard on 19 other makes and on one other make is optional.

A recent analysis of vacuum use for clutch control credits it with eliminating much foot pedal effort, besides simplifying the operations required in starting a car, changing the gears and bringing a car to a stop. With the present trend toward larger automobiles with larger engines, the clutches have not increased in size, it is pointed out. Instead, they have been kept small and light to help synchronizing in gear shifting and because space available for the clutch in the chassis of today is limited.

Therefore more spring pressure had to be applied and clutch operation with the foot has become real work. It is estimated that in city driving it involves at least 75 foot pounds of work per mile. In congested traffic, this amount of effort is multiplied numerous times.

Other Applications.

As a source of power, vacuum drawn from manifolds is considered economical because it does not represent additional gasoline consumption like electric or other direct drive sources of power from an engine.

Other power applications of vacuum drawn from manifolds are found in gasoline vacuum tanks, the vacuum-controlled ignition distributor, the vacuum brake booster and the windshield wiper. For the first time, the 1932 cars bring this source of power into use for clutch operation. With the throttle closed and the engine running, the vacuum thus created is ample, and at faster speeds becomes greater, giving force that will do considerable work and do it quickly.

Should vacuum control at any time fail, which is unlikely, because few of its parts work under stress, it would not be serious because the car can still be operated using the foot pedal control in the conventional way.

As additional recommendation for vacuum, the engineers say that any device that saves work in driving an automobile is desirable because it adds to pleasure and comfort and conserves driving energy. The vacuum clutch also is credited with exercising an appeal to the average driver because it helps to make the automobile drive itself.

Skill Is Automatic.

As a development, it is termed the evolution of an effort to produce a device which would do automatically what a skilled driver would do in pedal or manual operation.

Factory installation therefore is usually more satisfactory on a car than addition as an accessory because the maker has engineered his car to get the best results.

With spring and a return to open-air driving conditions just around the corner, the profusion of convertible cars that the manufacturers have produced for this year will become more apparent.

Closed car usage at last reports amounted to more than 90 per cent in America's motoring. Current interest in the radical changes that body design seems to be headed for point to a trend which slates the convertible sedans and roadsters for widened preference. The demand for them has been foreseen in the new 1932 ranges of models.

Progress has been such that the body builders have made a real job of replacing conventional open car side curtains with safety plate glass windows. When raised the windows fit into metal-reinforced, rubber-lipped weather-strips incorporated in the tops, giving a tight seal. With the top down, the windows may be left in an upright position to serve as a windbreak.

In quick changing, the convertibles will leave something to be desired, but research, working hand in hand with inventive skill, is simplifying the problem and soon may solve it to provide closed cars with the open-air thrill when desired.

Packard New Eights, Twelves Go on Display Here Tomorrow

The Packard Motor Car Company today announced the introduction of a completely new car, the Packard light eight. At the same time it made known that it has re-established the Packard Twin Six as the leader of its lines of automobiles.

These two new cars now give Packard four complete lines, with 41 body models, in addition to its individual custom cars. The company enters a lower price field, new to Packard with the light eight which it proclaims to be in every way a Packard.

The twin six, which revives memories of one of the country's best known motor cars, the Packard twin six of 15 years ago, enters that exclusive and limited production field where the last word in motoring luxury is demanded and where prices are correspondingly higher.

In announcing that it is again building a 12-cylinder motor for automobiles, Packard points out that it was the first to produce a 12-cylinder car in this country, and perhaps in the world, and that it has been engaged ever since the introduction of the original twin six, which occurred in July, 1915, in the designing and manufacturing of twin six motors. The company referred in this to the long line of marine and aircraft engines using the Vee type 12-cylinder principle. These engines started with the original Packard aircraft engine which was created from the experience gained in designing and making the twin six car motor and which was the basis of the design of the famous war-time Liberty engine. They continued after the Liberty engine with others more powerful, each new design successively being the most powerful aircraft or motor boat engine in the world. The latest types were the first to propel a human being at 100 miles an hour in a boat. They have been used by Gar Wood, famous speed boat racer, for several years and power his latest marine speed creation.

Following the ending of the war and with public thought turned strongly toward economy Packard adopted the 8-cylinder in line motor for its cars. It popularized this type in this country. It continued to offer the twin six, however, until the 8-cylinder was developed to the point where it surpassed the old twin six. Now after 16 years Packard has created a modernized interpretation of the twin six. The new engine is the same in principle as the original twin six but has twice as much power, giving greatly increased performance.

At the same time Packard is continuing with the eight in line engine. The motor in the light eight is of the straight eight type, with still further improvements, which are incorporated in the standard eight and the Packard eight de luxe, the other two of Packard's present four lines. In both of these latter cars have been incorporated other outstanding improvements found in the two new cars.

All four cars have a new Packard silent synchromesh transmission in which all three forward speeds are quiet.

In appearance the twin six car is much the same as the de luxe eight. The hood has the same long slim lines, made possible by the unusual design of the engine which holds it to an overall width hardly greater than that of a straight eight motor. The radiator is somewhat different, with a more pronounced Vee, vertical sides, and a narrow strip of the radiator shell extending down the apex of the Vee which is painted as is the rest of the radiator. The automatic shutters of the radiator are chromium plated. The head lamps have the same stream lined Vee design as the radiator. The wheelbases of the twin sixes are the same as those of the de lux eights, 142 and 147 inches.

The light eight, a big car with a wheelbase of 128 inches, shows a striking new radiator and sweeping stream line curves throughout. The light eight radiator retains the characteristic Packard lines but narrows down and sweeps forward at the bottom in a long graceful curve to merge into the front fenders.

Both the light eight and twin six have the Packard ride control as do the standard eight and the de luxe eight. Through this device shock absorbers can be instantly adjusted to meet all driving, riding and weather conditions. It is operated by a push pull knob, conveniently located near the steering column.

Bodies of all the Packard cars are insulated against heat, cold and noise. Springs are covered with a flexible metal covering and are permanently lubricated, insurance against spring squeak. The popular louver doors, pioneered in this country by Packard, also are found in all models. They serve the useful purpose of keeping the engine warm as well as adding to the appearance.

Another feature which has proved popular with Packard owners and which now bids fair to be adopted in other cars is found in all models. It is the installation of deep, roomy compartments at each end of the instrument board for gloves, papers, maps or small parcels. Last year Packard equipped all three ventilators in the cowl with screens to keep out bees and other insects. These screens are said to have proved not only convenient but also important from the standpoint of safety. Cars of all four lines are now so equipped.

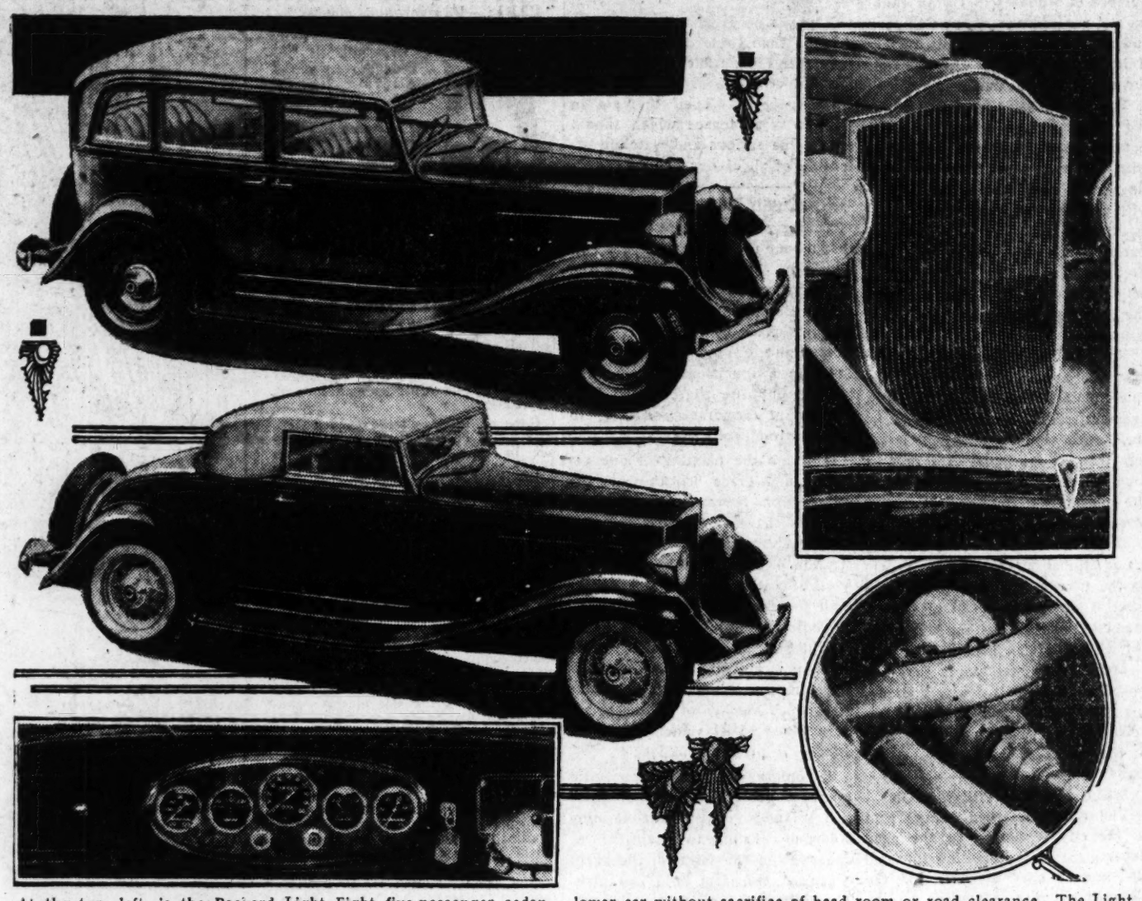

Engines in Packard cars now run from 110 horsepower in the light eight to more than 150 horsepower in the twin six. The de luxe eight motor now develops 135 horsepower and the lighter standard eight develops in excess of 110 horsepower.

The new twin six is declared to be the culmination of all Packard's 16 years of building 12-cylinder engines. It is striking in appearance as well as in design. Its horsepower rating is at a conservative engine speed of 3,600 revolutions per minute but it can operate normally at 4,500 r.p.m.

Injuries Fatal.

HUMBOLDT, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(AP) D. C. Hayes, 18, injured when he failed in an attempt to "hop a ride" on a freight train, died at his home here last night.

The men in this shop have been in the work on the Overland Company cars for many years and are considered thorough in every detail.

Five New Series of Nash Cars Are Shown by J. M. Harrison

KENOSHA, Wis., Feb. 27.—(Special.)—Nash Motors today announced five entirely new and radically advanced groups of automobiles.

Twenty-seven brilliant new models, all marked by the long, low, "slip-stream" design, perfected through Nash adaptation of aero-dynamics to minimize wind resistance, and replete with more than 100 additional advancements in motor car engineering, are included in this epic presentation. They represent the culmination of years of sound engineering development, and the largest preparatory investments ever made for new models by C. W. Nash and the famous manufacturing organization which has produced and marketed nearly one million fine motor cars in 15 successful years.

Four straight-eight groups and a commanding big six series make up the new Nash line. Leading with the presentation is the Ambassador Twin-Ignition Eight series with 125 horsepower and a wheelbase of 142 inches. The Advanced Twin-Ignition Eight series with 133-inch wheelbase develops 125 horsepower; the Special Twin-Ignition Eight with 128-inch wheelbase, 100 horsepower; the Standard Straight-Eight with 121-inch wheelbase, 85 horsepower, and the Big Six on the extra long 116-inch wheelbase affords 70 horsepower.

Silent, underslung worm drive axles—a major engineering advancement of the Ambassador 8, Advanced 8 and Special 8 series—are among the most important of the new Nash comfort, economy and performance achievements.

Other vital features of the entire line include: New X-dual, twist-proof frames with the massive X-dual member extending practically the entire length of the chassis to virtually supply two frames in one and afford battleship strength; new dash-regulated, full range shock absorber control; new centrifuse, cast iron lined brake drums on all eights; aluminum alloy connecting rods, drilled for oil—an exceptionally costy engineering practice in all of the motors—and aluminum alloy pistons; silent, synchro-shift transmission and synchro-shift free wheeling; new improved carburetion with air-cooled gasoline lines; complete and unparalleled sound-proofing of all bodies and chassis; new silent dual mufflers; larger tires on smaller, sturdier wheels, and scores of intriguing and valuable body and chassis refinements.

The new Nash "slip-stream" body designs constitutes one of the most important advancements made in recent years. Two principal factors are involved in this basic design, which adds infinitely to the grace and beauty of the entire line. The first tends to minimize air resistance, making it possible for the cars to slip through the air with less effort, with less fuel consumption and at higher speeds. The second leads to a better utilization of the space within the bodies for the comfort and pleasure of driver and passengers.

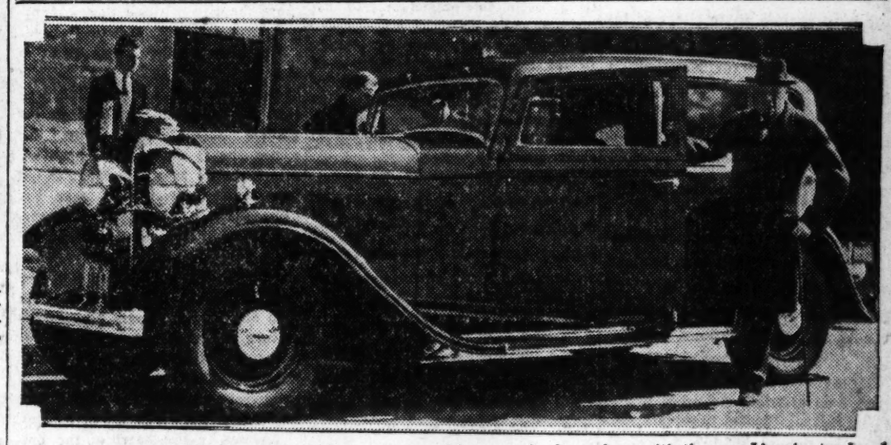

A number of interesting details contributes to these accomplishments. The attractive V-shaped fronts of all the cars serve to split the wind at high speeds. Slanting windshields slip the air stream upward instead of offering a flat surface to air pressure, and the curve of the handsome new fenders merging into the new steel-and-rubber running boards also reduces the elemental pressure. The sweeping curve of the roof line continues the slipping action. New Nash bodies are widest at their center, narrowing down toward the rear. This also tends to slip the air away at both sides. The curving or "beavertail" back design, which is a distinctive feature of the new Nash, is another important factor. It reduces the "pull" set up by swirling air which ordinarily whirls behind a swiftly moving car and creates a vacuum behind the body, thus holding the car back.

The new, underslung worm drive, which actually improves with use and is one of the longest-lived, most silent and trouble-free units known to motor car engineering, permits two essential improvements. It reduces the over-all height of the cars without decreasing headroom, thus increasing driving safety and roadability; and makes it possible to cradle the rear seat in a position ahead of the rear axle, instead of directly over it as in conventional bodies. With both front and rear seats located between the axles and consequently away from direct axle contact, road jars and vibration, a new and sensational "cradled" riding action is produced. Each inch that the new Nash cars have been lowered eliminates approximately 40 square inches of air pressure against the car at high speeds. Thus the new Nash rear axle and "beavertail" Nash design materially increase the performance qualities of the new cars in addition to multiplying riding comfort for driver and passengers.

In appearance the new models are a revelation in trim symmetry. They are new from the ground up and reveal strikingly attractive details in design. A few of these features include: New color combinations, pronounced V-type fronts; new headlight brackets and tie-bar; two horns mounted on lamp brackets; single-bar bumpers front and rear; exceptionally long, graceful hoods with door-type ventilators and concealed hood fasteners; slanting, non-glare windshields; slip-stream fenders merging into massive steel-and-rubber running boards; refined fender and tail lights with two rear fender tail and stop lights on the Ambassador 8, Advanced 8 and Special 8 models; smaller, sturdier demountable wood and wire wheels with larger tires; three-spoke, pressed, hard rubber covered steel steering wheels and tilted tire carriers.

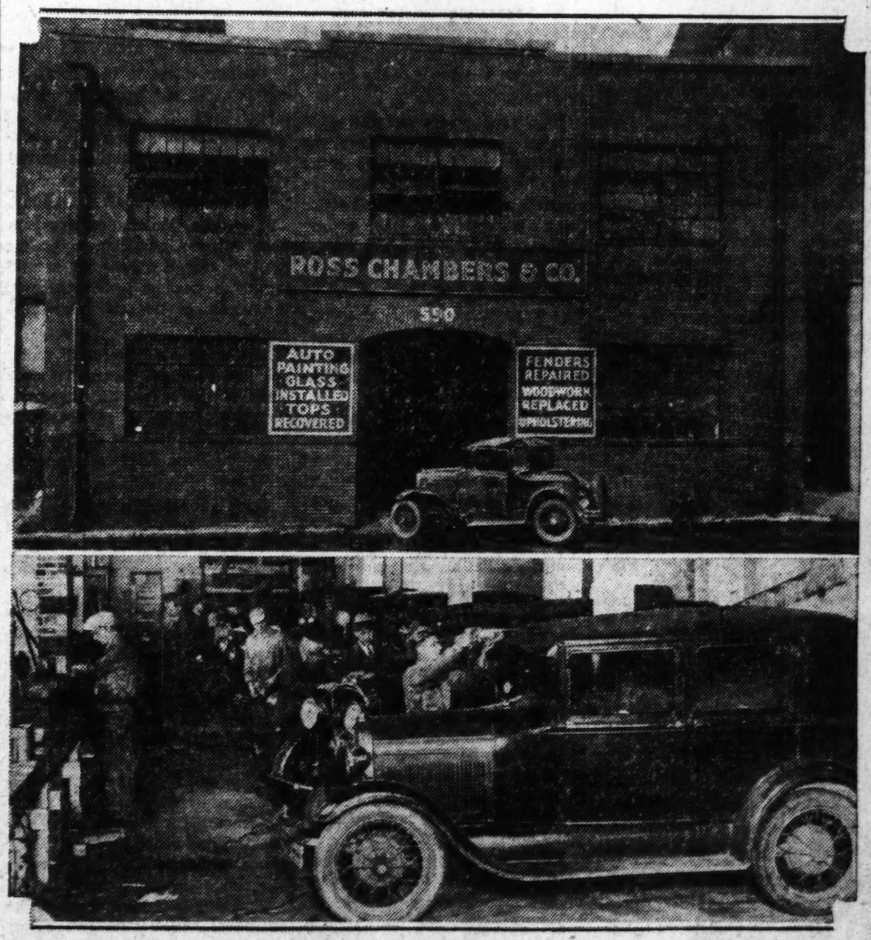

The factory list prices of this great new Nash ensemble illustrate again the company's remarkable manufacturing achievement in a value-building year. The five new Nash groups, designed to meet every motoring demand and to bring the world's finest workmanship to a point within the economic reach of all motor car owners, are offered at a price range of $777 to $2,055.

Famous English Lecturer Visits Atlanta

Another Auto Rebuiling Plant for Atlanta

Headed by Ross Chambers, veteran automobile rebuilder of Atlanta, the Ross Chambers Company recently opened their doors to Atlanta motorist and dealers. This company, while new as an organization, has in its repair departments men who are considered experts in each particular line, a rating that can only be attained by years of application in this work. In their home, 590 Courtland street, N. E., they offer complete automobile rebuilding and refinishing service. Here wrecked cars are completely rebuilt and refinished to such a degree that no signs of disaster is apparent. They offer services such as body rebuilding, refinishing, straightening where dented, top department; in fact, anything required to put a car back in A-1 shape. Top is the entrance to their building. Below, a view of the first floor, which gives a good idea of the popularity this company enjoys in spite of having been open only a few months.

Nash Presents Five Striking New Series

Long, low, alluring and replete with vital advancements in design and engineering, these representative models of the five new groups of Nash cars indicate the unparalleled automobile quality dveloped by the famous Nash manufacturing organization. The views include the Ambassador 8, five-passenger sedan; Advanced 8, four-door convertible sedan; Special 8, five-passenger Victoria; Standard 8, four-passenger convertible roadster; Big Six, five-passenger sedan, and a view of the new Big Six "beavertail" back—a back design which distinguishes the entire new line.

Accomplishments of Franklin Revealed in History of Co.

BY H. H. FRANKLIN,
President Franklin Automobile Company.

In 1901 we made the first air-cooled, four-cylinder, valve-in-head engine ever made in America. In 1902 this engine became the power unit of the first Franklin automobile.

Since that time it has been my privilege to see the automobile industry go through its various stages of development, and among these advances to see air-cooling developed to a point where it is recognized as one of the most important factors of the motor era just commencing.

From our early beginning with air-cooling, our design has adhered to such other principles as scientific light unsprung weight, full-elliptic springs and simplicity of construction. That these engineering policies have been sound is evidenced by the influence which they have had on practices now regarded as standard.

From our initial 13-car production in 1902 to the present production of our great modern plant in Syracuse has been a long, steady growth marked by many special achievements in design. In addition to being pioneers of air-cooling, we introduced the first four-cylinder engine, the first six, the seven-bearing crankshaft, valve-in-head cylinders, the sedan body, the sports closed car, narrow, clear-vision corner posts, low body design, drive through springs, automatic spark advance, intake yoke heater, electric carburetor primer, non-stalling engine, aluminum pistons, vibration absorber, and other features.

Our 1932 supercharged Airman represents our greatest single stride in automotive progress in one year's time. Pressure air-cooling in connection with spot temperature control gives us cooling efficiency and power output of unquestioned superiority. The supercharged produces quicker acceleration and greater pulling power in the lower speed ranges that matches our brilliant, smooth, high-speed performance. This and other features made possible by the air-cooling principle, together with the adoption of Startix in conjunction with free-wheeling and ride control, make the 1932 Airman a product which we are proud to offer as the crowning achievement of design progress in our first 30 years of history.

Goodrich Employes To Support Plan Against Hoarding

The entire organization of the B. F. Goodrich Company, including all employees, dealers and representatives, numbering in excess of 60,000 people in the United States, were this week requested by James D. Tew, president of the Goodrich Company, to actively support the federal government's campaign to eliminate hoarding of funds.

In a letter sent from the company's executive offices in Akron, Ohio, Tew told his organization that "Participation in the movement by our citizens will, we believe, hasten the return of normal business conditions throughout the country, and it is sincerely hoped that Goodrich personnel will contribute its share of support to these highly constructive measures."

"The government action to rebuild confidence in our national institutions so essential to our economic well-being, is deserving of the full co-operation of every American," the rubber company executive said.

"INFAMOUS AND DAMNING FORM OF RACKETEERING."

William M. Franklin is commissioner of the Oklahoma securities commission, more, he is president of the southern group of the National Association of Securities Commissioners, which comprises the following named 14 states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia. Obviously, Commissioner Franklin should be acquainted with numerous forms of securities, including those put on the market by various and sundry holding companies.

From Commissioner Franklin, who keeps a watchful eye on all phases of the holding company situation, The Constitution has received a letter, in which the Oklahoman indorses The Constitution's efforts to put a stop to the pillage of the consumer and the innocent investor by organized pastmasters of inflated financing.

Commissioner Franklin's attention was attracted to The Constitution's fight against predatory inflationists by the publication in the Congressional Record of February 15, of a series of editorials which had appeared in these columns.

The Constitution prints the following communication from the man whose training and ability have won for him the presidency of the southern group of the National Association of Securities Commissioners:

Editor Constitution: I have just read your editorials published in the Congressional Record February 15, 1932, relating to the racketeering of holding companies.

You have forcibly pointed to a vice-disease in our economic system, which should be removed at once. Palliative measures will not suffice. A little salve on the outward manifestation will not remove the cancerous growth.

A lengthy committee hearing will not reveal more than we already know, although the evidence may be piled up to show the appalling extent of the debauchery in high financing at the expense of consumers and the investing public. We now know of the nefarious and ruinous schemes and manipulations that have caused the rising tide of discontent which is lapping at the doorsteps of American homes.

Security commissions of different states can save the investing public many millions of dollars, but you have pointed to a situation that the states cannot cope with, and especially without the co-operation of the federal government. Congress should, as soon as possible, enact remedial legislation along the line you have suggested.

Of course, certain holding companies, against which your indictment is applicable, will protest. But if our legislators in Washington really represent the people they will immediately take the necessary steps to stop the most infamous and damning form of racketeering that has been blighting the prospects, hopes and aspirations of our people.

I commend the fight you are making against an evil that is greatly responsible for economic distress.

WILLIAM M. FRANKLIN,
Oklahoma Securities Commissioner.
Oklahoma City,
Feb. 20, 1932.

As Commissioner Franklin asserts, the states alone are unable to cope with a scheme which ignores boundary lines, circumvents state laws, and has developed over-capitalization and profit-grabbing into a fine art. It is impossible for the states to follow the sinuous and ruinous path of these predatory holding companies, whose sole excuse for existing is their capacity for squeezing profits out of watered stock by following both the innocent investor and the helpless consumer. Even seasoned stock traders are often baffled by the protean forms the holding company scheme assumes in the hands of greedy manipulators whose haunt is too often in investment banking houses.

None questions that there are holding companies which have proved of value in financing operating companies. Such holding companies have nothing to fear from federal control; indeed, they should invite and insist on federal regulations so stringent that those holding companies, which have been rapacious in their profit-grabbing, will be eliminated or controlled. It is this latter type of artificial stock-jobbing and high-financing organization which Commissioner Franklin brands as "the most infamous and damning form of racketeering that has been blighting the prospects, hopes and aspirations of our people."

Congress has, very properly, busied itself with the immediate needs of the nation. In this remedial work, essential to starting industry and finance on the road to recovery after the republican debacle, a democratic house of representatives has led the way. The time has now come to erect barriers which will prevent a recurrence of the disastrous conditions which were sowed in recent republican administrations, and which have been ignored by a helpless Hoover.

Lest we forget, The Constitution repeats the warning which it printed in this page three months ago—a warning which is no less than a mandate, for it is the wording of a plank adopted in 1924 by the democratic party in convention assembled.

While Coolidge and Hoover (then secretary of commerce) were watching in silence the stock-jobbing debauchery which was heading toward a fatal financial crash, the democratic party was inscribing in its platform the following words of sane advice, based on sound reasoning:

We favor the immediate passage of such legislation as may be necessary to enable the states efficiently to enforce their laws relating to the gradual financial strangling of innocent investors, workers and consumers caused by the indiscriminate promotion, refinancing and reorganizing of corporations on an insane basis, resulting already in the undermining and collapse of many railroads, public service and industrial corporations, manifesting itself in unemployment, irreparable loss and waste, and which constitute a serious menace to our economic system.

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Senator Wheeler are among the leading democrats who have made an intensive study of this menacing condition, particularly with reference to the public utility situation, where the holding company subterfuge has been so brazenly overdone. Their views echo the voice of democracy. The present moment is none too soon for federal action.

NEEDS OF COUNTY SCHOOLS.

The needs of the county schools and the efficiency of their management are emphasized in a communication, appearing on the opposite page, from Lucien Harris, prominent Atlanta insurance man, who was for many years a member of the county government.

Mr. Harris points out that as a member of special investigating committees of two separate grand juries he was able to judge of the physical condition, and the service being rendered by the county schools.

Both these committees reported back to the grand juries of which they were members praising the efficiency and economical management of the system, but setting forth in urgent terms the critical need for new buildings.

The presentments of the September term of the grand jury contained strong recommendations that a bond issue be ratified of sufficient size to permit the remedying of conditions at some of the schools which not only make proper instruction impossible, but are a menace to the health of the pupils. These recommendations appear on the opposite page in connection with Mr. Harris' communication.

The new school buildings of the county system are models of efficiency, sanity and safety, but insufficient funds has made it impossible for the board to do away with all of the old, ramshackle structures in which hundreds of the children of the county are now spending many hours each day.

In order to replace every school of this type, and to enlarge some of the more modern schools, the board is seeking the ratification of a $700,000 bond issue, which it pledges itself to meet out of its own revenues, thus obviating the necessity of a raise in the tax rate.

For 14 years the board has operated on the revenue received from the state and the county commissioners, plus a special school tax of 7 1-2 mills. Out of its revenues each year it has set aside an average sum of $60,000, above operating expenses, to be used in the construction of new buildings, for repairs and for the purchase of additional school sites.

The recent rapid increase in the number of students in Fulton county, and the addition of the Campbell and Milton county schools, makes it impossible to meet the demands for expansion in this manner.

The board is, therefore, asking the voters of the county to ratify a bond issue, which it will retire with the sum they have been setting aside each year. To comply with the state law, the special school assessment for operation will be reduced to 6 mills and a bond retirement sinking fund assessment of 1 1-2 mills will be levied—making the total assessment the same as it is now.

No bond issue proposition was ever more soundly based and the splendid record of businesslike management which has been made by the Fulton county schools guarantees that the maximum value will be received from each dollar spent in the enlargement and improvement of the system.

Under the law the board can levy an additional 2 1-2 mills by a vote of the people, and unless the bond issue is successful the increased demands upon the system will make this increased tax necessary.

From every standpoint the proposed bond issue is a wise and saving proposition, and it should receive the overwhelming indorsement of the voters of the county.

WELL NAMED, THE MACON.

The richly deserved tribute paid to the city of Macon by the navy department in the decision to name the newest navy dirigible for the Georgia city has, according to the Macon Telegraph, been made the occasion for "cheers—bronx and otherwise" by other cities which sought the honor.

The Telegraph admits that it was "embarrassed in a big way" at Cleveland's challenge to match its revolutionary namesake against Macon's, because, forsooth, it was "willing to compare old General Macon with anybody, but we were too polite to say we had never heard of Moses Cleveland."

It is natural that the cities which sought to have their name grace the newest aerial pride of the nation should be regretful over their failure to be designated, but it is surprising that their disappointment should cause them to criticise the eminently appropriate selection of Macon.

Certainly Macon's sister cities in Georgia rejoice with her in the honor done her, knowing full well that the illustrious history of the stanch revolutionary hero for whom she is named, and her own proud record as an upstanding and progressive municipality make her name one fully worthy of being carried aloft by the new giant of the air.

Few cities combine more of the best of the old and the new south than Macon. Her people possess the culture and gentleness that are our heritage of ante-bellum days and as a municipality she has shown a progressiveness typical of the best in modern American municipalities.

Located in the heart of the Empire state of the south, Macon is representative of both the traditions of the old south and the alertness of the new, and in recognizing her fitness for the honor paid her the navy department at the same time honors Georgia and the south.

A GRAVE MENACE.

Alarming increase in Georgia in certain social and sexual diseases is reported in the current issue of Georgia's Health," monthly publication of the Georgia department of public health.

In sending a copy of this publication to The Constitution a prominent Atlanta physician takes the position that the situation regarding these diseases is a menace to the homes of Georgia "second to none."

The state health officials point out that while the present laws are sufficient to cope with the situation, the apathy of the public is largely responsible for the rapid increase in these diseases now being recorded.

Some of the diseases are both communicable and inherited, and much more serious in their results than many contagious diseases which are carefully quarantined. The apparent indifference of the public is undoubtedly attributable to a combination of ignorance, reticence and fear.

The increase among negroes has been especially noticeable, bringing with it the threat of communication from house servants. The preparation of food, or the handling of dishes, by men or women suffering from these diseases, even in a latent form, could result in active germs being taken into the systems of members of the household.

Both the city and state health boards of health offer free examination and treatment for these diseases, and heads of families should see to it that immediate inspections are made of suspected servants.

Those unfortunate enough to contract one of the diseases should remember that failure to submit to immediate and proper treatment means not only danger for other members of their families, but the possibility that they will become chronic sufferers. Sure cures are known for these diseases if they are treated in time, but if they are neglected they may become fatal, carrying with them the dread threat of inheritance.

There is no greater threat to civilization than these diseases. They have been responsible in earlier days for the downfall of dynasties and whole peoples. Their increase in Georgia is a menace which should arouse the serious and watchful attention of all of our people.

INCREASED COTTON PROFITS.

Telling of wide interest attracted throughout the south in recent editorials in The Constitution on the beneficial results of farm co-operation in Denmark and the remarkable progress made by the Wrens (Ga.) Community Center, John H. Caulfield, in a special article printed in the opposite page, shows how Mississippi farmers are adding to their cotton profits.

Through the planting of one variety, high-grade cottonseed the farmers of Forrest and Simpson counties have, according to Mr. Caulfield, "given a practical demonstration of the means by which the south's cotton industry can be rebuilt to reach a profitable basis."

These two counties, long noted for the poor quality of cotton raised on their farms, are now producing a staple far above the average, and as a result an average of $# a bale has been added to its value, with a reduction in production costs.

It took a wise and patient farm agent to get the farmers of these two counties out of the farming doldrums. Failing to obtain the co-operation of the farmers, the agent organized the farm boys and girls. The first year their cotton brought $7.50 a bale more than that raised by their parents.

Then the fathers woke up and fell in line with the efforts to outlaw "mongrel" cottonseed for improved varieties. Soon a co-operative gin was in operation, reducing ginning costs from $6 to $3 a bale, and making a profit for the gin of 28 per cent per annum on the money invested.

What the Wrens Community Center and the farmers of these Mississippi counties have demonstrated can be done, is possible of accomplishment in every cotton producing county in Georgia.

Seven dollars and fifty cents a bale added value would have been salvation to the average Georgia cotton farmer last fall. If he does not get in next fall, it will be his own fault for refusing to learn from the experience of other farmers who have put modern methods of farming into the operation of their farms and materially improved their condition thereby.

NEGRO COMMUNITY CENTER.

Progress toward the development of a unique negro community center in Hancock county is reported in an article appearing on the opposite page.

The community center will be the outgrowth of a community founded more than 60 years ago by a group of three negro brothers, who have since become widely known for their educational work throughout the south.

Although their duties have taken them away from their native county, the Hubert brothers have kept in touch with the community, and the present "center" is a result of their conviction that the place where the great mass of our negro population can be the happiest and most prosperous is on the farm.

The new community center will have a school, with an accompanying shop, a vocational teacher in agriculture, another in home economics, a farm agent and a central building for recreation, educational and community meetings.

The negroes who live in the community own their own farms, practice diversified farming, are improving their homes and have themselves hewn the logs, hauled the stones from which the center's building will be constructed.

Already prominent white citizens, both in the north and south, have become interested in the progress towards better citizenship and more prosperous conditions being achieved by this community of negroes in Hancock county.

A similar movement in every county in Georgia having a large rural negro population would unquestionably be mutually beneficial to both whites and negroes and would be a long step toward balancing our agricultural production.

It is to be hoped that the reception given the stick-up men who attempted a raid of a Miami night club will be a warning to other Chicago gangsters that their home town is the safest place for them.

Major Campbell now has a new record and retains a whole neck, but still is not satisfied.

The Chicagoan who is stumping by plane might be said to be taking a "flyer in politics."

Old, New Russians Watch Far East.

White Russian Organization Could Muster Army of 100,000 Men

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN,
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

PARIS.—Unusual and almost feverish excitement prevails in Russian emigre circles and especially at the headquarters of the All-White Russian army on the Rue Mademoiselle in Paris as a result of secret information received from the far east. General Miller, commander in chief of the white Russian forces, in a guarded statement on the Manchurian situation declared that the soviet authorities were never so nervous in the past as they are today, fearing, as they do, that the soviet union will ultimately be drawn into the conflict if no speedy settlement of the Japanese-Chinese embroglio is arrived at.

General Miller, who succeeded General Koutichoff in 1930 as commander in chief of the white Russian army, has sent out a communique in which he calls upon the Russian dispersion to be ready as "the great moment" for which they have been longing and praying for 14 years may arrive almost any day. At the same time the general has let it be known that the White Russian Military Academy in Paris has turned out 10,000 graduate officers in the last five years and that there is in the European centers where the emigres congregate a "perfectly drilled and determined army of 100,000 men ready to march against the soviets at any moment by throwing their weight into the balance on the side of any country which eventually opens hostilities with the soviet union."

In the far east, where General Miller commanded until he came to Paris to propose and achieve the elevation of Grand Duke Cyril Romanoff to the dignity of "czar before God and the conscience of humanity' a few months ago, the white Russian anti-bolshevik forces dispose of fully 500,000 troops, led by the most capable of the ex-czarist officers. In addition there is the remnant of Baron Wrangel's army which maintains its military formation to this day in various sections of Bulgaria and Jugo-Slavia.

General Savine, who stands at the head of the department of strategy at the Anti-Bolshevik War College in Paris, who has just been on a tour of inspection of the white forces in the Balkans, declared after his return: "The Russian officers and soldiers in the Balkans are maintaining their splendid spirit. In spite of extraordinary hardships they live under perfect discipline and have managed to study and acquire the latest innovations in military tactics.

"They have not for a single minute lost confidence in the liberation of the Russian fatherland. They know that they will see Russia back. When this shall be, I cannot say. All indications tend to show, however, that the hour is drawing near. As far as we are concerned, I want to say: 'We are ready.' We are certain that if we could bring 100,000 men on the Russian frontier we would sweep the entire peasant population with us. We know that another army of 100,000 would join forces with us immediately. With the peasants we would sweep to Moscow in a few weeks' time.

General Miller himself admitted that he is in daily contact with agents and observers in soviet Russia and that the information reaching him indicates the soviets' grave concern over events in the near east. Unusually large detachments of agpu (secret service) units have been drafted into the red army to supervise the morale of the peasant soldiers and to counteract, if necessary by ruthless suppression, any subversive movement in the ranks.

"Nothing is feared more in Moscow than a war, or even a small military expedition in the far east or anywhere else," said the general. "The red army, although enjoying special privileges in so far as clothing and feeding is concerned, cannot be trusted. If a serious war broke out the soldiers would turn against the communist commissars in the ranks, shoot them and walk over to the adversary whoever he might be. Of this we are absolutely certain. It is only the rigid surveillance of the communist commissars in the red army which keeps it in check. By an ingenious device of scattering the red army over a thousand garrison towns, unrest is kept isolated and easy to repress, but once the army must take the field and the millions of peasants meet each other there will be no holding down the revolt that has been smouldering in the ranks for years.

In addition to a war college, officially maintained as "memory refreshment classes," for the benefit of ex-imperial officers, of whom there are nearly 50,000 in Paris, the White Rusians have now formed a munition company of their own with branch factories in Britain, France and Germany. The factory has just obtained a permit from the French ministry of war for the manufacture of a new type of shell of high fragmentation.

Two White Russian banks have opened their doors in Paris in the last few months. The directorate of the banks represent but a slightly abbreviated list of the industrial oligarchy of the Russia of czarist days.

Everything in the emigre colony is accomplished by volunteer work and spontaneous contributions. Two hundred Russian taxicab chauffeurs in Paris, most of whom served as officers in the czar's army, place their cabs and their service at the disposal of military headquarters one day a month. They work alternate shifts. Prince Galitzine and other prominent aristocrats manage this branch of the White Army activities. Others occupy themselves with teaching and drilling young Russians in the art of warfare.

That no effort is being spared by General Miller and his associates to keep the military efficiency and ardor of the ex-officers at a high point of efficiency is also evidenced by an arrangement whereby ex-Russian officers may enlist for short terms in the French Foreign Legion. Sixty per cent of the officers in the French Foreign Legion are Russians, while the topographical staff of the legion, one of the most important branches, is entirely White Russian.

As might be expected one of the chief sources of worry to the White Russian chiefs is the question of espionage. Their most secret communiques are frequently stolen and reproduced by the great French communist daily "Humanite." In turn the White Russians have a vast network of spies in the communist party cells and throughout the soviet union.

While all these activities have been going on largely under cover, and virtually unknown to the public at least, events in the far east are accelerating the tempo and augmenting the sphere of operation. In both camps the Japanese-Chinese embroglio is taken as a shadow cast forward by coming events.

The Leaning Tower of 1932

Representative Edwards Comments on the Use of Speaker Garner's Name

Editor Constitution: If Mr. Garner, of Texas, desired to ent this primary he would have filed his name himself under the rules adopted by the executive committee, I am confident that he thoroughly understands the situation in Georgia relative to the Roosevelt boom, and besides Governor Roosevelt is an adopted Georgian and has contributed much to the support of this state in various ways.

It also appears to me that a few disgruntled politicians are trying to get up a boom for themselves and are more interested in that way than to nominate Speaker Garner.

As a member of the Georgia legislature I would appreciate very much if you would publish this article in your paper.

Constitution Editorials In Congressional Record Please This Oklahoman

Editor Constitution: We desire to thank you for the editorials published in The Constitution and republished in the Congressional Record, on the subject of "Regulation of Security Issues."

It is encouraging and refreshing for the people to know that The Constitution has taken up the fight against the unscrupulous and scheming greedy grafters seeking to dominate and control the business affairs of the country, and I might also say the political affairs of the country.

What an enormous price the American people have to pay for government. And then take a look at the government we get.

It is awful, and getting more so.

Bus, Truck Competition Of W. & A. Protested By Marietta Citizen

Editor Constitution: The state of Georgia occupies a position of unfairness to railway transportation that is both unique and untenable.

Georgia built and owns a railroad following the best route across the mountains from the central plains to the southeastern seaboard, and she refused to allow other railroads to closely parallel it. In the course of time circumstances favored leasing this railroad to one of the larger railway systems of the country.

Since then Georgia has constructed a great modern highway system, with public funds for public use only, paralleling the leased road, and over which she permits transportation of freight and passengers for pay at a rate of competition that it is not only unfair and damaging to the lessee of the state's railroad but is runious to the value of the same as a property.

This condition is in no sense fair to the company holding the lease and is not in keeping with ordinary business ethics. As a Georgian, I do not approve of it.

The time may come when we can dispense with the railroad service which pioneered America to greatness, but that time is not yet, nor is there evidence of it early coming. Until we have ample evidence that the railroads are no longer necessary to the life and welfare of the country as a whole, we should not permit our public highways to be used for the usurping of functions which clearly belong to the railroads.

Urges United Support For Prohi Law Repeal

Editor Constitution—At a time like this our united support should be given to the men who come out flat-footedly for repeal of the prohibition law, so that the revenues of our huge nation-wide drink bill may properly go to the government, to relieve taxation to a very considerable extent on incomes and necessities.

True reform can only come from the splendid example of those millions who, in spite of all the present opportunities to obtain liquor on the sly, are total abstainers, and yet do not try to force others to do likewise against their will.

Fifty thousand are sent to penitentiaries each year for offenses against the prohibition law. Consider the cost to the government (the people) but, above all, think of the effect upon these 50,000 citizens who are sent to jail knowing that probably 50,000,000 other prohibition offenders go scot free!

The Church and the Community

One of the most colorful and attractive pictures to be found in the Old Testament is the description given by Isaiah of seeing Jehovah in the temple one day. "I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and His train filled the temple." Then follows the simple and sincere story of his experience. There is no way of proving or disproving his story. No doubt hundreds of others passing through the temple that day would testify that they saw no one "sitting on a throne," and heard no antiphonal praise.

But negative testimony has little validity. One man comes back from a walk through field and forest with a song, which he says he captured from the birds and the brooks, while others who followed the same pathway heard no song and saw no beauty. Even a feathered orchestra cannot force its music upon dulled ears, nor a radiant sunset impose its beauty upon a blind spirit. So a temple cannot guarantee a God to everyone who enters, but it should be a good place for him "who seeketh," to find Him.

A Meeting House.

Indeed this is the essential worth of any temple, whether we call it church or cathedral. It must be a place where one may meet God, if he is in search of Him. There is great danger that one's mind shall be dominated by the eyes and the hands, so that one's thoughts and aspirations shall be determined and directed by what can be seen and touched—that the visible and the tangible shall become the highest values and the most appealing prizes of life. So we do well to build a house and dedicate it to the thought of God. Not for His sake, but for the sake of our own spiritual lives. The building itself becomes a spiritual suggestion—a voice calling out of the unseen world. We must not forget that we may meet Him anywhere, but the law of association of ideas, makes it easier in a temple to summon our truant thoughts in sensitive expectancy.

If this be the function of a church it is essential that it should stand clearly and unmistakably for the intangible and invisible values of life. It must be evident to all men that above the things which can be handled and counted, weighed and marketed, the church prizes truth, justice and love. It must be clearly manifested that its God is the God of truth, justice and love.

I said there is no way of proving the truth of Isaiah's story. No, not by the testimony of witnesses. But there is another way of testing its verity. If Isaiah heard and saw God in the temple, when he comes out he will be able to make others hear and see Him in his own life. He will have a divine tone and touch. And this must be the test of every church experience. If the people have truly been to a "divine worship," then surely something of the divine should go back with them into life. A real church service should translate the unseen into the seen, the heavenly into the earthly, the divine into the human.

Church Made for Man.

A church, then, which is dedicated to the Jesus-idea of God, must be something other than a shrine, to which men come to do obeisance. It cannot bear the name of the Christ, while it stands in stately isolation to be ministered unto. It must be primarily a minister to men. According to Jesus, man was not made for the church, but the church was made for man.

Whenever this law has been reversed, the church has become a curse to the world. No tyranny has been so horrible as ecclesiastical tyranny. Often the church claiming a divine authority, has become a tax upon the happiness and the welfare of men. Instead of opening the doors and setting the souls of men free, it has kept their minds captive in ignorance. Too often it has grown rich and arrogant, while those who reared its spires and lifted its arches, dwell in poverty and misery. A church can only reveal the Jesus-God by serving "even the least of His brethren." It cannot grow and prosper at the expense of the welfare of the people about it.

Here you may test the quality of any religion. If it cannot bring some heaven to earth it cannot promise any after death. We have all shuddered with horror when we read of the sacred Ganges, poisoned and polluted by its religion rites, until it has become a source of deadly epidemics. But isn't it just as horrible for the churches of America to stand indifferent and impotent, in the midst of undernourished children, disease infected tenements, and within sight of the breadlines of the unemployed? The church which takes the name of Jesus cannot prosper ignorant of or indifferent to the living conditions of the people all about it. The God which it is claimed may be seen and heard within the temple, must become incarnated in the lives of those who see Him there. When they come from the temple, they must be able to touch the wounds of men with healing, and tell glad news to all the people.

Cotton Acreage Cut Strongly Urged By Former Representative McKelvey

Editor Constitution: I am addressing the following open letter to the cotton farmers of every southern state:

Have you ever stopped to take a sober thought, or to open your eyes wide enough to see where we are headed? Another cotton crop this year the size of that last year means 3 or 4-cent cotton next fall and bankruptcy for the majority of the farmers as well as other lines of business.

Now, Mr. Farmer, it's up to us to work out our own salvation, as legislation has failed to do it for us. The cotton farmers have the world in the palm of their hands if they would only take advantage of it. Cut your cotton acreage 40 per cent this year. Get this selfish idea out of our heads that we can plant all cotton and get rich, while our neighbor cuts his acreage. That will not work, neither will planting a larger acreage to get a certain amount of money work.

I farm on a small scale and am going to cut my cotton acreage at least 40 per cent. Don't think that because we are a small farmer that what we make will make no difference, it does make a difference, every bale ginned counts.

Ten million bales each year will bring three times as much money as 15,000,000. Why not use some common sense one time at least. Raise your living at home and plant more land for feed crops.

The federal seed loan committee is demanding that all borrowers cut their cotton acreage 15 per cent this year.

Now a word to the landlord: stop compelling your tenant farmers to plant all cotton, give him a chance to make his living at home. He will be much better off and you will, too. Let's all pull together for more live-at-home stuff and less cotton.

Feed your stock better, it is sin to half feed your stock and compel them to work.

Cut your cotton acreage even if you have to let your land grow weeds. It would be better to do that than plant it to cotton and get nothing for it.

Now I hope I have not said anything that will offend anyone. Most of us farmers know what we should do, then why not do it and save ourselves and all other lines of business from bankruptcy and ruin?

The cotton belt is the finest country in the world. Almost anything will grow here that will grow anywhere in the world. Yet we cotton farmers are languishing in poverty when we should be the most prosperous farmers on the earth, and it's nobody's fault but our own.

Mississippi Boys and Girls Show How To Increase Farm Revenues

$4 Added to the Average Price Per Bale as Result of Use of Improved Varieties of Seeds.

Constitution Editorials Attract Attention

Editor Constitution: The obvious interest which was aroused by The Constitution's comment on Danish co-operation, and the Wren's community article, caused me to make a week's trip into Mississippi with the object of stirring up some more concrete instances of successful farmer co-operation.

From part of the material gathered I have prepared the attached story on ginning and one-variety projects at Magee, Miss., which stand out as among the most excellent developments of this type.

JOHN H. CAULFIELD.
Department of Public Relations, American Cotton Co-operative Association.
New Orleans, La., Feb. 25, 1932.

Top, gin which saved the farmers of two Mississippi counties half their ginning costs. Bottom, left: W. T. Martin, secretary of the Farmers Gin Company at Magee, Miss., who personally inspected the fields of those participating in the community's successful one-variety project to assure that cultural regulations were complied with; and Isom Myers, who operated the gin at which no other than the pedigreed cotton was handled.

BY JOHN H. CAULFIELD.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Feb. 27.—When several hundred farmers of Forrest and Simpson counties last year added an average of $4 a bale to the value of their cotton, and at the same time cut down production costs, through one-variety communities, they gave a practical demonstration of the means by which agricultural leaders assert the south's cotton industry must be rebuilt to reach a profitable basis.

This week Forrest and Simpson are perfecting the south's first county-wide one-variety project, expanding and consolidating the smaller projects of last season, with a unanimity and enthusiasm which causes prominent leaders to express hope that the new movement will sweep over the south "like wildfire." Planting time is close at hand, but it was still later last season when the successful projects of this section were undertaken.

In previous years cotton of this section was so short in staple length that buyers said it had "only one end." When rare lots of better cotton were grown it was shipped elsewhere and sold as Arkansas cotton to avoid the bad name which clung to local staple.

Back of the rebirth which took place last year lies a story of eight years' educational labor and community effort, starting with the day when the county agricultural agent was charged with "just another book farmer's lie" when he said a bale of cotton to the acre could be grown in Simpson county. That year the agent had 91 boys and girls of agricultural clubs growing that bale to the acre, and their cotton had a staple length that brought $7.50 a bale more than their fathers' cotton was bringing.

Within four years he had 800 boys and girls doing it. And he had shown on almost every farm in the county that the first assential was to keep the seed and the lint of the good cotton separate from "mongrel" varieties by ginning it separately.

Co-operative Gin.

Meanwhile adult farmers of Simpson county, at Magee, had organized a co-operative gin, through which they improved the quality of ginning, had cut ginning costs from $6 a bale to $3 a bale, maintained the highest local prices for cottonseed and had paid themselves dividends as high as 28 per cent per annum. Last season the gin association undertook leadership of a project to use their plant for a one-variety cotton program such as the boys' and girls' clubs had been practicing.

This called not only for ginning the cotton separately, but for growing it with "buffer crops" between it and other varieties of cotton, since insects will carry pollen and mix the varieties over a distance of a mile at times. Neighborhood groups were formed where these conditions of isolation could be obtained. Local committees, assisted by extension service, federal and state agencies and the cotton co-operatives, inspected the fields to assure that regulations were observed.

One gin out of the three owned by the Farmers Gin Company was set aside to gin nothing but the DPL 4-8 cotton which the one-variety growers had centered upon. Sometimes this gin stood idle, while other gins had long waiting lines, and restless growers damned the farmers' gin for refusing to handle their mongrel breeds. But no cotton went through the restricted gin except from fields that were shown by the written record to be planted in DPL 4-8 direct from the breeder, and that had been inspected during the growing season. The written record alone was not held sufficient, and this vigilance was justified when a few loads of off-varieties were stopped after starting through the gin.

Seed from this one-variety cotton is now being sold at $30 to $32.50 a ton, in quantities sufficient to plant all Simpson county, the price being held at oil mill prices plus cost of handling. Profit on more and better cotton, but no profit on the seed which will build a bigger enterprise is the aim of the one-variety group. Each of the participating farmers is keeping enough seed to plant his own crop, the remainder being sold co-operatively.

New seed direct from the breeder is being placed in the hands of selected farmers in the center of one-variety crops where they will be best buffered from cross-pollination. These selected farmers will supply the whole project with seed next year, and so on year after year, the bulk of the growers thereby obtaining seed only one year removed from the breeder, at low cost.

Old Problems Solved.

Similar problems of other Forrest and Simpson county points last season paved the way for the county-wide projects now starting. They have solved the problem which has long been a stumbling block throughout the south, of how to maintain an excellent seed supply at reasonable cost, but this is merely the beginning. They also are producing cotton that is uniform in each bale, instead of long and short staples mixed (cutting down by half the 30 per cent waste which mills suffer in spinning the ordinary staple). A further result is large lots of bales of uniform quality, such as mills prefer and for which they pay a premium.

Of the 1,200 bales from the one-variety gin at Magee last season, 1,000 bales were handled by the Mississippi Co-operative Cotton Association, at a premium of $4 a bale above the average cotton price in the community, the premium being due to uniformity of staple, as well as to its actual length. Leaders of the one-variety projects here and elsewhere say that the co-operative marketing system has removed the greatest obstacle in their path, which was the "hog-round" buying system, under which every bale, good or bad, was bought at an average price, killing the incentive to grow better cotton. The co-ops pay the mill premium for each bale, according to individual quality.

Churchill's Great Feat

BY WILLIAM O. KEY JR.

It is given to few men to be able to peer beyond the curtain of the present and foretell, with amazing exactness, the nature and scope of coming events. Such men are of inestimable value to their people and government, and their rarity marks them as leaders of their generation.

In our midst last week was such a man—Winston Churchill, of England. During his brief stay in Atlanta reporters who heard or interviewed this brilliant Englishman went candidly beyond the prescribed limits of impersonal journalism and paid him the tributes he so richly deserves for his statesmanship, his eloquence and his literary talent.

But Winston Churchill's most dramatic accomplishment was unintentionally slighted in the interest in international goings and comings of the moment. It was one of those feats for which future history, with the advantage of its greater perspective, may accord him the recognition which is his due.

All was quiet and normal in London in early June, 1914. Thousands of government employes and officials—high and subaltern—were on vacation at watering places of England and in the south of France; others were preparing to leave for their year's recreation. But not Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, in command of his Britannic majesty's naval forces.

Those forces were on the high seas far from English shores. Having completed their annual maneuvers, the fleet's officers and crews disported themselves in foreign ports, enjoying a regular sailors' holiday after rigors of duty at sea.

Long before the paranoiacs, Gavrio Prinzip and Nedeljo Gabrinovics, held their fateful rendezvous in a confectioner's shop in the little Bosnian town of Sarajevo; many days before the pistol of Prinzip, the young demented Serb student, cracked into the quietude of the Sunday as the crown prince of Austria and his morganatic wife rode in splendor toward the Sarajevo town hall, Winston Churchill, sitting in the dreary offices of the first lord of the British admiralty, had foreseen an inevitable tragedy, and had acted. Secret orders had been wirelessed to the grand fleet to return at once to home waters.

In far-away ports shore leave was summarily rescinded. Officers and men, complaining, no doubt, of their curtailed pleasures, stepped briskly up gangways, as briskly gave the traditional "Nelson deck" salute, and anchors were weighed. Even before the gloves and fan of the murdered archduchess were laid across her coffin—an ancient custom which this time was to be the symbol of mourning for millions of mothers—prows of every British fighting ship pointed north, and were fully prepared to uphold England's mighty sea reputation. Torpedoes bore naked war-heads, guns were primed for broadside and salvo, and even the decks were cleared for action. England was prepared at sea! In home waters the grand fleet took up strategic anchoring places in the North sea and about the English channel.

After Austria had baited helpless Servia with the most ignoble demands ever imposed on a nation in civilized times, and after Servia, trembling, had acceded to all of Austria's demands but one—that Austria be permitted to appoint the commission to determine the responsibility for the assassinations—Winston Churchill sat silent and watchful in the offices of the admiralty. When the kaiser hurled his dare at his cousin, the czar of the Russias, and when Nicholas defiantly ordered mobilization and Germany ordered war, Churchill remained silent. Even when the British government declared war against Germany and Liege had fallen, this far-seeing lord of the admiralty had no word for the press. . . .

But when the formidable fighting fleet of the German navy nosed out of the Kiel canal and stood for the open North sea, the silent Churchill was ready; and so were the ships of the North sea squadron. Eagerly they steamed, under forced draft, to engage the enemy, and contact—that all-important word in naval fighting—was made. As the result the German North sea fleet was hurled back toward the Dutch coast, with impressive losses; and England had won the first naval battle of the European war.

What might have happened had not Winston Churchill, with that uncanny foresight into the Balkan situation, ordered the British fleet to home waters, might have resulted disastrously for England and the entente allies; might have even affected the outcome of the war.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that a few editors likewise were early cognizant that civilization itself was in peril as the result of the Austria-Servia incident. Certain London editors went so far as to write that Europe faced the gravest crisis in a generation.

In the light of later events—particularly the present reparations problem and the worldwide economic upheaval, or depression—it is no less of interest to call to attention an editorial comment printed in The Constitution on July 28, 1914—the day the first of the long series of declarations of war was issued. Under the caption: "Cost of a World War," The Constitution editorial said, in part:

> A European war would be nothing short of a cataclysm. That sums up Austria's sinister effort to discipline Servia for the assassination of the crown prince of Austria and his morganatic wife. Not one power in the old world could keep aloof. If they were not drawn in directly, they would be drawn in indirectly. The cost to business and prosperity, and the cost to posterity in debt and in the inheritance of feuds would be nearly incalculable.
> Irrespective of which of the central powers clashed, the United States could not escape bearing part of the penalty. . . .

How true has the prediction emphasized by bold face type in the foregoing editorial excerpt proved to be! The cost to business and prosperity, and the colossal burden of debt are now being felt by the world; and the end is not yet. News from the far east has a ghastly similarity to that from deep central Europe nearly 18 years ago. Japan, which merely waded in the shallows of the red stream of the World War, today occupies a position in China not entirely dissimilar to that of Germany's invasion of Belgium in 1914. But Winston Churchill, the man whose eyes saw so great a distance into the future in 1914, apparently does not view the oriental imbroglio with alarm. England, he pointed out, learned a lesson in the cost of throwing herself into the European conflict to help Belgium.

Vacant Farms Promise Best Method of Relief For the Unemployed

Editor Constitution: The Back-to-the-Farm Movement is not being stressed enough by our leaders in an effort to relieve unemployment.

There are thousand of vacant farms in Georgia.

There are thousands of unemployed who would be self-sustaining if they could get to these farms, and be helped for a while after they get there.

Many people out of employment here in Atlanta own farms, and cannot go to them for the reason that they cannot sustain themselves until they can get crops to growing.

There are workable plans of bringing the people and the farms together. One plan has worked successfully in Floyd county, Georgia, where the banks have made a condition precedent that certain plans be followed. The Red Cross in South Carolina has used a very similar plan. In certain sections of south Georgia the businessmen and farmers have worked out the problem.

The Georgia State College calls the plan in simple words the Hog, Hen and Cow program, plus food and feed crops.

There are many people here who are now receiving aid from the different charitable agencies, public and private. There are many more who are near the breaking point. Many of us are nearer there than pride will permit us to acknowledge.

Many of us misfit plough hands should never have left the farm. A great many of us realize this now and are willing to return to the land of our fathers. We have worn silk and ridden on rubber to our sorrow.

It does seem that an opportunity should be given those who so desire to make a living. Gardens can be planted soon, turnip greens and onions and other vegetables can be grown. Children will thrive on the fresh butter and milk. Eggs will be the first crops to be produced; friend chickens will follow soon. Each farm under this program should have a few figs, some apples and peaches planted.

It seems that the federal government, the state of Georgia, our bankers, civic organizations and charitable agencies could work out a plan to finance this Back-to-the-Farm Movement and give people a chance to make a living, who are willing to work. Such a plan will eventually rebound to the prosperity of our state and nation.

Thinks New Department By Dr. Turner Will Prove Of General Interest

Editor Constitution: I have been interested in reading recently "Happenings of the Church World," by Dr. Herman L. Turner, pastor of the Covenant Presbyterian church, Atlanta, appearing in the Sunday edition of your good paper.

I have known Dr. Turner for several years during the time he was assistant pastor of the Independent Presbyterian church in Birmingham. I also had more intimate association with him while I had charge of the national guard in Birmingham and Dr. Turner was chaplain of the 167th infantry. He is a fine man, a good speaker, and an excellent writer, and it is my opinion that his columns in your paper will be read extensively by your subscribers.

Chairman of Grand Jury Committee Emphasizes the Necessity and Wisdom Of Ratifying County Schools Bonds

Editor Constitution: This letter to you will be my initial letter to a newspaper on any subject.

It has been my privilege to be twice chairman of the committee on county schools while serving on two grand juries. I was so deeply impressed with the urgent need of funds for the replacement of several schools that are in a terribly dilapidated condition and the necessity of the enlargement of others that are more than overcrowded, that I, with the other members of my committee, recommended to the grand jury a bond issue. This was made one of the presentments, not only because of its necessity, but it was our opinion that these funds would be judiciously managed as the record of the Fulton county board of education and its efficient superintendent, Jere M. Wells, is one of the shining lights of efficient management in the state of Georgia.

This necessity was further accentuated when it was found that the prison camps of this county were, I might say, jammed with misdemeanor prisoners, 80 per cent of whom were youths, who, on being questioned, impressed you with the idea that had they been privileged to attend school, they would have made splendid citizens.

Let me say to every voter of this county, you should deem it a privilege to vote for these bonds. You will find, with rare exception, that an educated boy or girl makes a good citizen. So, let us give every child in this county the blessed privilege of attending the best schools that money can build. You already have the best-equipped organization to run them.

LUCIEN HARRIS.
Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 26, 1932.

Bond Issue Recommended By September Grand Jury

Following is the recommendation of the September term grand jury that a bond issue for the county schools be ratified:

The committee, appointed to investigate the schools of Fulton county, reports that it, in company with Mr. Jere Wells, superintendent of the county schools, visited the school at Sandy Springs and other schools in north Fulton county and finds these schools in run-down and dilapidated condition.

The same committee also visited the North Fulton High school and finds it is very much overcrowded.

This grand jury recommends that these conditions be remedied. From our observation, it would seem to us that to place these schools on a proper basis, a bond issue would be necessary, especially since they will now have under their care the school systems of Campbell county and Milton county. A bond issue for the purpose of providing proper and adequate county schools, not greater than $600,000, is recommended.

We feel the schools of Fulton county have been conducted economically and intelligently. We find the new school buildings are modern and are built on grounds covering an area of from five to ten acres.

We wish to especially commend Mr. Jere Wells, as superintendent, and the board of education of Fulton county for their economical and efficient management.

Committee—Lucian Harris, Howard See, S. W. Mangham, Julian V. Boehm, foreman.

Pilgrimage Through Liberty County Reveals to Visitor Many Spots Rich In Beauty and Historic Interest

BY VIRGINIA FRASER.

Just as the little band of Puritans were attracted to this section in 1752, so is the traveler of 1932. Now that 180 years have intervened, the pages of history are rich with the deeds and attainments of the sons and daughters of Liberty county, which was created in 1777 from the three parishes, St. John, St. James and St. Andrew, and was named Liberty in attestation of the patriotism and love of the colonists.

Among the most distinguished and illustrious men the nation has ever produced we find names that every Liberty countian is proud to claim, because they are Liberty county's own.

Liberty county produced two signers of the Declaration of Independence, Dr. Lyman Hall and Button Gwinnett; two generals of the revolution, James Screven and Daniel Stewart; one president of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, descendant of Daniel Stewart; the wife of another president, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, granddaughter of Rev. I. S. K. Axson; three United States senators, John Elliott, Alfred Iverson and Augustus O. Bacon; the first United States minister to China, John E. Ward; two of the most eminent scientists and educators who established the University of California, Joseph and John LeConte.

Added to this distinguished roll are scores of other notables who have left their traces throughout history.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to the sons of Liberty was the naming of six counties in their honor, Screven county was named in honor of General James Screven, Hall county was named for Dr. Lyman Hall, Gwinnett county was named for Button Gwinnett, Baker county was named in honor of Colonel John Baker, Stewart county was named for General Daniel Stewart and Bacon county was named in honor of Augustus O. Bacon.

Mindful of these facts, historical association is made the traveler's companion wherever he goes.

Historic Midway.

Midway between Savannah and Darien the traveler is attracted to a spot known in some respects as the most famous of America's patriotic shrines, historic old Midway church, and to the cemetery adjacent to the church which is the resting place of many of the nation's heroes and most famous men and is known as the Westminster of the south.

It was in May, 1752, just 20 years after the settlement of General Oglethorpe, that the Midway district was selected as a desirable location for a settlement by a band of Puritans. After the full establishment of the colony there were about 300 white people who were intelligent and refined, and about 1,500 negroes.

The Puritans built the first little log church at Midway in 1753. Prior to this time services were held in the private homes with full attendance.

The second house of worship, or meeting house, as it was called, was completed in 1757 and existed only a short time. At this time the settlement began feeling the effects of the unsettled state of affairs which existed between the mother country and the colonies and finally terminated in the Revolutionary War.

Being sufficiently infused with the spirit of patriotism the parish of St. John sent two of its sons, Lyman Hall and Button Gwinnett, to Philadelphia, where they inscribed their names upon the immortal scroll of freedom, the Declaration of Independence, on July 4, 1776.

"Dead" Towns.

From Midway the traveler rides 10 miles to one of the most beautiful spots on the coast. A more appropriate name could not have been suggested for the once flourishing town overlooking Midway river, for the king of day reigns here in all its radiance from sunrise to sunset. Perhaps that was the attractive feature to the group of men, who on June 20, 1758, purchased 300 acres of land on this bluff and named it Sunbury.

In a few years immigrants came from all sections to this healthy maritime port. The population was soon estimated at 1,000, and as early as 1761 the governor stamped it as a port of entry. At this time Sunbury rivaled Savannah in commercial importance.

This place, once the abode of unusual refinement, intelligence, hospitality and patriotism, was the home of the most noted men in the colony of Georgia. Here lived Dr. Lyman Hall, signer of the declaration of independence; Button Gwinnett was closely associated with the citizens of Sunbury, although his home was on St. Catherine's Island; John Elliott and Alfred Cuthbert, United States senators from Georgia; John A. Cuthbert, member of congress; John E. Ward, speaker of the house of representatives, president of the Georgia senate and United States minister to China; Richard Howley and Nathan Brownson, governors of Georgia, lived here for many years.

Until the year 1797, Sunbury was the seat of justice and it was here that the first session of the superior court of Liberty county was held in 1783.

It was at Sunbury, beneath one of the giant oak trees, that the first Masonic lodge in Georgia was organized, under the direction of General Oglethorpe.

The most famous institution of learning in southern Georgia for many years was the Sunbury Academy, which maintained an enviable reputation and attracted students from every part of the country.

Especially is the traveler interested in the ruins of the old stronghold, Fort Morris, which played such an important role in the drama of independence. For it was from her ramparts that the colonial flag floated, this being the last flag surrendered, and the town of Sunbury the last of Georgia soil to surrender to the British.

The fort, like the town, lies buried beneath a carpet of grass and moss-draped trees and listed among the ancient landmarks and dead towns of Georgia.

As the early colonists settled in swampy regions, it was soon found necessary to move out to healthier localities during the summer months.

Dorchester was chosen by the planters as a desirable location, being situated between Midway and Sunbury.

The village is typical of the old colonial days and is greatly admired by the traveler. The huge moss-covered oak trees and stately pines make an ideal setting for one of the most beautiful and historic plantations in this section. It was built about a hundred years ago by Captain Abial Winn and it has always been occupied by his descendants. At present it is the home of Mrs. A. F. Winn, the widow of the son of Captain Abial Winn. Captain Winn was captain of the Liberty independent troop during the war and he kept the Confederate uniforms in this house; the house was set afire by Sherman's men and the burned plank may still be seen.

Among other settlements were: "Sand Hills," afterwards named Walthourville in honor of Andrew Walthour, who was the first settler; "Gravel Hill," afterwards named Flemington, after William Fleming, its first settler.

A settlement was made about 12 miles southwest of Midway and was named Hinesville, in honor of Charlton Hines, one of the most distinguished settlers. It was made the county seat in 1836.

The traveler is fully repaid for having visited the places of interest in Liberty county, and this pilgrimage will ever be among his most pleasant memories.

Oxford Assemblage Declares for Strict Prohibition Enforcement

Editor Constitution: After witnessing "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" in the Old church, Oxford, Ga., 600 persons passed the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the legalized liquor traffic has always flourished upon the impaired health, the broken bodies, the poverty-stricken conditions, the degraded characters of men and women; and

"Whereas the legalized liquor traffic has always been an enemy to society and to government; and

"Whereas the American people have declared the liquor traffic outlawed; and

"Whereas any tampering with the eighteenth amendment will undoubtedly bring back upon the American people the saloon, or its equivalent;

"Be it resolved by the 600 persons assembled in the Old church at Oxford Wednesday evening, February 10, 1932:

"First, that we believe firmly in the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act which have outlawed the manufacture and the sale of liquor;

"Second, that we rigidly oppose any modification or the repeal of these two laws;

"Third, that we as individuals will not break these laws;

"Fourth, that we declare ourselves heartily in favor of the revival of widespread education on the part of the schools and the churches regarding the ill effects of the use of alcohol;

"Fifth, that we call upon all of our officers, county, state and national, to enforce rigidly the eighteenth amendment;

"Sixth, that we shall do all in our power to create a public opinion for the rigid enforcement of the law;

"Seventh, that copies of these resolutions be sent to the secular press, the religious press and to the two Georgia senators."

The Happenings of The Church World

BY HERMAN L. TURNER,
Pastor Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlanta.

Chaplains in the army and navy total 204, with 120 in the army and 84 in the navy. Of the total, 75 per cent are Protestants allocated to the various denominations in America, according to the membership, in so far as possible. The chaplains serve a total of 130,000 in the army and 108,000 in the navy, including the marines. The men are carefully selected and usually serve until retired at the age of 64. The work of the chaplains includes personal efforts, co-operative efforts, the holding of formal or informal week-day and Sunday services conducting Sunday schools, Bible classes, missions revivals; ministration to the sick and dying, counsel to those confined in the guardhouse and general administration of advice and help. In a real sense the chaplain serves as the spiritual father of his men, according to the general committee on army and navy chaplains, of which Bishop James E. Freeman is chairman and Dr. W. L. Darby is secretary.

Lent is being observed more generally than heretofore in the churches of all denominations throughout the country. The Lenten season is being marked by numerous prayer services, evangelistic campaign, noonday meetings, house-to-house visitations, all in the interest of soul-winning and deepening of the spiritual life.

The number of radio periods which are placed at the disposal of the churches of Kansas City is increasing. The Council of Churches is now sponsoring four programs: WREN daily, 9:30-9:45; WHB, daily, 11:15-11:30; WOQ, Tuesday and Thursday, 2:00-2:30; KMBC, Saturday, 11:30-12:00. The speakers are Kansas City ministers.

After five years' labor, the National Institute for the Blind has just completed the first edition of the Bible in Arabic Braille. The work has been carried out to the order of the British and Foreign Bible Society, who will distribute the book to blind readers in Arabia, Palestine, Egypt, and north Africa generally. The Arabic edition occupies 32 volumes as compared with the 74 volumes of the National Institute's Bible in English Braille, but the size of the volume is larger and about double their thickness. To obvinte language and other difficulties, an English lady living in Jerusalem first transcribed in manuscript the whole Bible into Arabic Braille and it was from her copy that the institute's staff worked on the metal plates from which the book sheets were printed—The Moslem World.

The Chicago Council of Social Agencies in a recent report indicated that many worthy individuals will receive assistance and that comparatively few are regular down-and-outers. The council reports 44 per cent of the men in its shelters belong to semi-skilled, skilled and professional groups and that 50 per cent of the applicants have been unemployed nine months before seeking relief of any kind. Of a total, 49 per cent are native-born.

Many of the churches of all faiths throughout the nation last week cooperated in the sixth annual observance of Narcotic Education Week. The World Narcotic Defense Association, Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, president, sponsors the observance. The general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches, and the executive committee of the National Council of Federated Church Women, have all passed resolutions urging congress to ratify the Geneva convention, 1931. This convention, formulated at the League of Nations' Opium conference held at Geneva last summer, calls for governments to limit the manufacture of drugs to the quantities required for domestic consumption and export for medical and scientific purposes only, and recommends that each government consider the possibilities of abolishing and restricting the use of heroin as one of the most dangerous of all drugs and replacing it by other less virulent substitutes.

President Butler, of Columbia University, says: "Washington's military genius and his modest and unselfish skill in dealing with men and their meaner passions, his tried and tested sagacity, his poise, and above all, his complete self-effacement, excited the wonder of the world as they compel a world's admiration. . . . He was a real person, with the ordinary human passions and limitations, but so well-balanced was his character, so well-ordered his temperament, and so well disciplined his mind that he made of the ordinary human material a product that is, perhaps, without an equal in history."

An international church conference on permanent preventives of unemployment is planned to meet in Basle in April this year. This conference is being called by the International Christian Social Institute, the headquarters of which are in Geneva, and with which the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is co-operating.

The world disarmament conference now in session at Geneva, has devoted the first three weeks almost exclusively to the hearing of the representatives of numerous organizations and the proposals of various governments, all of which are to be given consideration in the weeks to come. In the earlier days the official delegates representing 59 nations listened to unofficial delegates, many of whom were women, from numerous organizations which demand disarmament in the interest of peace. The churches, organized labor and the students of the world also represented.

During our long-drawn-out campaign for nearly $6,000,000 for the Pittsburgh's Welfare Fund, there were not lacking plenty of critics who maintained that the rich Mellons were not doing their share. This was the whine of the weak, the bleat of the people who are willing for the rich to do it all. Now, that the full amount has finally been raised (but not without half a million from the county commissioners), the fact has leaked out that the Mellon family and interests gave $1,133,150 of the whole. Pittsburgh ranks 40th among the cities for generosity for the Welfare fund, and this is not the fault of the Mellons. This announcement ought to put an end to much cheap criticism.—Pittsburgh correspondent, The Christian Century.

In the first report of an extensive study of church attendance a commission of the Congregational-Christian churches, headed by Roger Babson, announces that a survey indicates that, while rural churchss attract ever Sunday 71 per cent of their membership, city churches draw 30 per cent.

Improvement in Condition Of Negro Farmers Is Sought In Unique Community Center

Rural Community Held Best Place for Negro To Have Satisfactory Living Conditions.

SPARTA, Ga., Feb. 27.—For the first time in the history or negro agriculture in this country, there is being constructed a rural community center for negroes in Hancock county, Georgia. This community center, which will be opened about May 1, is an attempt to place the proper emphasis upon the development of the negro rural community as one of the best opportunities for negroes in this country to provide for themselves a satisfying life. Heretofore much of the thought of the best minds has been centered on improving urban conditions of the negro.

In this demonstration being carried on, in the heart of rural Georgia, it is the hope of those stimulating the effort, to point the way toward economic prosperity and better living conditions to hundreds and thousands of other negro rural communities in all sections of this country.

The log cabin center, now practically complete, has an inside floor surface of 1,836 square feet. It is located in a pine forest about 100 yards from the highway and in the center of a community of negroes who own and operate over 10,000 acres of land. It is 12 miles from a railroad. It is constructed entirely of logs that have been hewn out of the surrounding woods in the community. One hundred and fifty tons of local stone have been used in the foundation and to build the chimneys.

There is in the cabin one large room, 22x38 feet, with large open fireplace. This room will be used for conferences, banquets, club meetings, stereopticon lectures, health inspections, movies and community singing. There is a large room to be used as a rural museum, reading room and picture room. There are three large bedrooms with bath, a kitchen and pantry, and large porch with stone floor extending across the whole front. The front room is so constructed that it can be extended to the porch and opened at each end, connecting two other rooms for additional space when the need arises.

The idea of the log cabin community center, the plans for the building and all of the construction work done on the building have been carried on by negroes, with the earnest assistance and advice of friends of the other racial group.

History of Community.

This community was founded more than 60 years ago by three brothers, the late Zack Hubert, David Hubert and Floyd Hubert, Gordon Dixon, Ellen Lewis and a few other pioneering spirits, who, in their own primitive way, sought for themselves and their children independence of action and better ways of living. It was the first community in the whole of middle Georgia where negroes owned and operated farms.

At present there is a church with over 400 members, a five-teacher Julius Rosenwald school, with shop building. This school has a vocational teacher of agriculture and teacher of home economics. There is also a county farm agent who has headquarters in this community and serves three counties.

The community is diversifying its farming operations. Fall grain crops of wheat, oats, rye, good dairy herds from which cream is sold daily, hogs and chickens are seen in the community as an evidence of the forward-looking program of those who are leading. At present there is a community home beautification contest being carried on, in an effort to make the homes and their surroundings more inviting and attractive.

One of the most remarkable facts in connection with the velopment of this negro rural community is the splendid co-operation between the colored and the white people, not only in this community, but throughout that whole section. The white farmers and merchants evidence a keen interest and pride in every advance made by the negroes of the Springfield community.

At a free barbecue given by the community last summer, there were nearly 100 whites and 500 colored people who came together and enjoyed themselves, talking and planning for better things in rural community building.

George Foster Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred K. Stern, Dr. Will W. Alexander, Dr. J. H. Kilpatrick, of Columbia University; Mrs. Edwin P. Cochran, of Connecticut; Dr. Carter G. Woodson, Editor P. B. Young and Judge Richard B. Russell, chief justice, supreme court of Georgia, have manifested a most encouraging and stimulating interest in this forward-looking effort to make a concrete demonstration of the possibilities for negroes in the open country.

In an effort to stimulate keener interest among thousands of negro boys and girls and farm men and women in a more satisfying life for themselves and their communities, the Association for the Advancement of Negro Country Life is asking any one to suggest a name for this community log cabin center. A prize of $25 and a trip to the community and entertainment at the cabin will be provided for the person submitting the most appropriate name.

Our Ailments and How We Can Best Cure and Prevent Them

Carbon Monoxide Monster.

(This is the 44th of a series of articles to be published in The Sunday Constitution, prepared under the auspices of the Fulton County Medical Society. They are being published by the society so that the public may have authentic medical information with special reference to health conditions in this section.)

A marked increase in the numbers of deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning has become alarming. This increase is coincidental with the increased use of gas-heating equipment and the more extended custom of running motors in closed garages. The average car in a closed garage of average size can, within a few minutes, give off a sufficient quantity of carbon monoxide in the exhaust gases to kill a human being. No motor should be permitted to run in any garage unless the garage doors are open wide. It sometimes happens, also, that exhaust gases leak into tightly closed cars, and several fatal cases of monoxide poisoning have occurred among individuals who were riding in the rear of a closed car into which the exhaust fumes gained entrance. The victim generally has no warning that he is exposed to this disastrous gas until it has affected him to so great an extent that he is unable to act. As compared with other poisonous gases, carbon monoxide is colorless, tasteless and practically odorless.

A number of deaths also occur due to asphyxiation from the ordinary household gas used for heating or illuminating purposes. Among the common causes for such deaths are the following:

1. Gas stoves or water heaters that are not connected to a chimney flue or other vent.
2. Faulty connections to gas stoves and gas plates.
3. Leaky rubber hose and rubber connectors to gas heaters, which permit the escape of gas.
4. Loose keys and valves which permit leakage of gas.
5. Location of valves in by-passes at, or near, the floor line where they may be kicked open accidently or turned open in the process of moving furniture.
6. Placing large containers, like wash boilers or kettles upon the tops of gas ranges with the flame turned too high.
7. The boiling over of the contents of shallow cooking utensils, thereby extinguishing the blaze without the knowledge of the occupants of the room.
8. Gas flames turned so low that they are easily extinguished by a gust of wind.
9. Gas flames turned so high that unburned gas accumulates in the room.

Modern appliances, such as gas ranges with closed tops, if properly connected, provide little or no hazard from poisoning by carbon monoxide. In fact, all gas appliances, including ranges, water heaters and gas heating devices, will give satisfactory results, free from any hazard whatsoever, if they are installed properly and operated properly. The use of gas appliances is as essential as is the use of automobiles. Careless operation of either gas appliances or automobiles may result in poisoning from this disastrous gas.

"The very general use of automobiles and other gasoline-burning engines whose exhausts contain 7 per cent of carbon monoxide, and the consequent vitiation of atmosphere in garages, traffic tunnels, and congested thoroughfares, has given public health and industrial hygienists much concern. A recent average of 141 tests made by United States public health chemists in city streets at peak hours of traffic showed a contamination of 0.8 in 10,000 parts of air, while in 102 tests made in 27 garages taken in 14 different cities the average carbon monoxide content was 2.1 parts in 10,000. From an industrial hygienist's view, the amount of carbon monoxide should not be more than one part in 10,000 parts of air.

"One of the greatest dangers to life is encountered in warming up an engine in the small, closed garage; a hazardous act that should be given universal publicity. Coroner reports annually record the increased fatalities as a result of idling a running motor in a garage. It has been estimated that a motor will discharge two feet of carbon monoxide every minute, so that in 20 minutes the atmosphere would be concentrated enough to kill a dog by asphyxiation.

"The symptoms of carbon monoxide may be divided into two stages, in the first stage there is a feeling of tightness across the forehead, dizziness, frontal and basal headache, smarting of the eyes, lack of proper muscular co-ordination, nausea or vomiting with increased pulse and respiration. In concentrated atmospheres, the victim, due to rapid poisoning, may develop complete loss of sensation and motion with diminution or cessation of the hearth pulsations. Exposure of a pregnant woman to carbon monoxide may cause the death of her child, with subsequent miscarriage.

"The second stage is characterized by loss of muscular control, coma with intermittent convulsions, shallow and irregular breathing, and finally cessation of respiration. Recovery from a severe gassing may be followed by pneumonia, blindness, muscular irritability, neurosis and mental instability that may be permanent."

Therefore, exercise the greatest care where gas is employed in the home and where an automobile is parked in a garage.

Let "Carefulness" be your watchword!

Student Urges Library For North Fulton High

Editor Constitution: The students of all the Atlanta schools have access to the Carnegie library in Atlanta. The attendants there are kind and helpful, but just at the time we find it convenient to go there, the students from the other high schools are necessarily there also, and the reference rooms are overcrowded. One has to wait sometimes for hours to get the book one needs. It would be a saving of time and car fare if we had the necessary reference books at North Fulton where we would also have the assistance and supervision of the teachers to direct us in our research work. If we had a library where we could look up our own references instead of having to call on our teachers so constantly, our morale and school spirit would be wonderfully increased.

Reading is one of life's greatest pleasures and the habit of reading is one of the finest habits a boy or girl may form. A library of well-chosen books would encourage the reading of good books among our student body, and all students would share alike in the benefits from this necessary part of a school. Libraries make friends of teacher and pupil when they find that they have a common bond in books.

A library for our school would be the very best investment that could be made, an inexhaustible treasury of the mind.

Holds League of Nations News Reports Come Under Classification of Humor

Editor Constitution: It seems to me that you have a very queer idea of arranging news.

You put all your comic strips and cartoons on one page, and then leave the funniest thing in the whole paper on the front page with the regular news.

I recall a set of cartoons published some years back under the slogan, "It Doesn't Mean Anything." Why don't you adopt this heading for news of the League of Nations and their peace conferences, and put it on the funny page, where it belongs?

ATTORNEYS DEMAND TO SEE JAILED CLIENT

LAGRANGE, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Judge L. B. Wyatt, of the Coweta circuit, today ordered Jailer W. D. Layfield, of Muscogee county, to appear before Judge C. Frank McLaughlin Monday at Columbus to show cause why attorneys for H. L. Allison should not be permitted to visit him in the county jail.

Allison is charged with the slaying of his brother-in-law, Sergeant Walter Pregowski, near here Thursday night. Judge Wyatt assumed jurisdiction because of the absence of Judge McLaughlin from the circuit.

Ed Wohlwender, Hubert Calhoun, J. O. McGehee and Charles McLaughlin, attorneys for Allison, said they had been refused permission to see their client. They said the jailer told them Solicitor A. Jones Perryman had issued instruction that no one be allowed to visit Allison.

Perryman, at Columbus, tonight said he did not intend his instructions to bar attorneys and had ordered the jailer to allow the defendant's attorneys to see him.

Suspended Pastor To Hold Meeting Today at Sparta Courthouse.

G. W. Rives, layman, will preside over the meeting.

Dr. Smith, in announcing his plans, said that he will disclose the charges against him which were not made public at the time of his trial, and make his answer to his accusers. He said that the high point in the meeting will be reached when he reads four letters sent to Dr. W. T. Hunnicutt, prosecutor for the conference, by Rev. C. D. Read, now pastor of the Sparta church.

Dr. Smith said the letters were those used by Dr. Hunnicutt in Nashville, Tenn., in an effort to cause the church court of appeals to "slam the door in his face." The former pastor said he had invited the Rev. Read to be present to defend himself.

Promising "sensational disclosures of acts of leaders in the Methodist church," Dr. Smith issued an invitation to the public to attend.

Special invitations, Dr. Smith said, were sent to Bishop J. M. Moore and Bishop W. F. McMurry, who presided at Dr. Smith's trial.

Fighting Ol' Man Depression in South Georgia

Hay costs less than gasoline. Thrifty farmers in Telfair county figure a pair of wheels and a mule provide cheaper locomotion than any automobile. But why waste the old car altogether? So A. M. Cooper, of Helena, Ga., salvaged the rear wheels and a seat from the family bus, hitched Maud to the result and now gets around comfortably without worrying about the price of gasoline. Photo by J. Negro Teacher Makes Highest Mark in Arithmetic Examination

McDONOUGH, Ga., Feb. 27.—A negro school teacher who made the highest mark in arithmetic on any paper submitted in a county-wide teachers' examination, as well as a good all-round grade, and who claims that only two of his pupils out of hundreds have "gone wrong" is J. L. Walthall, of Beersheba district, Henry county.

"Only two pupils have ever been in jail or got into trouble out of the four or five hundred that I have taught," Walthall affirmed. "I attribute that record to my example," he explained. "I always tell my pupils to be what I am, to live like I live, and to act like I act. It is hard on me to live up to a high standard, but I have found that it is the best way to teach, by example and by practice."

Walthall, who has the air of a philosopher and the head of a thinker, is a pure negro. He is proud of the fact that, while a student at Clarke University, in 1890, he was "designated to take Booker T. Washington to see the cows." He was about 20 at that time and had been placed in the elementary school. He was in a class with much younger boys and his ambition was aroused. Although he was working his way through, to pay his expenses, he studied very hard and was soon advanced into the "junior prep" department.

"But," he continued, "I didn't graduate. I decided to go to Florida. I came back, married and started teaching in Newton county. After that we came to Henry where I have been teaching nearly ever since, off and on, for 33 years, in the same community."

Walthall is a great reader. He reads every book and magazine he can get his hands upon. His white friends know this and keep him supplied. He is a subscriber to The Atlanta Constitution and is informed on all public questions.

MANY STRONG CLUBS SUPPORT MRS. KINNEY

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—While Mrs. W. O. Kinney, Macon alderman and candidate for election to the 72d congress from the old sixth district to fill the unexpired term of the late Samuel Rutherford, was rapidly drawing her whirlwind campaign throughout the 13 counties of the district to a close Saturday, a powerful Bibb county organization was laying plans to bring out an overwhelming vote on March 2, the day set for the special election.

Although little or no publicity has been given to the Bibb county "Kinney-for-Congress Club," its strength has grown so rapidly within the past 10 days that its leaders estimate its enrollment at approximately 5,500, most of whom are registered voters.

Meanwhile similar clubs have been organized in Upson, Crawford, Spaulding, Butts, Jones, Monroe, Lamar, Clayton, Fayette, Jasper and Henry counties, and her supporters claim that she will poll a heavy vote from each of these counties.

Quietly she has gone about her campaign, avoiding public-speaking engagements, preferring instead to meet personally as many of the voters of the district as possible. Personal letters were prepared and mailed to each registered voter in the district. Disregarding the advice of well wishers, she mapped out her entire campaign program unaided, and has served as her own campaign manager.

Politics is for her a heritage and a public duty thrust on her unceremoniously 13 years ago with the advent of the World War. As the daughter of Judge Dupont Guerry, a state senator from Sumter county, at the age of 27 years, district attorney under President Grover Cleveland and judge of the Macon city court for many years, and the wife of one of Bibb county's oldest county commissioners, she has lived and breathed politics all of her life.

In 1928 she was appointed a Georgia delegate to the democratic convention in Houston, Texas, where she was selected to notify Senator Joe Robinson of his nomination for the vice presidency of the United States. So well has her influence been felt in national political circles that telegrams of encouragement have been received from practically every member of the Georgia delegation at Washington in addition to a flood of letters and clippings of her announcement for congress from almost every section of the nation.

In Macon she has been active for many years in club work, and assisted in the organization of three of Macon's leading woman's clubs. She organized the American Legion Auxiliary of the Joseph N. Neel post shortly after the war, and was its first president. She was one of the first in Macon to become active in the relief of disabled veterans. She is the president of the National Auxiliary of the Rainbow Division and is known to more than half the remaining members of the colorful unit as "Mother Kinney."

She is the mother of four sons and one daughter, all of whom are grown, and is the grandmother of four small children. Two of her sons are World War veterans.

Early Monday morning she plans to climb into the airplane of her pugilist son-in-law, W. L. "Young" Stribling, and will fly over each county of the district dropping campaign literature. Last Friday morning she spent 30 minutes of her time composing a telegram of encouragement to "Strib," "the sweetest, most unselfish son-in-law in the world," while visitors and campaign workers were forced to wait in an adjoining office.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER FACES TRIAL MONDAY

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—E. Leroy Johnston, former credit manager for the Union Dry Goods Company, Monday morning will be called to trial in Bibb superior court on a charge of embezzling more than $15,000 of the company's funds over a period of nine years.

It is the first case on the docket for the week, Solicitor Charles H. Garrett announced. Johnston, now a resident of Atlanta, will be represented by W. A. McClellan. Mr. McClellan announced he would be ready for trial.

JUDGE FLYNT SCORES YOUTH OF OPPONENTS

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—Declaring the need for "experienced representatives" in congress, Judge J. J. Flynt, of Griffin, speaking here, attacked two of his five opponents for the unexpired term of the late Samuel Rutherford as young and inexperienced and unqualified.

Judge Flynt, addressing a small audience in the city hall auditorium, referred to W. Carlton Mobley, of Forsyth, and Harvey J. Kennedy, Barnesville, as "a couple of young men—almost youths" and said they had not had sufficient legislative experience to serve in the national congress.

"The announcement of this young man," Judge Flynt said of Mr. Mobley, "was about the most childish affair I have ever seen. He said he is a candidate because it was Mr. Rutherford's wish that he succeed him. Mr. Rutherford died unexpectedly and I don't suppose that he thought for a moment about whom his successor would be.

"Mobley said the files of Mr. Rutherford contain certain mysterious secrets which Mr. Rutherford would not care to turn over to anyone else. This is about the most absurd thing imaginable. This young man said there are 1,500 claims of veterans' in Mr. Rutherford's files. I know that I or any other representative would give them the same attention."

Judge Flynt quoted Mr. Mobley as saying Mr. Rutherford's successor, who will serve only 12 months, will not be expected to lead, but to follow.

"My friend Mobley might not lead as a new member," Judge Flynt said, "but in the crisis that confronts America it is leaders and not followers that the country needs."

The charity show will begin at 8:30 p. m. (E. T.) in the municipal auditorium.

Mrs. W. O. Kinney, of Macon, candidate for congress for the unexpired term of the late Congressman Samuel Rutherford, of the sixth district.

COTTON BODY CHARGES ANSWERED BY KENNEDY

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Feb. 27.—Harvey J. Kennedy, candidate for congress from the sixth district, issued the following statement with reference to charges made by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, criticizing his support of an amendment to the state workmen's compensation act.

Mr. Kennedy said that he had visited every county, had presented plainly and distinctly the principles for which he stood and had received a wonderful reception and was satisfied of his election on March 2.

With reference to the letter sent out by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Kennedy said:

"It is my purpose to further the interest of all our people. My record in the Georgia legislature has been the subject of an attack. I quote the following secret letter sent out on February 11 by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia to all the cotton mills in my district:

"'It was announced in the Atlanta papers a few days ago that Harvey Kennedy, of Barnesville, who is a member of the Georgia legislature, has announced his candidacy for election to congress from the sixth district to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of Congressman Rutherford.

"'I have no intention of presuming to suggest how you should vote in this matter, but I think you should know that during the regular session of the Georgia legislature in 1931 Mr. Kennedy was very closely allied with the labor unions and used his influence in every way possible to secure the enactment of bills sponsored by organized labor. On the last night of the regular session it was Mr. Kennedy who led the fight to bring up some of the bills to which we were vigorously opposed, and in discussing these matters it was clearly evident that his attitude toward industry is anything but fair.

"'It occurs to me that it would not be helpful to have a man with Mr. Kennedy's views in congress, so I am passing this information along to you for whatever it may be worth and requesting that you treat it in the strictest confidence.'

"The bill referred to in that letter was one to amend the workmen's compensation act so that the allowance of not more than $100 now provided for injured workmen to pay their doctors, hospitals and for medical attention, regardless of how severe the injury, or the length of time required for medical attention to the injured person, might be increased not more than $200. On the last night of the session this bill was on the calendar, but for some reason that calendar was changed and the bill was so placed as to make it impossible for it to come up. I did all in my power to bring this measure up for passage and am proud of my efforts. This was the only labor bill up for passage that night.

"When I was informed that this secret letter written by the Cotton Manufacturers' Association had been sent out, I entered vigorous protest and be it said that then the association, through its secretary, apologized and stated that through his ignorance a grave injustice had been done me. His letter in part is:

"'In talking with his friends, I find that he is quite fair, sincere and honest in his convictions, and that his efforts are always in behalf of legislation that is constructive and progressive. He is regarded as a man of ability and integrity, and while his convictions may sometimes seem dogmagic, he is open to reason and is willing to study every matter on its own merits without prejudice.'

"This correspondence demonstrates my absolute fairness to all parties concerned. Despite this apology and retraction, a prominent mill owner in Macon still continues his fight upon me.

"I am fair to industry. The burdens of the needy and of the underdog have always appealed to me and these efforts to aid them shall be continued so long as I may live.

"I was floor leader for bills sponsored by the railroads regulating and taxing busses and trucks, although I have never ridden on a pass or represented a railroad in litigation."

GEORGIAN IS KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS BARN

ENIGMA, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—John Henry Collier, 50, prominent farmer and naval stores operator of Berrien county, was killed near here Saturday as his automobile crashed into a tobacco barn.

Collier suffered a sudden illness and the car struck the barn before he could stop it. His neck was broken.

Mr. Collier is survived by his wife and two sons, Henry Collier, who lives in Tifton, and Cecil Collier, of Atlanta.

SIX NEGROES INJURED AS TRUCK OVERTURNS

VALDOSTA, Ga., Feb. 27.—When a truck overturned on River road, near the Plant farm of J. D. McKey & Company, three miles from the city tonight, six negro employes of the farm were injured, two probably fatally. Two ambulances were called to bring the injured here for treatment.

Homer Patrick is reported to be in a dying condition, and it is believed that Tremos Tillman sustained injuries which may prove fatal. Four others are regarded as being seriously, though not fatally injured.

Judge Sibley's Home Visited by Burglars

MARIETTA, Ga., Feb. 27.—Burglary of the home of Judge Samuel H. Sibley, who, with his family, has been in New Orleans for more than a month while the United States court of appeals has been in session, was reported to city police by neighbors.

Clothing was scattered over the house and desks and drawers opened. The amount of goods taken could not be estimated on account of the absence of the Sibley family from home.

COUNTY MEET MARCH 4 MAY SETTLE BIBB ROW

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—(AP)—A meeting of the Bibb county democratic executive committee has been called for noon, March 4, at which time it is expected that some decision will be reached to clear up the county primary tangle.

A. H. S. Weaver, secretary of the committee, mailed notices to members Saturday morning at the instance of E. P. Johnston, chairman.

The primary is scheduled for March 23, but the board of registrars has declared that it would not legally certify the present regisration list, under the law. Members of the democratic committee said there will be ample time after the meeting March 4 to take any action the committee might desire.

There appears to be two alternatives Either the committee will decide to institute mandamus proceedings against the board of registrars or decide to use the list of voters which the board will file with the clerk of court for the special congressional election, to be held March 2.

Just what action is favored was not indicated by members of the committee. Should the clerk's list be used, it will contain only the names of voters who qualified on or before February 16.

RESULTS OF PRIMARY ANNOUNCED IN CRISP

CORDELE, Ga., Feb. 27.—All Crisp county officers with the exception of two were returned for new terms, beginning next January, in the primary held yesterday. The two defeated candidates now holding office are J. S. Sheppard and J. J. Story, county commissioners. They were replaced by S. Bundrick and J. H. Dorough.

The votes polled were as follows: Sheriff, J. H. Pitts, 1,066; C. O. Noble, 256; L. O. White, 237. Clerk, P. H. Green, 939; J. W. Wolfe, 696. Tax commissioner, C. O. Perry, 916; J. L. Briscoe, 713; Ordinary, W. P. Fleming, 644; E. T. Rachel, 325; M. J. Bennett, 204; J. M. Witherington, 451. County commissioner, J. H. Dorough, 1,113; J. J. Story, 498. County commissioner, S. Bundrick, 1,048; J. S. Sheppard, 592. County commissioner, L. E. Williams, unopposed, 1,307. County school superintendent, J. W. Bivins, 807; Mrs. J. A. Lasseter, 109. Coroner, K. O. Conner, 1,030; C. N. Cox, 507.

MARIETTA, Ga., Feb. 27.—Dr. John W. Ham, Baptist evangelist whose home is in Atlanta, will be the principal speaker at services in honor of the 50th anniversary of the ordination of Dr. I. A. White into the Baptist ministry. The services will be held Sunday morning in the Second Baptist church, of which Dr. White is pastor.

Judge J. H. Hawkins, of the Blue Ridge circuit; Charles M. Brown, prominent Marietta attorney; Judge William T. Townsend, of Cartersville; G. C. Green, Smyrna, and Rev. C. T. Greer, of Marietta, are also on the program in honor of Dr. White.

LEGALITY OF PRIMARY IN DECATUR ATTACKED

Chairman, in Statement, Concedes Grounds for Criticism.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Feb. 27.—Indications that the recent democratic primary held in Decatur county for the selection of county officers might be attacked on the grounds that it was illegal were revealed here Friday in a statement prepared by D. R. Bryan, chairman of the democratic executive committee, which was sent to each committee member and published in the Decatur County Advance, local weekly publication. The statement read in part:

"The legality of our primary election called for February 17 and the runover to be held March 2 has been questioned and after careful consideration and study of the election laws I am of the opinion that we called the election prematurely and that the list of voters furnished the various election managers throughout the district is not a legal list of voters as contemplated by law for the reason that there is no provision to direct or compel the county registrars to purge or prepare a legal list of voters except six months prior to the general elections in November, which is June 1."

Bryan also stated that when the committee meets on March 3 to declare the results of the runover held March 3 the committee will be required to consider all other business including "the legality of our previous call for the primary and all subsequent actions of the committee based upon our previous call for the primary."

DON BRYAN PRESIDENT OF MACON CHAMBER

MACON, Ga., Feb. 27.—Don C. Bryan, president of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Company, was elected president of the Macon Chamber of Commerce Friday afternoon at a meeting of the board of directors. H. Persons Heath was re-elected treasurer and Albert R. Menard, former president, became vice president.

Mr. Bryan announced that he will outline a program for the year and call the directors into special meeting to approve it or modify it within the next 10 days.

The nominations were made by P. T. Anderson, chairman of the nominating committee.

John L. Morris, manager, reported on several projects the organization is working on and said he is encouraged over the industrial projects. He announced the convention of Southern Commercial Secretaries to be held in Macon on April 21-23 and invited board members to attend.

The offer of a representative of the American City Bureau to present a financing plan to the board members was accepted.

The Truth
The Whole Truth
and nothing but the truth!

IF a man is told that the used car he is buying is mechanically perfect, he has a right to expect that he will be reasonably well satisfied with the performance of the car.

Every dealer who sells used cars ought to either put a car in good condition, or tell you frankly that at the price he is selling it he cannot honestly call it "mechanically perfect."

If you believe that straightforwardness is as desirable in buying an automobile as in other business transactions, buy your used car from one of the dealers named here who sell General Motor cars. You may expect the same fairness and good service, the same courtesy that you would expect from them if you were buying a new General Motors car.

The cars listed below are real bargains. See these and many other good buys at the salesrooms of these dealers:

Boomershine Motors, Inc.
425 Spring St., N. W.

1931 Pontiac Two-Door Sedan. A big, spacious, comfortable car. The attractive new Duco color combination plus distinctive Fisher body, with beauty in every line, makes this car especially desirable. The moment you drive this fine car you will begin discovering pleasant things; first, how easily it handles and the smooth performance, because it has been thoroughly checked and Good-Will reconditioned by our expert mechanic. Only $545

1929 Plymouth Two-Door Sedan. If you, like most people, prefer a car that is neither the cheapest nor the most expensive, but rather a happy medium, you will find this economical four-cylinder car offers you the kind of appearance, riding comfort and dependability, that you, your family and friends will enjoy $235

Design of Goodrum Residence Wins Award

The home of Mrs. J. J. Goodrum Jr. on the Pace's Ferry road, which won honorable mention for its designer, Philip T. Shutze, of Hentz, Adler & Shutze, Atlanta architects. Mr. Shutze said, however, that credit should go to the firm and not to himself individually. He designed the house two years ago and submitted photographs to the annual exhibition of the Architectural League of New York, which gave him honorable mention. The style is of the early nineteenth century or Regency type. The pictures show the exterior and a glimpse of the entrance and stairway.

BLUE CHIP REALTY NOT AFFECTED BY SACRIFICE SALES

In the "blue chip" area of Atlanta real estate there has been no sacrifice sale during the depression, although it is admitted that an occasional parcel could be bought for less than its appraised value three years ago, according to a survey of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, announced on Saturday.

In fact only one sale of property has been made in the past two years on Peachtree street from Five Points to Baker street. That bought pretty close to its appraised value.

On Whitehall street, from the viaduct to Hunter street, one sale was made at a fair value, and another parcel can be bought for about half of its appraised worth, the board said.

The board doesn't claim that if this property were offered at forced sale to the highest bidder it would bring its appraised value, but it does maintain that the owners of these "blue chips" think enough of their future not to sacrifice them.

They also point out that the insurance companies have lost no money on loans they made on this type of property.

Values have shrunk, the board admits, on what is known as semi-central property, that is, locations that are on the edge of the central district, not quite close enough in to be classed as central and too close in for residence or apartment house use.

Here, the board argues, the shrinkage is not in actual value, but is a deflation of speculative values set up a few years ago when that sort of real estate was the victim of a boom.

This class of property has no definite rental value, and so cannot be offered on an investment basis. Its enhancement possibilities were too thoroughly discounted during the boom. Yet, for a long pull, this is the very type of property that offers the best profit. If the buyer can hold it until the overflow of central growth overtakes it he will be rewarded, the board says. Central property whose rental and enhancement value is assured, is out of the reach of the average buyer. His best chance is to buy in the path of growth and bide his time.

Whitehall Building Figures In Lease to Rubber Concern

NOS. 529-31 WHITEHALL STREET.

The John J. Thompson Company announced on Saturday that it had leased for Ben May, of Mobile, Ala., the two-story building at 529-31 Whitehall Street to the Seiberling Tire and Rubber Company.

The lease is for a term of years part of which is optional with the lessee. The consideration, provided the options were exercised, would amount to about $40,000.

The company is now making extensive alterations on the building which it will use for its southeastern branch quarters.

The building was erected for the National Biscuit Company and occupied by it until it absorbed the Frank E. Block Company and moved to its plant. It contains more than 12,000 square feet and occupied a lot 60x210 with frontage on the Central railroad. The building was specially designed for concerns handling shipments.

Charles H. Black, owner of Tuxedo Park, announced on Saturday that he would build a home for sale at the corner of Tuxedo and Valley roads after a design by Frazier & Bodin, the architects, a drawing of which is shown above. The house will be in the English style. Among notables who have their homes in Tuxedo Park are Bobby Jones, Charles H. Black Sr., Charles H. Black Jr., Candler Dobbs, Joseph E. Skaggs, E. R. Black, Dr. LeRoy Childs and others.

WEST VIEW MOVES TO ADAIR QUARTERS

The West View Cemetery Association, through its president, Frank Adair, announced on Saturday the removal of its offices from the Candler building to the ground floor of the Healey building, and in the future will jointly use offices with the Adair Realty and Loan Company, with an entrance at 43-45 Walton street, N. W.

This move becomes necessary due to Mr. Adair having been named with the Fulton National bank as co-executor of the will of the late Robin Adair. By combining the two organizations in one office, he will be in better position to give the necessary time and attention to each.

In order to effect this change, considerable space has been added to the present Adair office by taking in a vacant storeroom fronting Forsyth street, thus making the offices of the Adair organization and the cemetery association much more commodious and easier of access. At present the offices are being redecorated.

The combination of the two organizations in nowise affects the present personnel of the cemetery association or of the Adair Realty and Loan Company, but makes it possible for Mr. Adair at all times to be accessible to the clients of both organizations. The change goes into effect Monday morning, and Mr. Adair will be at his desk to welcome his friends and clients.

OVERBUILT CLAIM DISPUTED; FIGURES ON GROWTH GIVEN

The complaint that Atlanta is overbuilt is not justified by facts, according to Brazell, Miller and Newbanks, Inc., engineers and builders.

"A few figures in this respect may be of interest," this company says. "Yearly records of the amount of building in Atlanta were first recorded by the building inspector's office in 1906. For purposes of comparison we are assuming the year's 1906 to 1913, inclusive' as 'normal—undisturbed by war and post-war inflation—and the year's 1914 to 1931, inclusive, as 'abnormal.'

"The records show that during the 'normal' years, an average of $6,100,000 of building per year was carried out in Atlanta. Taking the records for the 'abnormal' years—1914 to 1931—and converting them into the 1913 building dollar value (that is, making the comparison upon actual physical volume of building), we find that an average of $6,500,000 of building per year was carried out over this 18-year 'abnormal' period, or only slightly in excess of the average for the normal years.

"Buildings are constructed to supply human wants, and the volume of human wants is created by population. During the years above discussed, the population of Atlanta, according to census figures, increased over 100 per cent. Other factors by which population increase is estimated, such as public school enrollment, gas and electric meters and telephones in service, all substantiate this growth in population. The human wants, therefore, are still here in Atlanta, and must sooner or later be satisfied. The longer these wants remain unsatisfied, the greater becomes the accumulated demand.

"We feel that these figures should be encouraging to those of us in the construction industry, as well as those engaged in real estate. The dollar spent in building has a wide circulation. Atlanta is not "over-built." When credit and confidence are re-established, these vacant stores and office buildings and residences will soon become occupied by the people already here, and there will be additional needs to be satisfied. Buildings wear out and become antiquated and obsolete, just as clothing and automobiles."

ACCEPTANCE CONCERN MOVES QUARTERS

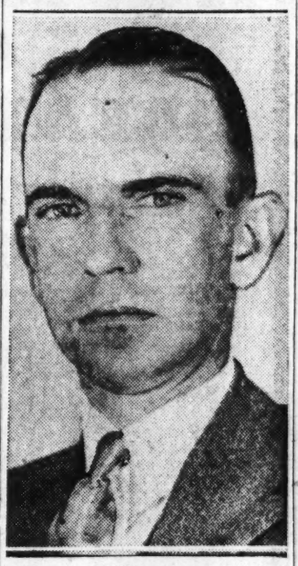

Announcement was made Saturday that the Georgia Acceptance Company, automobile loan and refinancing concern, has leased a suite of offices at 210-13 Glenn building, one of the Palmer properties. The company will be open for business in its new quarters Monday.

Removal of its headquarters from 174 Trinity avenue, S. W., was due to an increased volume of business since the Georgia Acceptance Company was organized in January, 1930, according to C. Miller Jones, secretary-treasurer and manager, who stated the change is in the form of an expansion.

Coincident with the Georgia Acceptance Company's change, J. H. Taylor & Son, insurance agents, which handles the insurance business of Mr. Jones' organization, is removing to 214 Glenn building, in an adjoining office, the announcement stated.

In order to make room for these two concerns in the Glenn building, Henry H. Jordan, architect, has removed from 210 to 610 and Monroe Butler, contractor, has removed from 209 to 609, it was stated by Charles A. Rawson, lease manager of Palmer, Inc.

GUY W. ELLIS.

12:30 o'clock. Mr. Ellis, who was until recently connected with the National Association of Real Estate Boards, is well known in Atlanta and a great deal of interest is attached to his coming.

Mr. Ellis' subject will be of interest not only to all members of the real estate profession, but to loan companies as well, since it will contain many suggestions as to how the most progressive loan companies the country over are marketing their property.

Everyone who knows Mr. Ellis knows his attractive personality and will not miss this occasion to hear him again. The Real Estate Board is making a feature luncheon of this meeting and is inviting representatives of most of the loan companies of the city to be present. After his talk, there will be an open forum discussion which will be thrown open to all.

An unusually large crowd is expected.

VALUE OF MORTGAGES GAINS FOR JANUARY

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 27.—The dollar volume of real estate mortgages recorded in January showed a substantial upward trend, for the first time in recent months, according to a monthly compilation of official reports by Nelson, Hunt & Company, of Chicago, specialists in real estate financing.

Analysis of official figures from selected representative metropolitan districts showed that the volume of real estate mortgages filed in January was about 39 per cent larger than in December. This increase, however, failed to bring the January total near that of the same month in 1931; the decrease below January a year ago being about 41 per cent.

The Nelson, Hunt & Company compilation covered 37 urban districts, comprising more than half of the city population of the country. They reported a total of $182,546,382 in real estate mortgages filed during the month of January. Thirty-four cities on which comparative data is available, showed a total of $177,797,026 for January, as compared with $128,032,343 in the previous month of December.

Thirty-five cities, which reported figures on real estate mortgage volume for January, 1931, showed a total volume of $173,392,258 for January this year as compared with $295,628,018 the same month a year ago.

Five districts reported a gain in January over the volume in the same month a year ago. These were Detroit, Mich.; Greenwich, Conn.; Kansas City, Kan.; Omaha, Neb., and Youngstown, Ohio.

Thirteen districts, including some of the country's largest metropolitan areas, reported in January a volume of real estate mortgages larger than in the previous month of December. These were Chicago (Cook county), New York, Detroit, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Greenwich, Conn.; Kansas City, Kan.; Milwaukee, Oakland, Cal.; White Plains, (Westchester county, N. Y.); Philadelphia, Rochester, N. Y.; Tampa, Fla., and Youngstown, Ohio.

Detroit with a total of $12,611,439 in January showed an increase of 142 per cent over the same month a year ago, and was about 290 per cent larger than the December total of $3,227,929. Other cities, with a much smaller dollar volume, reported unusually large percentage gains over last January and December. Kansas City, Kan., with a total of $1,751,048 was 476 per cent ahead of January, 1931, and 936 per cent greater than in December. Youngstown, Ohio, with a total of $1,728,456, was 162 per cent ahead of last January, and 149 per cent more than in the previous month. Fort Wayne's total of $645,840 was nearly five times larger than in December, but little more than half of January, 1931.

New York and Chicago (Cook county), the two largest metropolitan areas in the country, both showed a decided upward trend. Chicago, which has been showing a declining tendency for more than a year, reported a total in January of $12,757,863 as compared with $12,538,080 in December. The January volume was, however, about 44 per cent below that of the same month a year ago.

The five boroughs of New York reported a total of $77,838,588 in mortgages filed in January. This is a gain of about 219 per cent over the December total of $24,404,504, but 49 per cent below the January, 1931, volume of $153,003,296.

Washington Made $530,000 On Land; First Bought at 16

BY HARRY M. BEARDSLEY.

(Copyright, 1932, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 21.—On the walls of virtually every well-regulated real estate office, between the framed copy of the state license to operate and the group photograph taken at the real estate convention back in 1928, when real estate men could still afford to attend conventions, hangs a calendar embellished with a portrait of George Washington and the date February 22 in red ink.

Washington's portrait should adorn the wall of every real estate office in the land. He was not only father of his country but the most distinguished real estate operator it has yet produced.

First in war, first in peace, he was also first in the marts of his countrymen.

In colonial days the surveyor was frequently a land agent and real estate broker. He still is in England. The English realtor does not carry the appellation "real estate broker" on his letterheads. He displays the terms "surveyor," or "auctioneer," or "estate agent," or if he is a big shot, all three: "Surveyor, auctioneer and estate agent."

Washington's work as a surveyor in his youth took him into new regions where he was quick to see the possibilities of land speculation. In 1749, when he was only 16, he bought a tract of 550 acres with money saved from his surveyor's fees. Two years later, he acquired an additional 453 acres, and by the time he was 21 he had purchased out of his earnings a total of 1,558 acres. This was in addition to holdings inherited from his father and from his brother, Lawrence. Thereafter, the buying, selling and developing of land was one of the major passions of his life.

Under his stewardship Mount Vernon grew from a plantation of 2,700 acres to one of 8,200. Through his brother, Lawrence, he became interested in the Ohio company, which was acquiring vast tracts in the Ohio river valley, and with this as a starting point he organized or became associated with numerous other syndicates dealing in land on an enormous scale. Thus, in 1763, he took over the active management of the Dismal Swamp project, invloving the projected drainage and settlement of more than 40,000 acres of swamp land.

Individually or in association with others, Washington was continually dealing in land. Through government bounty and through purchase he assembled thousands of acres in the Kanawha and Ohio valleys. Nor was his activity limited merely to farm land or raw acreage. In 1763, he bought a lot on Pitt street, in Alexandria, for $150. In 1790, it was noted that the property was bringing in $300 a year rental.

Washington's land holdings proved his financial salvation. Mount Vernon, during his years as president and afterward, was a losing proposition. The Virginia planters were struggling against a changing economic system that was to ruin them in the end. Just a few months before he died Washington wrote that he had been compelled to sell $50,000 worth of land during the last four years, and that the proceeds had barely been sufficient to keep him afloat. His estate at his death was appraised at $530,000, a large sum for the period, but by no means as large as the estates of many of his contemporaries.

GREYLING WILL SELL ITS OWN PROPERTIES

The Greyling Realty Corporation has organized a sales department, and beginning March 1 will handle all its properties from the quarters of the Mortgage Guaranty Company, according to an announcement Saturday of Kirk Smith, president of the Mortgage Guaranty Company.

A. H. Sturgess has been made manager of the sales department, and with him will be W. H. Boswell, C. A. Blanchard, F. M. Dunaphaut and W. T. Johnson, salesmen. The company had already been operating a renting department.

Mr. Smith also announced that the scope of the insurance department with M. C. Kreps in charge had been enlarged.

The two companies together will handle all phases of real estate operations, including loans, sales, renting and insurance, with a force of about 50 people.

NEW SALE POLICY GOVERNS HANDLING OF "USED" HOUSES

A new policy of marketing repossessed houses, to use an automobile term, has been adopted by one of the largest mortgage companies in Atlanta, it was announced on Saturday by the Atlanta real estate board.

Instead of putting foreclosed properties on the market as "distressed holdings" offered at cut-rate figures, the company takes over these parcels, has them renovated and put in good shape and offers them for sale as other properties not distressed are offered. In cases where sales are slow, the company rents its houses until they are finally disposed of.

The company found, according to the board, that sales kept up just as well as when supposedly bargain prices were offered. The average buyer, the company discovered, is willing to pay more for a house that has been put in livable shape and requires no further repairs than one at a much lower price that has to be licked into condition.

This policy is commended by the board also because it puts the distressed property on a par with others not distressed, and does not offer unfair competition. It believes that this policy will be followed generally.

A large insurance company which had to take over a few high-class residences has been following this policy for some time. It put the necessary repairs on the houses, and offered them at a fair price. While it had no great amount of such properties it had little trouble in disposing of them under this plan.

The average buyer is not disposed to buy real estate in the rough, even at a substantial reduction in price. He is willing to pay for a finished product. Not that all foreclosed property is in a dilapidated condition, but any place occupied for some time is apt to need certain repairs if no more than a new coat of paint and newly-tinted walls.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Patiently waiting for something to turn up, stocks today droned through the dullest Saturday since last August. Transactions amounted to 400,340 shares and price changes were narrow and irregular.

The market refused to express sympathy over Auburn's early sag to a new low. Here and there another stock broke out of line with the prevailing fractional variations, but few of these moves attained proportions of more than a point. The list's behavior, in short, quite bore out the consensus of brokerage house opinion that a professional trading area was all that could be expected until events change the viewpoint.

Railroad earnings statements provided material for further comment. Santa Fe had an operating deficit of $125,901 last month, which prompted some selling of the stock. However, the extreme 2-point loss was halved. Baltimore & Ohio made a good showing, thanks to a sharp reduction in operating expenses. Pennsylvania's January brought a contraction.

A few roads made separate tabulations of the income received from the higher freight rates effective early this year. Five carriers which followed this practice reported that gross had been swelled only 1.87 per cent by the new tariffs, although it was pointed out that the early returns were hardly a fair measure of ultimate results since the seasonal influence on commodity shipments should be taken into account.

Henry Ford's announcement of his big production program, involving enormous expenditures for raw materials and labor, was naturally received with wide interest, especially the figures on the amount of steel he intends to buy in the open market. In some quarters it was suggested that such impressive leadership should have an important psychological effect.

With the Glass-Steagall bill ready for use, financial quarters will follow closely the open market operations of the central banking system, especially for changes in holdings of government securities which can now be used as collateral behind reserve notes. The banks are in a position to expand credit aggressively; so far in the depression they have not made use of the expansion possible through purchases of federal obligations.

The March money settlements are expected to be smaller this year. Income tax payments and dividend disbursements will probably be under those of 1931, while the government financing, although still undisclosed, will undoubtedly provide for the exchange of maturing issues for new securities.

The handful of stocks which became prominent because of their break from the rut included Lambert and Western Union, each down a couple of points. The former, returning a large yield, has a dividend meeting coming soon. Although the company covered its payment last year, there have been reports that a rate revision was in prospect. Western Union probably reflected estimates of unfavorable 1931 earnings.

American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and Canadian Pacific each firmed a point. United States Steel, American Can, Westinghouse, General Motors, Gillette, New York Central, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical returned small and mixed net changes. Transamerica was heavy, off half a point.

Foreign Markets

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

LONDON—Trading on the stock exchange was quiet today. The undertone for gilt-edged securities was good, with further purchases for foreign and home accounts at hardening values. Chinese and Japanese bonds declined.

PARIS—Prices opened strong on the bourse today but weakened somewhat under profit-taking. During the late trading sales were easily absorbed, causing prices to advance again and the closing was firm.

BERLIN—Business on the boerse was further restricted and the tendency was irregular. Reichsbank and several industrial shares closed firm.

STOCKS' LOSSES SMALL FOR WEEK

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Wall Street was distinctly pleased this week by the enactment of the Glass-Steagall bill to make the federal reserve system more effective, the marked abatement of bank suspensions, and the subsidence of the outward flow of gold.

Nevertheless, reports from the industrial fronts still failed to indicate any general improvement and the securities markets drifted idly, as buyers were inclined to demand tangible signs of restoration of corporate earnings, rather than hopes, in view of the many disappointments of the past.

Despite the apathy of the markets, however, sentiment in important financial quarters was unmistakably improved. Bankers explained that powerful measures had been taken to break the vicious circle of deflation, and that it may be actually broken, but even so, the restoration of public confidence and a normal volume of business could scarcely be expected to come overnight.

The reduction in the New York Federal Reserve bank's rediscount rate to 3 from 3 1-2 per cent acted as a stimulant to high-grade bonds, but the advance was soon checked by profit-taking. While United States governments reached new high levels for the year, there was little change in the corporate bond averages.

Stocks reacted rather substantially on Monday, but thereafter drifted in an extremely narrow range, with price averages virtually unchanged in the final two sessions of the week. The Monday reaction appeared merely to complete a normal technical reaction from the vigorous rally earlier in the month. The price average of 90 issues showed a net loss for the week of only 1 2-5 points.

The short selling controversy continued to occupy much attention with the testimony of President Whitney of the exchange before a house committee in Washington, and the announcement that a senate committee may call some of the "big bears." Wall Street is not of one mind as to what means should be taken to control speculation, but on the whole, fails to find any very severe indictment of the bears in a general level of stock prices, as measured by averages of leading issues, currently in the range of 1922, in view of current corporate earnings.

While the market as a whole lost but little ground during the past week, a few issues slumped rather substantially. These included Auburn Auto, which was under considerable pressure, coincident with less optimistic earnings estimates. Some of the rails were also distinctly reactionary, in response to the reports of January revenues. Miscellaneous industrials lost ground, largely reflecting indications of impaired earnings or probable dividend shrinkage.

In foreign exchanges, marked strength of the dollar as against the French franc reduced the franc to a level at which further gold taking from New York would be unprofitable. Some further drawing down of the French balances are expected, but with enactment of the Glass-Steagall bill, the metal can be spared without notice. Some observers expect that France may soon become an exporter of gold, in view of the marked impairment of its trade balance and the belated inroads of depression in that country. The Japanese yen was again acutely weak, as that country grew increasingly involved in China.

Ford Stakes Great Fortune On His World Trade Revival

BY JAMES SWEINHART.
(Copyright, 1932, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

DETROIT, Feb. 27.—When Henry Ford gives the word for mass production on his new V-Eight and improved Model-A-Ford cars throughout the vast organization of the Ford Motor Company, as he will do probably next week, there will be revealed, well under way, one of the greatest epics of modern world industry.

Mr. Ford will start an industrial revival, which will be felt the world round. And to do that he is literally risking a great fortune.

"The American people have made Ford Motor Company what it is," he said the other day. "We have nothing the public did not give us. No surplus exists for private benefit—every surplus is provided for future use. The future is here and we are going to do our utmost—risk everything, if necessary—to use this surplus which the public, through its dealings with us, has provided; to see if we cannot make what the country needs most—work, jobs! We are going to risk everything we've got to create useful work for just as many people as possible!"

Mr. Ford realizes that his own industries alone will not end the depression. But he believes that if he can operate to capacity, or nearly so, thousands of other industries will take heart and resume production, and the depression will slowly disappear.

"You know, faith is catching!" he keeps saying.

His Huge Task.

To set the Ford Motor Company operating at capacity is a task so huge, widespread and complex that there are no words to convey its full meaning in one phrase. A glimpse at some angles may help.

First, after three years' depression, with 7,000,000 out of work in the United States alone, how many prospective buyers of low-priced cars are there in the world?

Price, terms, volume of hoarded money, prospective employment for the masses—definite knowledge of these and many other unfathomable factors are essential to a correct answer. The best minds can only speculate.

To get the retail price so low the masses can buy it, raw materials and supplies going into a car must be bought at the lowest figure. To get them at this figure they must be bought in tremendous volume. So mammoth an intake of goods requires collossal production to consume. Such huge purchasing and production demand staggering sums. Buying and producing on such a scale require wholesale and sustained buying by the public—so goes the cycle back to the unknown and unknowable factor.

Yet Mr. Ford is by no means going it blind—he knows the beat and throb of his own industries are so powerful and far-reaching they must have a tremendous effect in stirring other industries to action.

Consider figures which will follow and what they mean to the United States, to foreign countries, to the railroad and shipping industries of the world. Such a tide of employment and flow of goods are a small world in themselves if a strong market develops, and men supposed to know say Mr. Ford's potential selling field was never before so great, the volume of production will be increased to meet it.

Purchases of Material.

Based on an anticipated production of 1,500,000 cars a year, gross purchases of raw materials and supplies will average more than $52,000,000 a month. During peak production in previous years purchases have exceeded $80,000,000 a month.

On this basis Mr. Ford will spend more than $300,000,000 in Detroit and Michigan for raw materials, manufactured supplies, freight and labor the remainder of 1932. In the Detroit district alone he will employ more than 100,000 men at the standard minimum wage of $6 a day and upward. The average monthly pay roll in the Detroit district will run to more than $18,000,000 a month. Now it approximates $10,000,000.

To feed the Ford plants with raw and manufactured materials and goods, more than 5,500 direct and indirect suppliers, scattered over the United States, will employ approximately 300,000 men. Of these suppliers, approximately 1,200 are in Detroit and 300 in Michigan outside Detroit.

To keep the plants going it is estimated there will be a freight movement of 236,000 inbound and 228,000 outbound cars with a freight bill, paid directly by Mr. Ford to the railroads and shipping companies of the United States, of more than $86,000,000. Suppliers shipping to Mr. Ford will pay the railroads upward of $10,000,000 more. Handling the railroad cars will require larger railroad working forces.

In his own mills Mr. Ford will make $16,500,000 worth of steel. From outside makers he will purchase more than $47,000,000. A good part of this will be spent in the Detroit industrial district.

Some Needed Items.

Ford production will mean the purchase of $4,680,000 in gray iron, and $5,044,000 in malleable castings—most of which will come from the Detroit district. The Ford tire bill will exceed $20,000,000, and $4,800,000 will be spent for crude rubber on top of that.

Into production will go approximately $3,500,000 in copper, $1,500,000 in lead, $4,854,000 in paint, and $10,100,000 in glass. For bodies alone Mr. Ford will spend $200,000,000. Of these, bodies to a value of $60,000,000 will be built in Ford plants; $140,000,000 will be spent with outside makers, mostly in the Detroit district.

The trimming of bodies will mean spending $48,000,000 for upholstery, cloth, carpet, cotton, laces, leather and the like. Hard lumber, solely for manufacture, not including a vast sum spent for boxing, crating, housing, will cost more than $4,000,000. Additional machinery will cost $6,375,000.

And, looking over the world, Ford's plants will draw materials and finished parts from England, Germany, France, Russia, Canada, India, Brazil, Mexico, Japan, the federated Malay states and the straits settlement.

This launching of so huge a movement without certainty of an ocean of orders is fascinating.

"Are you going into big production right away?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Well," he answered, "we expect to be making from 5,000 to 6,000 cars a day before very long."

"That's a lot of cars and these are hard times. How do you know you can sell them all?"

"We don't! But we're going to make a try and find out."

"But won't this 'try' cost millions on millions?"

"I don't know. I don't want to know—not now."

To Start Prosperity.

"You mean you are risking say $100,000,000—whatever it may come to—to help end the depression, when all you have is a hope, not a certainty, that you have a market?"

"I mean," he answered, "that we're going to put up everything we've got to help start the wheels turning."

That, apparently, is one reason Mr. Ford has given such intensive personal attention to the building of his new and improved products—so much is at stake!

Those close to him say that to a degree equalled only by the original Model Ts, the new Ford V-eight will be a visible, tangible, expression of Henry Ford's genius, skill and personality. There is scarcely a part in it, they say, that at some stage has not had the personal attention or borne the thumb-mark of Henry Ford.

There have been rumors that Mr. Ford, in marketing this year's output, would depart radically from his sales terms of the past.

"It has been rumored you are going to offer unusual financing plans, such as $100 down and 24 months to pay the balance. Is there any truth in such reports?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"None whatever!" he replied. "The most economical way to purchase an automobile is for cash. However, many buyers prefer to pay by installments. The standard terms now in use are not to be changed."

$2.88 a Day Worker Father of 19th Child

SEDALIA, Mo., Feb. 27.—(UP) Mrs. Martha Murray, 41, who vowed three years ago that the twins just born to her would be her last children, glanced down today at her 19th child, born in Bothwell hospital and smiled proudly.

"I would not go through it again for a million dollars," she said three years ago.

"Well, of course—" she amended today, then explained that she regarded her 19th child as the crowning glory of a life devoted to motherhood.

It's a girl and she weighed 12 pounds.

Mrs. Murray is the wife of a Missouri Pacific section hand, whose wages amount to $2.88 a day.

PHIL PERKINS SHOT BY MIAMI BANDIT

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—A one-armed grocer who turned bandit leader was killed, and T. Philip Perkins, 29, former British amateur champion, and five other persons were wounded in a gun battle that early today climaxed the most daring night club raids in Miami's history.

Perkins was a guest at the club. He was wounded in the thigh by one of the bandits who had used him as a shield after gun play with two policemen who were eating in the kitchen frustrated a plan to hold up patrons of the gambling casino of the fashionable Embassy Night Club. No money was taken during the raid.

Perkins was to have played in the final match of the Dixie amateur golf tournament here today, but tourney officials gave the title to Tommy Goodwin, Monroe, N. Y., by default when the Briton's physician said his wound would prevent his playing in competition for at least a month.

The dead man, who had strapped a home-made wooden forearm to his maimed upper as a disguise, was identified as A. Y. Yarborough, formerly a grocer of Lakeland, Fla., and described by police as being more recently a small gambler here.

He was killed by a bullet from the pistol of Bert Muth, a watchman, as he fled the scene of the gun battle between his followers and two policemen, Mack Oakford and G. J. Smith. He had been struck by bullets in the night club before Muth shot him four times in the head at a distance of about 40 feet as he emerged from the crowd of panic-stricken patrons pouring out doors of the club.

The wounded, besides the British golfer, included three members of Yarborough's band, George Meyers, 40, Tulsa, Okla., critically wounded in the mouth; Eugene Eckman, 50, Miami, critically wounded near the heart, and an unidentified member of the gang who made his escape with two uninjured members.

In addition, George Fratten, 30, and John B. Runs, also known as Frank Woods, employes of the club, were wounded in the legs.

While patrons attired in dinner clothes and expensive jewelry clustered about gaming tables and on the dance floor, the bandits, with one of their number, Eckman, admittedly recruited from a street corner only two hours before, entered the kitchen of the club. Oakford and Smith, the policemen, were in plain clothes and were eating their supper.

Yarborough, holding a sawed-off shotgun, ordered kitchen employes and the policemen to march into the main dining room.

While three of the band attempted to close and bar the kitchen doors, Yarborough and two others advanced with shotguns toward the gambling casino. Oakford drew his pistol and emptied the chamber at the leaders while the attention of the rear guard was centered on closing the doors.

Yarborough returned the fire, but a bullet from the gun of one of the policemen wounded him. He fled amid the panic-stricken guests, leaving his companions inside.

Eckman and Meyer, left inside the gambling casino, were wounded during the ensuing gun battle.

One member of the three-man rear guard was wounded as he left the building with the other two, but escaped. Police failed to find him today.

Fourth Victim Falls Before Gangland Guns

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Gangland's reported "truce" was broken again today by the fourth slaying in two days.

The body of Charles Gentile, 26, described by police as a beer baron, was found in a ditch near the Cleveland airport, his body pierced by eight steel-jacketed bullets and a half-smoked cigar held fast in his hand.

His mother said he left home last night in response to a telephone call from someone saying he was "in trouble." That was all that was learned about his movements until his body was discovered early today. Police said it was evident he had been "taken for a ride" by someone he thought was a friend.

Gentile, according to detectives, was a member of the Lonardo faction, three of whose members are sought for the triple execution Thursday of Raymond and Rosario Porello, brothers, and their henchman, Domenico Gueli. For years the Porello and Lonardo factions have engaged in a bloody strife for control of the corn sugar business.

DEPUTY IS REVEALED AS GOTHAM GANGSTER

LAKE PLEASANT, N. Y., Feb. 27. (AP)—When Peter Wilson was elected sheriff of sparsely settled Hamilton county, the county seat of which has no rail connections, he asked political leaders to recommend a man for deputy.

They suggested Peter Flegenheimer and Wilson promptly issued the necessary credentials and a pistol permit.

But Flegenheimer failed to call for his deputy's badge and Wilson asked state troopers about it.

They informed him his "deputy" in reality was "Dutch Schultz," New York gangster and rival of the late Vincent Coll, who recently was machine-gunned to death in a telephone booth.

CANDIDATES MUST APPLY IN FLORIDA

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP) The names of candidates for president will not be printed on the Florida preferential primary ballots unless they make application over their own signature, according to a ruling of Chairman J. B. Hodges of the state democratic executive committee in a letter to Carl Hanton, editor of the News-Press here.

FORMER BANKER DIES IN INDIANA PRISON CELL

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Feb. 27. (AP)—Walter E. Meyn, 33, former Hammond, Ind., bank executive, died today in the prison to which he went in an effort to shield his father from a similar fate.

DRY G. O. P. STAND IS SEEN BY BORAH

Retention of 1928 Plank Predicted; Democratic Controversy on Issue Is Foreseen.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(AP)—Confidence that the republican national convention would adhere to previous dry pledges was voiced today by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, in the face of eastern demands for a repeal plank at the Chicago meeting in June.

The action of New Jersey republicans in recommending that its delegation work for a repeal declaration drew no comment from the Idahoan, but he recalled that a similar effort failed in 1928.

Senator Borah was a member of the resolutions committee at the Kansas City convention four years ago and was largely responsible for the dry plank adopted then. If he attends the Chicago convention, it is expected he will have a lot to say about the prohibition resolution.

New Jersey and other eastern republicans appear determined to fight for a repeal or modification plank. Some have attempted to obtain President Hoover's sanction for a new declaration on prohibition, but so far as is known the executive has made no promises and is not expected to make any.

Expected to Stay Dry.

Republican leaders on the dry side are convinced Mr. Hoover is not going to take a wet or even a moist stand, thus leaving the issue to be thrashed out on the convention floor.

Four years ago it was Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and former Senator Wadsworth, of the New York delegation, who championed the wet cause at the convention, but a dry plank was adopted, saying:

"The people, through the method provided by the constitution, have written the 18th amendment into the constitution. The republican party pledges itself and its nominees to the observance and vigorous enforcement of this provision of the constitution."

Borah expressed the view that this year's prohibition plank would be similar to that of 1928.

The democrats are not without their troubles on prohibition, with Chairman Raskob's home-rule plank looming as a possible squabble producer.

Meanwhile, the race for democratic delegates continues and congress is growing apprehensive over whether it will be in a position to adjourn in time for the June conclaves.

Congress Interruption.

With controversial legislation and appropriation bills piling up in the senate, some leaders believe a recess will be necessary and another session held after the conventions.

However, the conventions are three and a half months away and the senate has been known to do a lot of things with dispatch once it gets in the mood.

No delegates are to be chosen next week, but the following week the first presidential primary will be held in New Hampshire, where a contest is on between Governor Roosevelt and former Governor Smith.

Thus far Roosevelt has 16 delegates from Washington state lined up for him. Six in Alaska have been instructed for him, but they must be ratified at an April primary and other slates may be formed before then.

Governor Murray, of Oklahoma, who carried his sweeping campaign for the democratic presidential nomination into Indiana this week with seven speeches, has Oklahoma's 22 delegates instructed for him, but that is as far as the democratic delegate picking has gone.

Murray Application.

Murray's name was filed in Oregon, but he failed to qualify in Georgia, despite a request by Governor Roosevelt that the rules be waived on late filing.

Roosevelt's name was filed in Nebraska. In that state and Georgia, adherents of Speaker Garner for the nomination have ignored suggestions by Representative Rayburn, democrat, Texas, a Garner worker, that the speaker's name be kept out of those races.

Representative Rayburn issued a statement today denying he was campaign manager for his Texas friend and saying he was not authorized to speak for him. He explained he was merely the national representative of the Texas committee set up last week at San Antonio at a Garner rally.

During the week the Garner movement spread to Florida, where a Methodist minister said he would place the Texan's name on the ballot.

Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, another democratic presidential possibility, carried his speech-making to Michigan and next Thursday plans to address a joint session of the South Carolina legislature.

SWINT IN STERCHI TIRE DEPARTMENT

Automobile owners in Atlanta will be interested in the announcement that C. F. Swint, one of Atlanta's best known tire men, is now manager of the tire department at Sterchi's, 116, 118 and 120 Whitehall street, S. W.

C. F. SWINT.

Mr. Swint has had many years of practical experience in selling automobile tires and his knowledge of the needs of autoists will be valuable to the users of Sterchi's bonded tires and tubes.

"The matter of proper equipment to meet the particular needs of each car owner is being stressed as never before," says Mr. Swint, "as the maximum of mileage is now demanded at the minimum of cost."

Few tire men in Atlanta are as well equipped to render this valuable service to the car owners as Mr. Swint, who invites customers and friends from over the south to visit him in his new location.

Zoo Director Target of Abuse As N'Gi, Baby Gorilla, Improves

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—(UP) While N'Gi, the baby gorilla, suffering pneumonia, huddled beneath a blanket in the oxygen chamber which was brought here from New York to aid the fight for his recovery, the first criticisms of so much attention for a sick gorilla made their appearance.

"Before today," said Dr. William M. Mann, director of the zoo, "every message was one of sympathetic inquiry. Now they are beginning to abuse us for making all this fuss over a monkey when so many sick children aren't able to get the attention they need.

"My job is the monkey. I've got to do everything I can for him. The humanitarians and others are looking out for the children, but N'Gi is my particular assignment right now."

The lion house was still closed to visitors. The jungle beasts paced their cages, seemingly well aware that something of unusual significance was happening in their midst. Keepers reported they were not eating well and appeared strangely disturbed.

In front of N'Gi's cage, between the two-toed sloth and the zoo's other gorilla, is an elaborate set-up of oxygen tanks, a generator, tubes and gauges. The oxygen chamber is fitted neatly into N'Gi's cage.

N'Gi, desperately ill of an acute influenza bordering on pneumonia, lies on a tuft of straw. He submits to external rubs, heart and lung tests, the taking of pulse and respiration. The little fellow, about the size of a four-year-old child, clings with shaggy arms to the doctors and keepers who minister to him, as if encouraging them to help him.

But he will not accept alcoholic stimulant.

A well wisher brought a bottle of rare vintage port wine to the zoo today. Dr. D. E. Buckingham, veterinarian, mixed some with water and sugar. N'Gi turned his head away when it was offered.

The gorilla was eating better and this gave encouragement to the attendants. The even flow of air, conditioned to exactly the right temperature, has cleared his nose and throat passages. This makes it easier to eat and sleep. Both are essential to his recovery.

N'Gi is of a rare lowlands species, one of eight gorillas in America. No gorilla ever has attained maturity in captivity and science hopes to learn much from the battle for N'Gi's life.

Discovery of Tiny 'Neutron' Hailed As Science's Newest Achievement

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27.—(AP)—The discovery in Cavendish laboratory, Cambridge University, London, by James Chadwick of the "neutron," a particle so minute it carries no electrical charge, and hailed as the greatest find in the scientific world since the electron, the proton and the X-ray, was announced today by the Baltimore Sun in a dispatch from the Manchester Guardian.

The "neutron" was described as one of the ultimate particles in nature, so tiny it would take 200,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 (200 sextillions) to make a mass weighing an ounce. Neutrons are not waves, the dispatch said, but particles, but they have, as particles, hitherto unknown powers of penetration.

In the realm of astronomy and the evolution of the universe, neutrons are of fundamental importance, representing the first step in the evolution of matter out of primeval electrons and protons, the paper said.

The neutron is halfway between electricity and helium; it is the embryonic form of ordinary matter growing but not born.

The neutron consists of a proton and an electron bound closely together. It is speculated the neutron may be the unit of magnetism, for it presumably is a doublet, as magnets are, with both a north and south pole, the dispatch continued.

Physicists at the Johns Hopkins University, when told of the discovery, hailed the achievement as one of the first importance.

SMALL GIRL KILLS MOTHER ACCIDENTALLY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 27.—(UP)—Accidentally shot by her 8-year-old daughter at 7 a. m. today, Mrs. B. W. Conner, 33, Brickeys, Ark., died this afternoon at Baptist hospital.

The little girl picked up the gun while her mother was preparing breakfast. She pointed it toward her mother. It discharged.

SOUTHEASTERN GROUP URGES DISARMAMENT

WINTER PARK, Fla., Feb. 27.—(AP)—The theory that disarmament is not only ideal but in the end more practicable than arms limitation, was indorsed by a group of delegates to the ninth annual southeastern conference of International Relations Clubs here today.

War, Rear Admiral C. L. Hussey, retired, said, is caused by activities of unarmed forces of nations, not the armies and navies of those nations.

"It is believed," he added, "that peace will come when the nations of the world disarm, but disarmament will not come until we have normal armament to take the place of armed forces."

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Charity Callaway, who departed this life one year ago today.
Into Heavens of the Great Beyond,
Your work here on earth was well done
So rest in peace, my beloved one,
While my heart hangs heavy with grief and pain.
Lonely am I without you, Mama!
Since you left me, my precious one,
But in memory, you are always with me,
And shall be, until to you, I come.
LUCY BLANTON, Daughter.

FOUR ARE SEEKING OVERMAN'S SEAT

Issues of National Interest Involved in North Carolina Contest.

BY ROBERT A. ERWIN.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 27.—(UP) Issues of national interest are involved in the impending battle for the democratic nomination for United States senator, which for more than 30 years has been equivalent to election in this state.

Power, prohibition, party regularity and the "big interests" are the chief issues. At present there are four candidates, including the white-haired Cameron M. Morrison, United States senator by appointment of Governor O. Max Gardner to succeed the late Lee Slater Overman.

Morrison is being attacked on the power, party regularity and "big interest" issues by State Commissioner of Labor Frank D. Grist, World War veteran, who has declared the chief question in the campaign is the "right of the little man to live."

Grist is assailing Morrison for his stand in favor of the Duke Power Company, of Charlotte, N. C., the senator's home town. Morrison declared the Duke company was a benevolent organization through its connection with the Duke Endowment, which gives millions to charitable and public causes.

The labor commissioner also challenges the senator's party regularity in supporting Frank R. McNinch, of Charlotte, state anti-Smith chairman in 1928, for the federal power commission.

Prohibition has been injected by Robert R. Reynolds, Asheville attorney, who polled 96,000 votes in a lone fight against Senator Overman in 1926.

Reynolds is for modification of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act. His methods of campaigning are unique. In 1928 he toured the state in an open car. His coming was heralded by the chauffeur, who blew a trumpet. From his car, Reynolds gave red and white stick candy to children.

The fourth candidate is former Judge Thomas C. (Tam) Bowie, leader of the mountain country of northwest North Carolina. Judge Bowie has assailed Senator Morrison on many issues.

In spite of the democratic majority in North Carolina, the strong republican minority cannot be discounted.

ROSENDAHL DEFENDS ORDERS FOR AKRON

LAKEHURST, N. J., Feb. 27.—Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, captain of the navy dirigible Akron, vigorously denied tonight published reports that he had taken the ship out of the hangar last Monday under pressure from Rear Admiral William A. Moffett at Washington.

"Admiral Moffett has at all times left us to decide for ourselves if weather conditions are favorable for the ship to fly," Commander Rosendahl said.

~~The weather had been bad Sunday~~ night, he explained, and consequently he and Captain Harry Shoemaker, commandant at Lakehurst, had called off a flight planned for midnight. Admiral Moffett was apprised of this by telephone and told that conditions for the Monday flight on which members of the house naval subcommittee were to inspect the airship were not good.

"A little before 8 o'clock Monday morning Admiral Moffett called me," Captain Rosendahl continued. "He told me the weather was clearing in Washington and asked me about conditions at Lakehurst. I said they had improved during the night, but the weather was mild and the map showed signs of further improvement.

"Admiral Moffett did not at any time urge me to take the ship out. I told him I would have a new weather map prepared before 10 o'clock and that if the forenoon map showed the improvement I hoped it would, the flight would be made."

Going on the air at 10:15 p. m., eastern standard time, the broadcast will last for 40 minues. President Hoover will talk from Washington and will be followed by the secretary of the treasury, Ogden Mills; Charles G. Dawes, president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Senator Joseph E. Robinson, of Arkansas, democratic leader of the senate. The broadcast will be over the red chain of the National Broadcasting Company.

AGNES SCOTT GIRLS OFFER 'PYGMALION,' G. B. SHAW COMEDY

"Pygmalion," George Bernard Shaw's comedy of the English language, was presented Saturday night by the Blackfriars Dramatic Club of Agnes Scott College at the school auditorium. The play was directed by Frances K. Gooch.

The actors all carried out their parts well, especially Miss Margaret Belote, who enacted the role of Henry Higgins, the great teacher of English diction, and Miss Amelia O'Neal, who impersonated the little English flower girl who was transformed into a "duchess" by Higgins' teaching her how to speak correctly.

The girls who took the part of men in the play succeeded in making the audience forget that they weren't men, so well were they trained. "Pygmalion" is one of the most delightful of Shaw's plays, and was well received by the crowd which filled the auditorium.

Educational Committee Chairman Begs for Completion of Memorial

BY MRS. L. W. GREENE,
Editor of Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Mrs. T. W. Reed, of Athens, chairman of the committee on education of the national organization, U. D. C., in an appeal for the completion of the Mrs. L. H. Raines memorial in today's columns not only intrigues our especial interest, which is no small achievement, when the U. D. C. is so crowded with both appeals and with special interest—but her message admittedly is of particular timeliness and possesses a lucid and graceful way of outlining a duty to every member of the Georgia division which does not admit of side-stepping. Twelve cents per member, the amount assessed, actually smacks of penury—until multiplied by 7,000 and then added to by the gifts of the Children of the Confederacy, which in themselves, are no mean sum—and then it is being driven in the direction of accomplishment with indefatigable energy. "We never give, but giving, get again"—so often in the consciousness of a well performed duty.

Mrs. Reed's message is presented:

"Worthy movements inaugurated by the United Daughters of the Confederacy should always be carried speedily to completion. Quick, effective work always brings results. One of the chief aims of the president general, Mrs. W. E. R. Byrne, is to complete the work of raising the sum set as a goal for the Mrs. L. H. Raines Memorial loan fund before the opening of the convention in Memphis next fall. The Matthew Fontaine Maury fund and the Winnie Davis Memorial fund have been completed. Now let us all set ourselves to the task of completing the splendid memorial to Mrs. L. H. Raines, who was one of the great leaders of the U. D. C. in its formative period, as $5,000 is the amount needed to complete the fund.

"The management of the campaign to secure these funds was assigned to the committee on education, aided by the chairmen of education in the divisions and chapters where there are no divisions. The present general chairman of education has been directing this work for the past two years and she hopes to bring it to a conclusion this year. The quota assigned to each division was 12 cents per member, according to the number of tax-paying members of the organization as appears in the table on Page 415, Biloxi convention minutes.

"Some of the divisions and chapters have contributed their full quotas. If they wish to make further contributions, they will not be denied that privilege. Those divisions that have not yet met their quotas have been furnished information as to the balance yet due and have been asked to make a special effort to send in this year all they owe to bring their contributions up to their full quotas. The call for 12 cents per member is not in any way an excessive call. It lays no burden on anyone. It is difficult to imagine how 12 cents can be expended to a better advantage.

The purpose of the fund is to render aid to worthy descendants of Confederate soldiers or sailors who wish to do graduate, vocational work. The interest only is to be used for loans. The principal is to be invested and remain intact for all time.

"The fund is being established in memory of Mrs. L. H. Raines, of Georgia, who was one of the greatest and most beloved leaders in the U. D. C. in its earlier years. She was one of the patriotic women who brought the United Daughters of the Confederacy into being and to the end of her life she labored lovingly for the advancement of the organization. All divisions are urged to send the money in as early as possible in the spring so that, when completed, the funds may be invested in good bonds and begin bearing interest with which to put the fund in active operation. Send contributions to Mrs. John W. Daniel, 102 East Henry street, Savannah.

"Most wonderful grand prize ever offered for an essay contest. Eight weeks in camp—value $450. To the girl or boy under sixteenth birthday."—That is the text of the message sent over the state by Mrs. Joseph Vason, chairman of the U. D. C. essay contest, and by no means a summary of its contents. But oh, it's just that lovely that it really needs no shop window tactics to emphasize the glorious possibilities sewed up in this promise of good times next summer to the real lucky two who win these eight weeks in the Clayton and Wiley camps, situated in the Blue Ridge mountains. The camps are owned and managed by A. A. Jamerson, who is the generous donor of the campships. And one has only to win by writing the best essay on General John Brown Gordon, Georgia's illustrious son. Write Mrs. Joseph Vason, Madison, Ga., for all necessary information.

Sidney Lanier chapter, Macon, and the Dixie chapter, of Eatonton, are offering nice size pictures of General John B. Gordon at 5 cents each.

Members of the U. D. C., representatives of the city of Clarksville, American Legion, P.-T. A. and the faculty and student body of the Clarksville school took part in the exercises. Sutton, president, told of the request of the bicentennial commission for the planting of 10,000 memorial trees in honor of Washington, who was a lover of trees. The chapter voted to aid the local unemployment situation by undertaking the beautification of the McDonough cemetery. Graves of Confederate and Spanish-American veterans, not previously so distinguished, will be marked with a government marker, shrubbery planted to form avenues at each entrance and ornamental gates constructed. A committee consisting of Mesdames E. L. Reagan, C. B Golsan, Adam Sloan and H. B. Carmichael was appointed to handle this project. Small donations were voted for the Old Ladies' Home and the Frances Bartow Memorial. A program on George Washington was presented by Miss Mamie Alexander. Mrs. Charlie Kimbell sang "Father of the Country We Love." Miss Marjorie Turner read "The Boyhood Days of Washington," and Mrs. Hugh Turner spoke on the "Human Qualities of Washington."

Mary Kate Hudson, 101 Oakland avenue, in Decatur, the treasurer of the division of Children of the Confederacy, says: "Greetings to the Children of Confederacy chapters. It is only a few months now till June and I am very anxious to have a good report to help our director, Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, with, as in these adverse times we must rally to her and our beloved cause. Will you please send per capita tax dues 10 cents each and contribution for publishing minutes to me? Send contribution to Mildred Rutherford scholarship fund to Miss Saro Jo Tribble, Lithonia, Ga. (This is Georgia's own Children of Confederacy fund.) The Winnie Davis Memorial loan fund was finished last year and in its place we are asked by our director general to contribute $2 a chapter to the Raines Memorial fund. This fund is named for a Georgia woman If you cannot give the $2 please make contribution as large as you can. This is our only general call. Send this contribution to Miss Grace McCullough, Tallapoosa, Georgia."

Fidac Activities Program Presented By Georgia and National Chairmen

BY MRS. WHEELER TOLBERT,
Publicity Director, Georgia Department.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 27.—Fidac activities of the American Legion Auxiliary have assumed within the past few months a greater importance than ever before. Of special interest at the national executive committee meeting on January 29-30 was the report of the national Fidac committee, read by Mrs. Donald MacRae Jr., chairman. It presented the four specific activities of the program for this year, as follows:

First, the holding of a national Fidac essay contest on "Why We Have a Fete on Armistice Day." The holding of local contests, district and department, is contemplated, with the winning essays from each department being entered in the national contest. Three sets of source records are offered as prizes for the three national winners. All high school pupils and pupils in other schools carrying high school curricula are eligible to compete. Essays are limited to 1,000 words and should reach national headquarters not later than March 1.

Second, the study of Portugal, the "1932 Fidac country," where the interallied congresses of Fidac and the Fidac Auxiliary will be held this year.

Third, the holding of Fidac doll contests by all departments and the national organization, dolls to be of uniform size, 15 inches in height, and dressed in costumes typical of the different states. The department contests are to be conducted at the department conventions and the three winning dolls from each department entered in the national contest to be held during the national convention in Portland. From the dolls displayed at Portland, an American exhibit will be made up and sent to the Paris headquarters of the Fidac Auxiliary.

Fourth, the making of a collection of choice photographic views of America's points of great beauty and interest, to be added to the American section of the Fidac Auxiliary library in Paris. Departments are urged to secure post card views of points of greatest beauty or interest in their states from their units, forwarding to national headquarters, where the collection for the Fidac Auxiliary library will be arranged.

These activities give the auxiliary a well-rounded program of Fidac work for 1932, which, if carried out by all units, will contribute effectively to the development of better international understanding. At this time, when so many events are tending to destroy understanding between nations and to rekindle national animosities which are such fertile ground for the seeds of war, we should all give increased attention to Fidac activities and make Fidac programs this year an outstanding success.

Last month, department Fidac chairman, Miss Mattie Kate Bagley, of Columbus, mailed to every unit president and Fidac chairman in Georgia a copy of the December, 1931, issue of the American Legion Auxiliary Bulletin, containing a splendid article by Mrs. Donald MacRae Jr. on "Portugal," the scene of the 1932 Fidac congress, of which country the Fidac Auxiliary makes a study this year, which article contains a brief history of Portugal, suggestions for program, and a list of books and stories on the subject. Concerning this, Miss Bagley issued the following statement: "I would like every Fidac chairman in Georgia to make an extensive study of international questions. Great changes in the human attitude come slowly by education. We must help Georgia to better understand that the objects of Fidac are to maintain, foster and develop the spirit of comradeship which manifested itself on the battlefields of the World War and to use this comradeship in the interest of peace everlasting.

"Two one-year subscriptions will be awarded through the Georgia department to the unit doing the most outstanding Fidac work—one for the best Fidac scrapbook and the other for the best Fidac program. Fidac Review is published at Fidac headquarters in Paris and printed in two languages, French and English, and is sent to subscribers in the United States for $2 per year. Subscriptions may be made through your department chairman, or through national headquarters of the American Legion Auxiliary. In this Review appear articles written by war veterans about their own countries, the problems of their countries and other points of general interest to all willing to help the plan for peace and understanding among all the nations, through which it is hoped all future proposed wars may never be fought."

President Issues Message.

Mrs. Louise W. Williams, national president, in her message through the February American Legion Auxiliary Bulletin, reminded us that "the month of February has special significance this year to all Americans, and especially to the women of the American Legion Auxiliary. Two hundred years ago George Washington was born. This month the nation will celebrate the bicentennial of his birth, a celebration designed to bring to the nation a fresh realization of the patriotic spirit and achievements of the Father of the Country. Embodying all the highest attributes of a true patriot, both in war and in peace, George Washington is the perfect model for the auxiliary in its work to shape better American citizens. America today has great need to remember the life of George Washington. Conditions which face the country call for patriotic service in the spirit of the great general and statesman who won the country's freedom and who started it safely on its way to nationhood. There is a need to recapture the spirit of this man who was willing to sacrifice everything of his own in order that his fellow countrymen might have expanded opportunities for life, liberty and happiness."

Unit Activities.

Eatonton unit and post featured an appropriate program on the bicentennial of George Washington on February 22, and Mesdames M. A. Young, A. L. Clements, R. W. Reeves and A. B. Perryman were hostesses. The auxiliary sponsored a benefit bridge recently, realizing a good sum for a swimming pool which is to be built by summer. The unit also entertained with a George Washington tea on Friday, and among the most attractive numbers on the prgram were the selections by the Rhythm bands of the second and fourth grades of the school. The auxiliary has been helping to pay for the music in the first four grades of the school, and this aid has made the children's bands possible. They have also provided food and clothing for an ex-soldier's family, and are now trying to place this ex-soldier in a government hospital. The next undertaking will be the co-operation with the post in launching and conducting the drive for the unemployed. Mrs. Myrtle Armstrong Young is president of this active unit.

Toccoa unit is active redecorating the Legion Hut, and have placed Penny-a-Meal boxes in all filling stations, and packeded 61 Valentine boxes of home-made candy for the Savannah hospital. Mrs. Paul Ridgeway, chairman of Child Welfare, is co-operating with the P.-T. A. in placing 18 lunches in the public schools daily, for needy children. The rehabilitation chairman Mrs. Clarence Shaw, and her committee, keep in touch with all ex-service families, giving any needed help. This auxiliary sponsored a Georgia products dinner at Eastonolle High school prepared by the home economics department. Commander T. Gordon Walters, of the post, presided. Mr. Paul Chapman, of Atlanta, was the principal speaker, and Mrs. J. E. D. Isbell, president of the unit, and Mrs. Paul Ridgeway made short talks.

President of Davis-Daniel unit, of Dawson, Mrs. J. B. Petty, is urging every member of her unit to add one new member by the March meeting. This would, of course, double the membership. If every unit in Georgia could work that plan successfully, membership troubles would be ended. Success to Dawson! This unit has recently contributed $5.72 to child welfare work, $5 to community service and $5 to the Dawson Communitty Chest. They made plans for the celebration of Washington's birthday in each of the county schools. The February meeting was held in the home of Mrs. A. E. Gibson, with Mrs. George Jennings and Miss Mary Littleton as joint hostesses. Mrs. Arthur Rowland and Mrs. Clyde Newman rendered musical numbers.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Toomey, Rev. and Mrs. Harry were distinguished guests at the brilliant dinner of Georgia products sponsored by the unit and post of Manchester at the Whitehouse hotel. Commander Gene Herring, of the Manchester post, No. 88, master of ceremonies, introduced Dr. J. M. Toomey, historian of the Georgia legion. Rev. Harry and Rev. Middlebrooks discussed the products, possibilities and history of Georgia. Mrs. A. J. Stratton, unit president, introduced Mrs. Toomey, president of the state department, who made an inspiring address on auxiliary work, speaking especially of co-operation between posts and units, presenting also the urgent needs of adequate national defense. Mrs. Irby Cook, unit historian, paid tribute to the outstanding work of Mrs. Toomey when she served as department historian for seven years. Doris Tew, a junior member, gave a very appropriate reading on the Georgia farmer who does not "live at home." "Georgia Land" was sung by the assembly, and music was furnished by an orchestra composed of Misses Dorothy Calloway, Izola Bryant, G. A. Bryant and Harold Guy.

Morris Little unit, of Milledgeville, had a full program for the winter, under the capable leadership of the president, Mrs. H. S. Wooten. Regular meetings and programs have been systematically worked out and listed for the entire year in a yearbook with programs suggested by national headquarters. Chairmen of the various committees have arranged the programs, and each one has been well planned and most interesting, with music and gifted speakers from the legion, Colonel Erwin Sibley making a most inspiring and scholarly address on "The Constitution of the United States," and Colonel J. F. Muldrow, adjutant of the post, speaking on the legislative program. Mrs. A. D. Holt Jr., of Macon, department membership chairman, was entertained at the December meeting. The auxiliary entertained the legion on February 16 with a buffet supper at the legion hall. A brief program on George Washington and Americanism was arranged by Mrs. T. A. Reese and Miss Bertie Stembridge, department chairman of Americanism. Rev. A. G. Harris, the chaplain, was toastmaster; Major J. F. Maldrow spoke on "Washington, the Warrior;" Mrs. C. B. McCullar, on "Washington, the Lover," and Major T. H. Rentz, on "Washington, the Citizen." Griffin Callahan, a legionnaire from Pocomoke, Md., and Dr. Sydney McGee made brief impromptu speeches. A beautiful silver goblet was presented by the legion and auxiliary to Mrs. T. A. Reese in appreciation of her service to both organizations. Later, a dance was enjoyed with music furnished by a local orchestra. This active unit credits some of its success to its slogan for the year, "Every member an active member." A recent special edition of the Union Recorder of Toccoa carried a complete history of the unit and pictures of its officers. Mrs. Claudius B. McCullar and Mrs. Jere N. Moore are publicity chairmen.

State Library Extension Chairman Contributes Current News to Page

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, state chairman of library extension, contributes the current news of libraries in Georgia that are sponsored by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, showing the results of her splendid co-operation.

Pike County Federation, Mrs. W. B. Suddeth, president, will stress the George Washington bicentennial during 1932 and the Georgia bicentennial during 1933. Each club will be asked to feature programs and make gifts of books in commemoration of these outstanding celebrations.

Millen Woman's Club reported for January 1,126 books issued for circulation. Mrs. Hendricks Brinson is the efficient librarian and has the assistance of a high school student for two hours per day.

Elberton Woman's Club, through its library chairman, Mrs. Dozier Thornton, reports 429 books issued from Harris-Allen library.

Elberton Sorosis Club has recently purchased 23 new books for Harris-Allen library. Mrs. J. Y. Swift, one of its members, is chairman for Seaboard Air Line railroad free traveling library.

Lithonia considers the library an active factor in the life of the town and community and has added new books to the library shelves.

West Point celebrated on February 18, Founder's Day, and the anniversary of the tenth year of the Hawks' library. However, the history of the library movement in West Point dates back 60 years to the organization of the first reading club by Dr. Scott Todd, which was the nucleus of the present splendidly equipped institution.

Danielsville Woman's Club will sponsor a book shower for the school library during February and recently invited the state chairman of library extension to speak to them.

Reynolds is completing payment on a house remodeled into a club home and library, equipped with shelving for books, which they hope soon to purchase. At present they will operate with a borrowed circulating library.

Comer Woman's Club has sent bundles of magazines and good literature to each of her four neighboring rural schools. Comer Reading Circle, a unit of the Woman's Club, has reviewed 8 of the 12 George Washington Study Series, 30 books of fiction, 13 travel books, 5 biographies, and one outstanding poem at each meeting. A practical questionnaire keeps its members alert and wide-awake.

Midville has voted to install a circulating library.

Winder Woman's Club has recently moved into a new club home in which is a room beautifully equipped for a library. The shelves now hold 1,000 volumes and there are about 50 borrowers. Until the expense of the furnishings is all met there will be a fee of $1 for all library members, but the goal is to make this a free library.

The personnel of the present committee of library extension, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is: Mrs. J. D. Gholston, Comer, chairman; first district, Mrs. Cleveland Thompson, Millen; second, Mrs. Pat McElvy, Pelham; third, Miss Ida Domingos, Cuthbert; fourth, Mrs. Clifford Smith, LaGrange; fifth, Mrs. Nelson Severing, Lithonia; sixth, Mrs. J. O. Maddox, Luella; seventh, Mrs. Lemon Awtry, Acworth; eighth, Mrs. R. C. Griffeth, Danielsville; ninth, Miss Lola Key, Norcross; tenth, Mrs. Andrew Wren, Wrens; eleventh, Mrs. B. O. Quillian, Douglas; twelfth, Mrs. W. C. Blackstone, Fort Valley.

During 1931 the books donated to headquarters library, general federation, Georgia bookshelf, Washington, D. C., were: "Our Todays and Yesterdays," author, Mrs. G. V. Cate, Brunswick, donated by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Blackshear; "Select Short Poems," by John Tevis Hearn, gift of Mrs. H. M. Bird, of Bowdon. In January, 1932, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, director for Georgia, presented to the executive board of the general federation, "Joel Chandler Harris—Editor and Essayist," by Mrs. Julia Collier Harris, Atlanta. This volume was given by Mrs. J. K. Ottley to Mrs. J. W. Gholston and by her presented to the general federation library.

Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, executive secretary of the Georgia library commission, strikes a new note in calling upon the clubs to meet the exigencies of the times by rallying to the support of their public libraries. She writes:

The year 1931 has been a banner year for all Georgia libraries for book circulation and the amount of service rendered to the public. People have flocked to the libraries, as never before, to take advantage of the free book service as a means of education, in studying to fit themselves for better positions, for information as to types of positions available, professions that are not overcrowded, as they plan to take up new lines of endeavor, and for recreation to pass away the hours of unemployment, or substitute reading of books for attending the movies or indulging in other forms or amusement, which cost money.

Few people stop to realize what a unique and important part the library has to play during periods of depression. As the one free institution, its appeal is universal and many who "had no time to read" during the good times of previous years, now find that the library is their haven of refuge, and almost the only place still open to them on the very same terms as before they were reduced in salary or out of a job altogether.

With enormous increase in use of libraries everywhere, it would seem reasonable that more funds would be available from public appropriations to increase staffs and book resources to meet the increased demands, but such has not been the case. On the other hand, many libraries are suffering deductions in appropriations, already meager, as cities as well as individuals try to meet the economic crisis, so we have the peculiar situation of librarians doing more work than ever before at a reduced salary, and people begging for more and more books, and book funds drastically cut, so that less books can be bought than usual.

The time is ripe for clubs and civic organizations to rally to the support of the library, to offer help of all kinds, financial, personal and official. No better civic work can be undertaken at this time than to help the public library to better meet its calls for books and service. Help is needed in the smallest libraries of a personal nature, club committees appointed to assist the librarian in mending and other routine duties; in the larger places let the clubs show their spirit of helpfulness by giving some special entertainment, the proceeds of which will go to the library. The opportunity is at hand for clubs and libraries to co-operate as never before, and the appeal is made to the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to take the lead in this work and help the libraries to render their best service during 1932.

Mrs. Sheehan's Greetings.

As this is the close of a presidential administration, a complete accounting of all the fine things clubwomen are doing for library extension is asked by the general federation chairman, Mrs. Frank J. Sheehan, of Indiana, who sends greetings to Georgia as follows:

Mr Dear Georgia Clubwomen:

Greetings to the fine clubwomen of Georgia! Special greetings to all those interested in the development and promotion of libraries and library service. During the past two years, we, who frequent the libraries, could not have failed to notice the tremendous increase in the number of patrons. Every library in the country finds its readers increasing by hundreds, sometimes even by thousands. There are those seeking help to keep up their morale that they may emerge from these very troublous times with a better and a finer spirit; there are those seeking information to fit them better to carry on their vocations; there are those making wise use of leisure time.

In every one of these libraries this increased demand on the resources of the library is being furnished for the same or less financial resources than in former years. They are able to do this because of the spirit of service which so permeates the library profession and inspires them to give enough of themselves to meet the needs. We clubwomen comprise a larger patron group than any other organization; we are an intelligent group and we can help these librarians if we will. Let us not ask of them any service in the library which we can perform for ourselves! Do you want a certain book? Do not stand at the desk and ask for it! Find the shelf number from the catalog and procure it from the shelf.

And there is another more important way that we women can help! If your city fathers are having hard work to make ends meet and must cut expenses somewhere, try and influence them not to make cuts in the maintenance of your educational institutions—in your schools and libraries which make up your educational defense. Councilmen will cut the salaries of teachers or librarians, with great regret, of course, but in the very same session will pass the customary budget for street sweeping and boulevard lighting. Is it more important that we maintain standards of civilization or that we impress visitors with the beauty of our streets? We women know the correct answer to this mathematical problem! Let us stand firm for the support of the material things in American civilization! Let us build for the future!"

Canton Club Gives Musical Recital On March 10

As a benefit, material and cultural, the Canton Woman's Club will sponsor a musical recital on March 10, featuring Miss Beulah Shirley, accomplished young pianist of Alpharetta. This announcement was made at the regular meeting of the club, February 12, the president, Mrs. J. B. Parham, in charge. In addition to the pleasure and entertainment Miss Shirley's concert will afford, music students in Canton will be greatly helped and inspired by hearing a performer of such ability.

The department of education, of which Mrs. O. G. Glover is chairman, has completed arrangements for a study class which will be conducted once a week. The Rev. J. O. Pettis, pastor of the Methodist church, will meet with the class on February 19 at the residence of Mrs. Max McCanless to help organize the class and suggest an outline of study. The class will be open to only a limited number and only those who are keenly interested in national and international affairs are advised to join.

The program for the meeting was opened with the pledge to the flag, after which the aim and purpose of the bicentennial celebration of the birth of George Washington was explained by Mrs. Charlie Cobb. "George Washington the Citizen" was interestingly discussed by Mrs. Odie Galt. Singing "America" and prayer by Mrs. Joe Johnston closed the meeting.

'Honor Mother' Plan Enrollment Closed

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, state chairman of the "honor mother" plan projected by the Federation of Women's Clubs, announces that the time set for enrolling names in this enterprise is closed. Splendid response to the plan has been made and names have been entered from all sections of the state. The enrollment indicates that Georgia is peculiarly blessed in having within her midst many elderly mothers close to the borderland of 100 years, whom God has spared to be a benediction to her people. The state's eldest mother will be enrolled with the general federation along with the eldest mothers of all other states of the Union, and from these the eldest of all will be selected to be given special honor by the general federation.

Georgia's honor mother must be American-born, with proven Revolutionary ancestry, and as far as can be known she must be the oldest mother within the state possessing these qualifications. The records now on file will be carefully examined and the name of the mother decided upon will be given to the public, through the press, on Mother's Day, May 8. This honor mother will on that date be beautifully remembered through the instrumentality of the State Federation of Clubs. Other organizations and individuals are invited to join the federation in paying tribute to motherhood by sending expressions of love and appreciation to this particular mother. Georgia will do well to exalt motherhood, for, of all things in this world, the God-given unselfish love in the mother heart is the most akin to Him and probably His greatest blessing to the world.

In connection with the "honor mother" idea, Mrs. Freeman is asking that clubs now, or on a date near May 8, plan an "honor mother" program and invite the elderly mothers of the community to be the club's guests of honor on that day. These mothers may be officially introduced with opportunity for response, and while the club membership stands the eldest among them may be seated in state beside the president, or in some other way acclaimed the outstanding guest of the occasion. The program may consist of old-fashioned songs and a recounting of old-fashioned manners, customs and methods; or, the program may be a tribute in song and verse to motherhood; or yet, again, it may be a typical "grandmother's program worked out in some unusual and interesting way. Each honor mother might be presented with some little gift as a souvenir of the occasion—a box of candy, an old-fashioned nosegay, or some little article that might be useful and individual. Some clubs in the state have already observed "honor mother day" in very interesting fashion, and all others are asked to follow this lead. Such a day might most appropriately be planned by junior clubs, as well as others. Program chairmen are always seeking for something new. This idea is both new and beautiful, and may be used distinctively or fitted into a program under the direction of the department of American homes.

Mrs. Sanford Makes Mid-Winter Report to Executive Board Members

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, made the accompanying report at the mid-winter meeting of the executive board held February 17 at the Henry Grady hotel in Atlanta.)

It is indeed a very great pleasure to meet with you again and to have so many of my official family present. The success that has been attained this year has been far beyond my expectation. The efficiency and loyalty of the officers, chairmen and members have spelled prosperity for the federation during the past most trying year. It seems to me that all realize:

"It matters not what goal you seek,
Its secret here reposes;
You've got to dig from week to week,
To get results or roses."

In the short time I feel that I should use at this meeting of the executive board, it is impossible for me to touch upon all the activities of the federation, important and interesting as they are, but only upon those that are pressing and in large measure need our attention at this time—prior to the annual convention in Columbus.

It has been a great privilege to attend the district meetings, to hear interesting and instructive reports and discussions, to sit at luncheons where intimate contacts are made possible, to meet old and new friends, and best of all to listen to the splendid reports of officers, chairmen and fine clubwomen who are carrying on the federation's work. To me the district meeting is indeed an important and significant event—it is a real power for good within the federation.

State Chairmen.

May I take just a minute to pay tribute to the splendid women on this board—department chairmen and division chairmen—and others. Each was appointed because it was believed that she had ability and opportunity and was willing to serve, that she was interested in her line of work to which she was assigned and would be able to interest others. The result is that we have, to carry forward our program, a group of women who are thoughtful of others and forgetful of self, women who believe in women and in organized effort. Each of these splendid women seems to have been called to duty with this thought: "I am of the opinion that my life belongs to the whole community and as long as I live it is my privilege to do for it whatever I can. The harder I work the more I live. I rejoice in life for its own sake. Life is no brief candle for me. It is a sort of splendid torch which I have to hold for a moment and I want to make it burn as brightly as possible before handing it on to the future generation." These are not idle words—but words that express my feeling towards the members of this board—the women who have helped me to carry on—women who have in large measure made the federation.

One of the important items to which I direct your attention today is club extension. Sometimes I am afraid that we neglect this feature of club work, thinking perhaps that the federation or the individual club will carry of its own momentum. Nothing will do this. Club extension should be the project of every individual club—adding to its own membership, or helping to organize clubs where there are none. The success of the club movement is measured by the number of women it includes as well as by the quality of its service. May we not, therefore, give additional consideration to club extension from these viewpoints.

Junior Membership.

Here is another important phase of club extension that needs further consideration — junior membership and young, active girls. I am afraid that we sometimes overlook a golden opportunity to encourage the bright, active young women in our communities to identify themselves with the Woman's Club. You note that I am using the expression, "junior membership," from two angles, and both are extremely important. The future of the work which we hold dear depends upon our daughters and our granddaughters and if it is not to be stored away in the places devoted to spinning wheels, rocking chairs—these young people must be shown that "mother's club" is a live organization and that it has given much to "mother" and "mother" has given much to the world. They must be convinced that it plays an increasingly important part in the destiny of nations and the making of history. The club of today has little in common with that of earlier years. The modern club woman thinks for herself. In making a place for herself in the life of today she has made a place for her club in the future. It will be no light task that she has passed on to the younger generation of club women, but such an opportunity for service as will challenge the best efforts of the women of the world.

Washington Bicentennial.

This month we have the honor of celebrating the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington. Your president hopes that every club is having at least one appropriate program and that each club will plant and dedicate at least a tree in memory of the father of our country. Where possible will you not please plant an evergreen and in such location that in the years to come it may be used as a community Christmas tree. Washington was a lover of all trees, but the elm was his favorite.

I would suggest that all club women read this issue of the National Geographic Magazine—note the map giving the journey of Washington. It would indeed be particularly appropriate to have an outstanding celebration in those places in Georgia through which he passed.

Every club should make use of the very fine material that has been prepared by the George Washington bicentennial commission, at Washington, D. C. Let me urge you to get this material for immediate and for future use.

May I call your attention briefly to certain significant dates: February 21, the spirit of Washington's mother; February 22, Washington's birthday; April 19—Battle of Lexington; April 30, inauguration of Washington; May 6, Arbor Day; May 30, National Memorial Day, fellow soldiers; June 14, Flag Day; July 4, the nation's birthday; September 5, Labor Day; October 12, Discovery Day; October 19, Yorktown Day; November 11, Armistice Day; November 24, Thanksgiving Day.

These are a few of the days that maye be used to have a celebration for Washington. However, select the date that will suit your club and your community best. The important idea is that—Do not fail to have a bicentennial program in honor of George Washington. The summer school of the University of Georgia will make a special feature of a pageant that may be used by public school teachers this fall. Perhaps it would be a good idea if the public schools and the women's clubs would unite in making one eventful occasion. Local conditions will govern the program to a large extent.

I feel quite certain that our efficient chairman of the program committee and her committee from Columbus will feature the bicentennial of George Washington at the annual convention. Of course the convention should set the example for all clubs in the state.

Redistricting of State.

Article xviii, Section 1, of the constitution and by-laws of the Georgia Federation, reads as follows: "The state shall be divided into districts to correspond with congressional districts." It will be well for us to remember that congressional districts are divided solely upon the basis of population for the purpose of giving the people equal representation in in our national government. It will be necessary for us to consider, if these divisions as now provided, will give us the best basis for administration of our federation program and activity of women's clubs, and whether a districting based primarily on area and, secondly, upon the number of clubs and the membership of each, would not be an advantage to us.

It is my duty as president to make these suggestions. However, after thinking the matter through, I am convinced that it will lead to less confusion, if we follow the new redistricting plan adopted at the last session of the legislature. The matter should have full discussion here so that it may be presented to the annual convention in Columbus for adoption. I am quite certain that we too frequently adopt measures without full debate and consideration.

Tallulah Falls School.

Problems and projects change with the changing times, but the clubs stand loyally behind Tallulah Falls Industrial school, which we think is the biggest and best work the federation has undertaken. It is gratifying to know that we are helping many boys and girls to receive a higher education than would be possible for them, but for the help from some other source. Extending a helping hand to a boy or girl means added strength and growth to both the one who gives and the one who receives. The passing years make more and more evident the investment in human life, and what is more far reaching and better than the conservation and advancement of young girlhood and young boyhood? All clubwomen should visit the "Light of the Mountains"—then no plea or eulogy would ever again be necessary.

It hardly seems necessary to say anything about our loan funds—our endowments—all know how badly funds are needed to complete these endowments, and what good this federation could accomplish, if funds were available for the young women who are striving so hard to complete their educations that they may return to their communities to lend a helping hand in making it better and nobler and safer. At the Ella F. White fund was first begun in Columbus, would it not be wise and beautiful if such an impulse could be given at our annual convention in Columbus that we could complete that fund? Let us at least give some consideration to it. This, of course, is a matter for the program committee to consider.

General Federation.

General Federation of Women's Clubs is a fine organization composed of many splendid women—women of power and prominence. We are proud of the personnel of the General Federation and the great work it is doing. Let us remember, however, that the General Federation is just as likely to make blunders as the Georgia Federation. Simply because a majority of those present indorse a measure, there is no obligation on the part of the Georgia Federation to stand by that indorsement until the splendid women who compose this organization have had time to discuss the measures and then give to them their disapproval or approval. Members of the Georgia Federation must, therefore, be very careful before asking clubwomen or clubs to indorse any measure not indorsed by the properly constituted authorities of the Georgia Federation, if the indorsement is made in the name of the Georgia Federation.

Nearly all of us indorse the great measures proposed by that body, but we may not indorse it as written. We have our representatives present at the general federation, and many of the measures adopted may be over the protest of our own representative. That is all right, provided the measures are presented to the Georgia Federation for discussion and approval. Just at this time we must be on the lookout for real issues instead of propaganda. A great and patriotic citizen has said:

"It has, to my thinking, become a sad hour when two classes of our citizenry have divided themselves one against the other. First is one who repels any expenditure in behalf of our national defense and its preparation merely because it takes some of our taxable possessions in order to pay for our defense. Others sincerely feel that the very possession upon our part of the capacity to defend our nation against an advance is an affront to other nations and invites them to assail us because we have prepared to meet such an assault. Between these two well meaning and, let us believe, well intending people, our nation has been brought to a condition where none can say what is our capacity for national defense at this time, and more regretfully we have divided that spirit of patriotism in our country where one side feels that it is to commit an offense against society and religion to demand preparation for national defense, while another assumes that they are regarded as outlaws against humanity if they merely protest against other nations having the right to direct the course of life and death of this—our republic—to direct her life in order to compass her national death.

"Let America look up and look out. The hour calls upon us to be on guard and for our citizens to be watchful. Let us all know that we are living in a new era and that the order of action fitted for yesterday, in the days of friendship and international good will was one thing, while the rules for the new order that has wedged itself between America and the world, leaving us in our defense standing alone, is wholly a different thing. We hope for the new day—that new era making for friendship from all Asia and Europe. We dream of the hour when in ourselves will be the love for all mankind, but until this heaven's grant is realized America has from her people but one order: It is vigilance by her people, guardianship of her nation, and a just preparation and continuous strength that shall preserve the United States as the true republic of honor and freedom under God—the pride of her children and the glory of the world.

"Unrest of all kind is abroad; there is great and general dissatisfaction with existing conditions; there is unsparing criticism; much of it unintelligent, but it leaves its mark. One thing we can do—is to gather to ourselves intelligent information, and having it, act accordingly. The increasing economic unrest of the past two years with the resulting period of worldwide depression has called for unusual service. The general federation president appointed a special committee known as the committee on economic adjustment to function in the present emergency. Your president was honored by being placed on this committee. I would not make light of the seriousness of the situation, but I crave for you courage, a sense of the fundamental values in life, faith in God's goodness, a love of simple things as a means of counteracting a pessimism unworthy of Georgia.

Civic Activities.

"Clubs have been strengthened by the promotion of projects for community betterment. The benefit is two-fold. Co-operation in carrying out the plans strengthens the club and tends to make it a more interested and wideawake organization, and the community profits by the civic activities of the club. Civic activities are good promoters of club spirit. Let us impress that fact upon all of our club members. I wish I could enumerate the part our clubs have played during this great period of economic depression. That I cannot do, but the reports are fine. There are so many fields of activity calling for clubwomen to have an active part. We need to study more closely law observance. 'If we could put into practice what is now known about safeguarding the health of children, preventing dependency and delinquency, and providing opportunities for wholesale group activities, we could in a single generation profoundly improve the whole character of our national life.'

Annual Convention.

"We are indeed fortunate that we are to meet in the lovely city of Columbus, where we have so many delightful clubwomen—women who are interested in so many useful fields of club activity. That we shall have a delightful time, there is no doubt. We can likewise look forward to a most charming, instructive and interesting program under the able direction of our chairman of program committee. Let us all make our preparation to attend this annual convention.

"The chief value of these great gatherings of the club clan lies in the enthusiasm and inspiration which comes from the personal contacts made there. The friendly intercourse with outstanding women from all over the state gives one a new respect for the federation. I think we all need refreshment of spirit during this economic depression. We shall get this broader viewpoint born from such a gathering as has been planned for Columbus. Let us not think of the convention as a luxury or an unnecessary expense, but rather as a means of gathering renewed strength for the work that lies ahead. I know that I gathered a great deal of inspiration from attending a meeting of the Georgia Bankers' Association in Atlanta this year and heard them ably discuss the "live-at-home plan," a slogan that our federation can use from time to time. Let me urge you again to make plans for Columbus.

"Since we last met one of the most faithful and efficient of all our division chairmen has been called home—Miss Alice Baxter, of Atlanta. She was a woman of rare gifts and ability, of which she gave generously and faithfully to the federation work and her friends and clubwomen will ever remember with tender affection her willing heart and skilful hands. Her good works shall ever follow her."

"God of the living, in whose eyes
Unveiled Thy whole creation lies,
All souls are Thine! We must not say
That those are dead who pass away,
For well we know where'r they be
Our loved are living unto Thee."

Talbotton Club Plans Benefits Next Summer

Talbotton Woman's Club will sponsor two peach ice cream festivals during the summer. In June, when the Georgia Belle peaches are ripe, a festival will be staged, the proceeds accruing therefrom to be applied to the Georgia Child's Welfare Society. Mrs. Brooks Culpepper is child welfare chairman, and will arrange the festival.

In July, when the Elberta peaches are ripe, Mrs. E. B. Douglass, chairman of the department of education, will sponsor a festival for the benefit of Tallulah Falls Industrial school, which is owned and operated by Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Virginia Persons is president of the Talbotton club, and contributed this information to the official page in The Constitution.

Tifton Clubwomen Stage Pageant.

The citizenship committee of the Twentieth Century Club of Tifton staged a colorful patriotic pageant at the February meeting. Mrs. C. S. Pittman, chairman of this committee, had charge of the program, the pageant being directed by Misses Sara Dunbar and Odessa Tanner and Mrs. Nicholas Peterson in observance of the Washington bicentennial. "World Citizenship" was the subject of a splendid talk by Mrs. M. D. Mobley, followed by the pageant which included 26 children, all in the costumes of the countries they represented and singing anthems of the various nations. As a background, the United States flag was placed in the center with other national colors in fitting arrangement. Taking part were: Statue of Liberty, Madeline Anthony; Columbia, Mary Thaxton Bowen; England, Mary George Martin and Ruth Howard; France, Irene Kent and Frances Watson; Scotland, Sarah Florence Rigdon and Laura Baker; Ireland, Earl Sullivan and Robert Carson; Denmark, Miriam Massey and Jean Herring; Spain, Mary Mobley and Betty Nelson; Holland, Roslyn Holmes and Estelle Norman; Germany, Mary Julia Nesmith and Katherine King; Japan, Lillian Pittman and Marie Mitchell; Hawaii, Martha Ray Golden and Maxine London; Boy Scouts, Marion Culpepper and Rex Nelson.

The songs were: "Your Flag and My Flag," Mary Thaxton Bowen and Marie Mitchel; England, "God Save the King;" France, "The Marseilles;" Scotland, "The Campbells Are Coming;" Ireland, "Wearing o' the Green;" Spain, "La Paloma;" Holland, folk song; Denmark, folk song; Germany, "The Watch on the Rhine;" Japan, folk song; Hawaii, "Aloa;" Boy Scouts, "Greetings to Children From Over the Seas."

LaGrange Clubwomen Secure Appropriation for Memorial Library

Members of the LaGrange Woman's Club, founders and a large percent supporters of the Memorial library in LaGrange, appeared before the new city council after the installation in January and secured an increased appropriation for the library, which was a distinct appreciation of the value of this phase of club work. On February 28, the woman's club observed the George Washington bicentennial with an interesting program and Washington party. The Rev. Willis E. Howard, pastor of the First Baptist church, gave the address of the afternoon, and Mrs. Eugene Baker sang Nora's song from the opera, "The Poor Soldier," one of Washington's favorites.

Club women are engaged in planting roses and trees on the paved Atlanta highway. This beautification project has been carried on for the past several years, additional miles being planted each year. A back yard improvement contest is being staged by the club women of the garden section. Prizes will be given to the owner of the back yard showing the greatest improvement at the smallest cost over a period of the spring months. The LaGrange Club offered a prize three years ago to the rural woman making the greatest improvement in home beautification. These awards were made recently by the home demonstration agent of the county and district and the prizes will be presented at the spring rose show.

Fine arts section of the club will present musical scores and a pantomime of the opera, "The Barber of Seville," at the March meeting. This group is studying opera for the year and a number of interesting division meetings have been held. Work for the Troup county children at Alto and a number of clinics in co-operation with the Troup county health department have been held by the child welfare division. The club president, Mrs. Henry Reeves, assisted the American Legion and other civic organizations with the staging of a large community Washington bicentennial celebration, at which State Commander Quimby Melton and other distinguished guests were present.

Jefferson Clubwomen Hears Mrs. McCurry.

The theme of the program for the meeting of Jefferson Woman's Club on Monday afternoon centered around the life and history of George Washington. The speaker was Mrs. A. D. McCurry, of Winder, president of the Ninth District Federation of Women's Clubs, who gave an interesting historical sketch of the life of Washington. Other features of the program were a reading, "How Grandma Danced Long Ago," by little Miss Sally Bryan, and a piano solo, "George Wahington," by Miss Doris Hancock. Miss Bryan wore a costume fashioned according to the styles of the Washington period. The program was presented by the chairman of citizenship, Mrs. E. H. Crooks.

Chairman of education announced a new shipment of books from the state library commission; also, that the books of the library are widely read, being in constant demand by school pupils in making book reports. Public welfare chairman announced plans being made for a health program, in which all the school children of the county will be given a medical examination. Monday's meeting was held at the home of Mrs. C. B. Lord, with Mrs. Lord, Mrs. J. D. Escoe, Mrs. E. H. Crooks and Mrs. P. Bertran, hostesses.

The March meeting of the club will be sponsored by the Tallulah Falls School chairman, and the speaker will be Miss Anne Davis, principal of the school.

Tenth District Yearbook Received.

The 1931-1932 yearbook of the tenth district of Georgia Federation Women's Clubs has been received at headquarters in the Henry Grady hotel in Atlanta, and is greatly appreciated. The mechanical style of the book is most pleasing with the colors green and white, convenient size and clear type. It is affectionately dedicated "to the presidents who have served us so efficiently in the past, and to Mrs. S. G. Lang, our present beloved president." The sentiment in the dedication is well expressed: "It is quite possible that in a short while the Tenth District Federation Women's Clubs as we have known it in the past will be no more. It has been a "goodly company" and it is with regret that we face the parting of the ways.

Lavonia Club.

At the February meeting of Lavonia Woman's Club held at the residence of Mrs. E. R. McMurry, with Mrs. E. H. Holland and Mrs. B. F. Cheek, co-hostesses, plans for the memorial tree planting were presented. Mrs. L. D. Singleton, chairman of applied education, reported that plans completed for the exercises at the city park, and clubwomen planted an oak tree as its part in the George Washington bi-centennial celebration. Trees will be planted in honor of five presidents of the club, including the present one, Mrs. J. H. Burton, and four past presidents. Each president will select her own tree, and an appropriate program will be given.

Mrs. W. B. Richardson, chairman of the program committee introduced Mrs. Guy Norris, of Hartwell, who was gust speaker. The program was on "Georgia" and Mrs. Norris gave an instructive talk on "Georgia," beginning with its settlement and giving events up to the present time. Mrs. Norris is well known in church and club circles and is regent of the John Benson Chapter D. A. R. of Hartwell, and is a speaker of note. The club song "Georgia Land," was sung by the club and Mrs. M. L. Allison read "The Song of the Chattahoochee," by Sidney Lanier.

Bowden Club.

Mrs. M. L. Johnson, president of Bowden Woman's Club, presided at the February meeting, and Mrs. H. M. Bird gave the invocation. Miss Lola Beck reported from the garden division, and Mrs. R. K. Pitts submitted the report from the nominating committee for officers of that division with Miss Beck being elected chairman; Mrs. Inez Kaylor, secretary; Mrs. D. P. Holmes, treasurer; Mrs. H. M. Bird, publicity chairman; Mesdames A. B. Sasser, P. Digby and Miss Dola Johnson forming the program committee.

Mrs. H. M. Bird reported the planting of a tree as a memorial to Mrs. W. L. Brooks, and members will plant a cherry tree and dedicate same to George Washington in co-operation with the bicentennial celebration. Mrs. Wayne Copeland reported payment made on club insurance and requested members to pay dues in order that the club may meet its obligations. Mrs. J. W. Alexander introduced Miss Winnie Fites, of the college faculty, who gave a reading, and Mrs. F. A. Martin won the pencil in the musical contest. Mrs. W. L. Morris presided at the piano. A picture of George Washington adorned the auditorium wall as well as other paintings by Mrs. J. W. Adams. Hostesses were Mesdames J. W. Adams, C. M. Garrett and D. P. Holmes, assisted by Misses Mildred Garrett and Dorothy Holmes.

Athens Clubwomen Present Patriotic Program at Meeting

Athens Woman's Club was entertained in the home of Mrs. A. G. Dudley on Milledge avenue Wednesday and in celebration of the George Washington bicentennial, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, program chairman, featured music and dances of colonial days. Mrs. Ritchie discussed the music of George Washington's time, her subject being "George Washington, Patron of the Fine Arts." The speaker mentioned in her introductory remarks that all phases of the character of Washington had been related except as a patron of fine arts. Picturing him as having only a rudimentary education, but as a lover of books and music, Mrs. Ritchie continued by saying that Washington had expressed his belief that America must develop music of her own, and that Washington's army was the first singing army—that it literally sang its way to victory. The songs of America of that day sounded a note of freedom and good things were written celebrating peace.

Instrumental and vocal music of George Washington's time by Miss Mabel Wedge and some of the pupils of the music department of the Georgia State Teachers' College was rendered: Vocal solo, "My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free," by Francis Hopkinson, Miss Alice Faulkner; duet, "The Wayworn Traveler," by De Louie Arnold, Misses Mildred Ivey and Cleo Hardy; piano solo, "Two Minuets," by Pierre Duport, Miss Sarah Joiner, and vocal solo, "Enraptured, I Gaze," with Miss Mabel Wedge playing her own accompaniment. Dancing of minuets and colonial steps by pupils of Miss Lucy Lampkin's class, dressed in costume and making an enchanting picture, including the following: Misses LaGrange Trussell, Martha Steadman, Emily and Louise Chandler, Elizabeth Lamkin, Dorothy Link, Jane Weatherly and Helen Colley.

Pouring tea were Misses Dorothy Dudley and E'Lecler Ussery. Assisting Mrs. Dudley as hostesses were Mrs. J. W. Bailey, Mrs. Alice Bates, Mrs. D. L. Ernest and Miss Susie Gerdine. The business session was presided over by the first vice president, Mrs. R. F. Turner.

Habersham County Legion Gives Flag To School.

On February 22, George Washington's birthday, the Habersham post of the American Legion gave a handsome United States flag to the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, the presentation being made by Roy T. Pitts, vice commander. The Habersham post is doing splendid work in caring for the interests of the ex-soldiers of this county, and in their endeavor to inculcate in the hearts of the young a deep and abiding spirit of patriotism.

This has been "Washington week" at the school. Programs illustrating some important event in the life of Washington have been given; ten trees, representing different grades, have been planted, and essays on "Washington as a Farmer" have been written. Interest in Washington as a farmer is due largely to a recent visit from Harvie Jordan, who spoke to the boys and aroused their enthusiasm on the man and the subject. Mr. Jordan's article in the Southern Cultivator on "Washington as a Farmer, Patriot and Man" was read with keen enjoyment by the boys.

Maysville Club.

Mrs. Thomas K. Miller, president, presided over the February meeting of the Maysville Woman's Club, held at the home of Mrs. D. P. Donahoo, and hostesses were Mesdames D. P. Donahoo, Will Cheek, M. L. Payne and Joe Ariail. At the March meeting the heads of the several departments will be asked for yearly reports. The collect was read by Mrs. Fred Voyles, and a prayer offered by Mrs. T. K. Miller. The committee in charge of plans for purchasing a clubhouse includes Mrs. M. P. Deadwyler, chairman, and Mesdames M. E. Adams, T. W. Telford, L. M. Boone and O. M. Ariail. Plans were made for a play to be given by members, the committee in charge including Mrs Billie Pittman, chairman, and Mrs. Willis Lockhart and Mrs. Lester Haulbrook. Miss Ruth Henderson was recognized as a visitor and Mrs. Thomas Cheatham welcomed as a new member.

Miss Eloise Stephens was in charge of the program given in commemoration of the bicentennial celebration of the birth of George Washington, and the participants wore costumes fashioned after the style of that period. Miss Stephens gave an interesting talk. "The Life of Washington" was given by Miss Jurelle Gilmer; "Washington's Rules of Conduct," by Miss Lou Meaders; "Washington, the Nation Builder," a reading by Miss Verna Brown; "History of Patriotic Songs," by Miss Mary Turner; reading, "Little Georgie Washington," by Miss A. Mary Hartley, and the social side of Washington's life was given by Miss Hartley and Miss Stephens in the form of a minuet. In the contest pertaining to war, Miss Verna Brown was the winner of the prize, silhouettes of George and Martha Washington.

In commemoration of the bicentennial jubilee of the anniversary of Washington on February 22 members of the Maysville Woman's Club, with a portion of the faculty of the school, presented an interesting program in which a tree was dedicated to Washington. The program, in charge of Mrs. John Miller, featured "America," sung by audience; invocation by Rev. Warwick; address by Professor J. B. Cooper; "Why We Plant This Tree," by Mrs. T. K. Miller; "Washington," by Miss Mary Hartley, and "Trees," by Miss Jurelle Gilmer. The audience retired to the southeast corner of the school ground, where a crabapple tree was dedicated.

Manchester Club Observes Program.

Mrs. J. L. Edwards, president of Manchester Woman's Club, opened the George Washington bicentennial program given Monday at the school auditorium, and H. R. McLarty, superintendent of Manchester schools, was master of ceremonies. Mrs. Glenn A. Paxon, teacher of music in the schools, presided at the piano and rendered the musical accompaniment. The invocation was given by Rev. W. H. Gardner, pastor of St. James Methodist church and the flags were carried by Girl and Boy Scout leaders. "Star-Spangled Banner" was sung in chorus led by Miss Carrie Johnson, and Professor A. B. Hudgins led the recitation of the American's creed. "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" was sung by Mesdames W. G. Harry, Perry Cook, C. L. Middlebrooks and Miss Carrie Johnson, and the address, "High Ideals of George Washington," was made by Rev. W. G. Harry, pastor of First Presbyterian church.

In commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington, Manchester Woman's Club presented a framed portrait of

On the Air Today

Two bishops will speak during the periods of the Church of the Air, to be broadcast by a nation-wide hookup of the Columbia Broadcasting System, including WGST, Atlanta, today.

The Rt. Rev. William Scarlett, Protestant Episcopal bishop coadjutor of Missouri, will preach during the period to be broadcast from 9 to 9:30 o'clock this morning and the afternoon period, between 1:30 and 2 o'clock, will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. John F. Noll, Roman Catholic bishop, of Fort Wayne.

Bishop Scarlett's sermon subject will be "The Principle of Authority." Bishop Noll's address during the Catholic period will be on the topic, "The Evil of Divorce." A sextet and trio from the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, in Fort Wayne, will supply the musical program during the period, under the direction of Professor Roch E. Magnan, organist and choir-master at the cathedral.

Chick Wilson and His Rubber Band, a local act which has become a "habit" with a large audience, has doubled the number in his ensemble and every day except Sunday the group goes into action at 12 o'clock from station WGST, starting with a breezy tempo and slowing toward the end. During the last two weeks Chick and "Gramma," pianist and "atmosphere," have taken on "The Strummer," with his flaming guitar, and "The Fiddler," who calls it the "hot fiddle."

The program perhaps has as many or more in the audience as any other from an Atlanta station. The tonal and rhythmic qualities are hardly excelled, and the listener interest has grown by leaps and bounds.

In addition to the musical ability of the group, Chick's daily poem reading has attracted many—particularly women—to his act. Recent readings from a volume of verse by an Atlanta author caused the sales of the book to increase in good measure. He receives hundreds of requests for copies of the verse he reads.

See how you like these WGST features today: New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra at 2 o'clock . . . Nino Martini, the young tenor who left the movies to devote all his time to singing, at 5:30 . . . Ernest Hutcheson, internationally famous concert pianist, at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

A joint Anglo-American broadcast by women delegates to the world disarmament conference at Geneva will be presented by Frederic William Wile during the international broadcast period from 1:30 to 1:45 o'clock this morning, through the WABC-Columbia network and WGST.

Wile will introduce Dr. Mary Emma Woolley, the only woman named by President Hoover to represent the United States at the conference, and Mrs. Corbett Ashby, who occupies a similar position in the British delegation.

Complete Lack of 'Performing' Spells Success for Radio Star

BY ROY ROBERT.

The overworked statement that "distance lends enchantment," is literally true in the case of "Margie and Three Men From the South," popular WGST radio team which receives more fan mail from Canada and northern and midwest states than from near-by points.

Every Sunday night from 11 to 11:30 o'clock, Margie, who in private life is Margie Bullard, leads her Three Men through a program of popular songs. Informality is the idea, and evidently that total lack of "performing" accounts for their amazing popularity with distant audiences.

It is hardly possible to describe Margie's voice—for no classification has been found for it by radio program directors. Radio reporters have referred to her voice as "husky," and there the matter rests. So deep is her tones that her pianist, Herbert Allen, is required to transpose every melody to a lower key than that in which it is written.

At 11 o'clock on Sunday night Al Herrick, personal announcer for the team, leads them into a broadcasting studio at WGST, and they "go on" just an informally as they might sing and play in the presence of intimate friends.

Others in the team are Kirk De Vore, the crooning feature, and Bubber Bullard, who plays "sweet and hot" tunes on a saxophone.

Margie is a typically southern girl, born and reared in Atlanta, and her natural but cultured drawl intrigues those in distant sections. She is 20 years old and has been singing since she stopped wailing as a baby.

Loath to talk about herself, Margie said she is convinced there is nothing unusual about her—and perhaps that explains why she is unusual—that and a photograph.

JOE BROWN PRODUCES EXCELLENT MINSTREL

Rated as one of the best of the seven minstrels held at Joe Brown, the minstrel held Friday night in the Joe Brown auditorium filled all the expectations of the student body and the attendance filled the hopes of the faculty group, composed of Miss McAdams, Mr. Richardson, Mrs. Pittman, Mr. Hankinson and Coach Graham, presenting the play. Glenn White and Steve Newitt were the black-face comedians and furnished laughter enough to go around the entire audience. The different departments showed up exceptionally well after their period of rehearsing.

Mrs. Hunt, head of the health department of Joe Brown, has begun the last drive for perfect teeth. One day last week was set aside for tag day and all pupils having perfect teeth were allowed to wear a tag stating the fact that they were perfect teeth and urging others to become the same.

Boys taking shops will be urged on to greater efforts by the offering of a medal to be presented at each graduation to the boy who, in the minds of the five shop teachers, Mr. Hendricks, Mr. Golden, Mr. Weir, Mr. Rudolph and Mr. Bailey, has done the best work in shops since he has been taking that course. Hr. Heidecker declared that those boys taking shops as an elective would have a better chance for the medal than those boys merely taking the required amount of shops. The medal is to be of gold with fitting insignia upon its face.

Cora Kay Hutchins, of High 9-1, writing on the sesqui-centennial celebration of Yorktown, won the D. A. R. medal offered for the best composition on that subject. All members participating were compelled to use fictitious names. Cora Kay's was "Tillie, the Toiler."

MARY LIN CLASS HAS WASHINGTON FARM MINIATURE

Mary Lin school enjoyed celebrating George Washington's bi-centennial.

The little people of our kindergarten have had a wonderful time celebrating Washington's birthday. They had a parade and then a George Washington birthday cake. They are still making flags.

Low 1 is making George Washington's farm. We have made Mount Vernon and many animals.

High and Low 1 had a fine parade on Washington's birthday. They had much fun.

Low 3 is studying about the early herdsmen. They are enjoying making things like the ones these people used.

High 3 celebrated George Washington's 200th birthday with a parade. We made our own hats, belts and badges, and carried flags. Miss Brooks took our picture.

Low 4 is proud of Jack Berry, who wrote an original George Washington play.

Low 5 was very sorry to have Roy Hutcherson leave our school.

In High 5-2 Mary Greening, Elizabeth Oliver, Elise Yarbrough, Marion Park, Glendola Gilbert, Joe Thurmond, Hazel Cross, Buddy Longino and Martha Allison received health buttons last Friday for having normal weight.

Low 6 is enjoying the study of medieval life. They have made an interesting booklet on the life of George Washington.

High 6 made a very enjoyable trip to the capitol on Georgia Day. We saw many products, minerals, birds and animals of Georgia in the museum.

COUCH TABLEAUX REPRESENT LIFE OF WASHINGTON

The kindergarten went on an excursion last week. Each child made a really creditable valentine for father and mother, after which their teacher took the class to the branch postoffice a few blocks away, where each bought a stamp and mailed the letters, a great adventure. And what do you suppose they found on the postage stamp? The likeness of an old friend whom they have been studying about ever since they started to school. They shouted with glee, "This is the picture of George Washington!" Now, does everybody know that the two-cent stamp carries the picture of our hero?

We had a great time Tuesday. The whole school marched into the auditorium carrying flags and singing "America." It marked the beginning of our celebration of the bicentennial of Washington. The exercises consisted of a series of tableaux featuring the stirring incidents in the colorful life of our great leader. His boyhood, youth and manhood passed before us like moving pictures. There were songs, dances and costumes of the period, and across the years came glimpses of social and political life in colonial America two centuries ago.

Meet Rosalie Freeman, pretty five-year-old member of the kindergarten, who can croon "Potatoes Are Cheaper," etc., like a radio artist.

Low 4 has made a cardboard fleet of Venetian boats that hark back to trips down the Grand canal under the starlit skies past the doges' palace, when Venice was in her "Golden Age."

We are still planting trees, Mrs. R. B. Oxford brought a crepe myrtle this week which she assures us will show rose-red blossoms when the spring come round.

We have led all the schools in attendance average for the last three weeks. There is no doubt about good attendance being the test of a school. People, big and little, go where they want to go, without regard to a slight illness or unsettled weather.

J. JONES SCHOOL SECOND CHILDREN CONSTRUCT CAVE

Jerome Jones was so glad to have Miss Ethel Massengale for a visitor on Thursday. She visited each of our lower grades and enjoyed seeing our work very much. We are always glad to have such lovely visitors.

The kindergarten is making George Washington booklets.

High 1 boys and girls are bringing pictures to school about George Washington. They had a George Washington program Monday.

The second grade pupils made a cave large enough to get in. They are very proud of their grand work.

The third grade enjoyed seeing some of their members in the paper.

The fourth grade had a program to celebrate George Washington's birthday.

The fifth grade has been very busy working on posters. We have several pretty ones. A number of us are giving a George Washington program for the grade.

The sixth grade is working hard to earn athletic buttons. We are all so proud of Roy Thomason, who made 100 in arithmetic.

CENTRAL NIGHT SETS BANQUET ON MARCH 5

Repetition of a gay and colorful event which had its conception in 1919 will be the thirteenth annual banquet of Central Night school to be held at 8 o'clock Saturday night, March 5, at the Tavern Tea room.

A large representation of the three units of Central night will be in attendance. These groups—faculty, students and alumni—will each have speakers, and the banqueteers will also listen to leaders of the extra-curricula activities.

For some time the banquet was held in honor of the alumni, and although their welcome will not be dimmed, the recently organized senior class, with Jerome Slear as president, will be the honorees. Sponsors have prepared an enticing menu, and in addition to an hour's entertainment by some of the brighter lights of Central Night, the last two hours of the four-hour affair will be given over to dancing.

Tickets may be secured until March 3 at the principal's office for $1.

Through the courtesy of C. T. Grizard, of the Grizard Advertising Company, students of L. P. Wilson's advertising class examined at first hand Tuesday, February 23, 50 of the most effective direct-by-mail advertising campaign launched by leading manufacturers.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

In so far as box office is concerned, it seems unnecessary to mention the engagement for the last half of this week of the Abbey Theater Irish Players at the Erlanger theater. The worldwide reputation of this national group is such that it is a distinct piece of luck for Atlanta to be given the opportunity of seeing them in five of the greater Irish plays of recent years. Many people will undoubtedly be present at every performance and many others will come to Atlanta for one or more performances from many distant towns and cities. And, of course, all of Atlanta that enjoys genius in the theater will be there.

Dancers should throng the Fox theater this week. For, in "Dance Team," the feature offering on the screen, a new dance is demonstrated by Sally Eilers and James Dunn. It is appropriately called the "Sally-Jim," and has been hailed by dance authorities all over the country as certain to prove a furore. Locally, Senia Solomonoff, Atlanta's famous dancing teacher, says it is a lulu. He is seen dancing it with one of his star pupils, Miss Marjorie Bennett, in a picture shown elsewhere in this issue of The Constitution.

Several interesting announcements of the theater are pending for Atlantans. Personally, I'm simply aching to tell you all about 'em. But those interested insist some of the deals involved are not yet closed—that premature mention might prove costly to them—and please don't say anything yet a while. But all of the items are good news—when we can talk about 'em.

Want to draw your special attention to the new George Arliss picture, "The Man Who Played God," which is coming to Keith's Georgia next Saturday. This is such a perfect thing, its story is so great and it carries such a lesson to any of us who are tempted to feel discouraged with life, for any reason whatsoever, that it seems as though the proper authorities ought to do something to insure that every man, woman and child in Atlanta sees it. Perhaps something can be done. Any suggestions?

MONDAY—"Silent Witness" at the Grand. This was an exceptionally good courtroom drama. Notable for fine acting by practically everyone in the cast and the extremely funny performances by two Cockney comedians. Played the Grand latter half of week, so this notice won't be much use to Manager Lew White.

TUESDAY—At the Capitol. Picture was "Suicide Fleet." The telling of a story that has long been begging to be made into a good screen feature. About the battle between a war-time "Mystery Ship" and a group of German U-boats. With Uncle Sam's fleet of destroyers coming to the rescue at the crucial moment a la the cavalry of good old days. A better than average picture that would have been still better if some of the unnecessary scenes were eliminated and the showing time reduced by 10 or 15 minutes.

WEDNESDAY—Will Rogers' latest, "Business and Pleasure." At the Fox. Typical Rogers comedy. Story by Booth Tarkington. Scenes on shipboard and in Damascus and the Arabian desert. Jealous wife, vampish lady, young couple who quarrel and make up, Arab shieks, threatened death and tricky escape. With Rogers and his wise cracks turning tragedy into comedy at will. You'll like it if you like Rogers.

THURSDAY—"The Man Who Played God." At the Georgia. George Arliss in a performance that should deserve, whether it gets it or not, the medal for the best of the year. A story that grips your better nature and should save lots of discouraged souls from suicide. A picture that everyone should see for two reasons. First, because it teaches a grand lesson. And, second, because it is magnificent entertainment.

* * * *

LATER THURSDAY—"Dance Team." On film row. The best of the Sally Eilers and James Dunn starring vehicles yet. A story of average folks, winning far more than average success and nearly losing it because of average vanities, jealousies and stupidities. Worthy of its four-star ranking, easily.

Screenings From Local Theaters This Week

Highly Praised Production on Screen — Fanchon and Marco's "Hot Java" Provides Unusual Stage Show.

Classed by many critics as the "wonder team of the year," a classification they rightfully deserve following their remarkably human characterizations in "Bad Girl" and "Over the Hill," James Dunn and Sally Eilers make their third screen appearance together in the leading roles of "Dance Team," the Fox Film version of Sarah Addington's popular novel, which is the feature attraction at the Fox theater this week.

Few film players in recent years have leaped to fame so meteorically as have these two youngsters. To find a suitable parallel one must go back to the silent days when Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell rose overnight from utter obscurity to the heights of fame in their first teaming picture, "Seventh Heaven." And strange as it may seem, it was the same director who directed Janet and Charlie in their first picture, Frank Borzage, who directed the photoplay that lifted Sally and Jimmy to stardom.

In their new picture, "Dance Team," Dunn and Miss Eilers have the same type roles as they had in their previous success, the human flesh and blood boy and girl whom you would meet in the ordinary walks of life. And like ever so many other youngsters they are fired with the ambitions of youth, which carry them through a series of disappointments and discouragements to success as a dancing team. But with success comes other problems, problems of the heart, of riches and of vanity, all of which add to the humanness and drama of the film.

Minna Gombell, who played with Dunn and Miss Eilers in "Bad Girl," heads the large supporting cast of "Dance Team," which also includes Edward Crandall, Harry Beresford, Nora Lane, Ralph Morgan and Claire Maynard. The screen play was written by Edwin Burke, whose adaptation and dialog aided so greatly in making "Bad Girl" the sensational hit it was. The new film was directed by Sidney Lanfield.

On the stage the Fox offering for the week is a snappy idea called "Hot Java." Twelve Javanese dancing beauties provide the inspiration for the name while an unusually fascinating group of principals are found in the cast. There are, for instance, the Galigary Brothers, famous international comedians, Armanda Chirot, a vocalist known as the Fanchon and Marco nightingale, Noree, one of the very few real Arab dancing girls to be seen in America, Vincent Yerro, Javanese impersonator and the aforementioned 12 hot Javanese dancing girls.

Enrico Leide and the Fox Concert orchestra have another special overture number entitled "Evolution of the Dance," while Al Evans, as usual, will make the audience sing to the accompaniment of the big organ. Carefully selected newsreel, comedy and other shorts complete the bill.

Gaynor - Farrell Pair in 'Delicious' At Loew's Grand

What is said to be a new technique in the presentation of songs in motion pictures occurs in "Delicious," the new Fox musical romance, starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, starting Monday at Loew's Grand theater.

Miss Gaynor, seen as a little Scotch immigrant waif, first hears the words of "Delishious," a song written about her by a Russian suitor, aboard the boat on which she is coming to America, when she and the poet steal into the first cabin in order to use the piano.

As the musician, portrayed by Raul Roulien, sends the lilting tune into the air from the piano, it is immediately picked up and spread over the huge liner in a number of surprising ways.

Thus it is that the tune follows Janet and comes back to her on several occasions during her eventful voyage.

In addition to "Delishious," the picture features five other songs specially composed by George Gershwin, one of which is his newest contribution to serious music, the "New York Rhapsody," said to be a companion piece to his immortal "Rhapsody in Blue."

David Butler, who directed Miss Gaynor and Farrell in "Sunny Side Up," their first great musical hit, directed "Delicious," which features in the cast El Brendel, Raul Roulien, Lawrence O'Sullivan, Manya Roberti, Virginia Cherrill, Olive Tell and scores of others.

"Platinum Blonde" At Palace Theater

Monday and Tuesday the Palace theater features Loretta Young, Jean Harlow and Robert Williams in "The Platinum Blonde," showing how a freedom-loving young reporter falls under the spell of a spoiled heiress who sees in him soft material to bend to her will.

Wednesday, "The Tip-Off" stars Eddie Quillan as a radio repairman who falls in love with a girl who inadvertently has fallen into the clutches of a powerful hoodlum of the east side.

Seth Parker, the radio idol of the world, appears on the screen Thursday and Friday in "Way Back Home." Parker brings to the screen for the first time the simple philosophies, the nobility and uncompromising valor of country people in times of stress. Frank Albertson and Bette Davis are seen in the supporting cast.

Saturday's film, "The Spider," presents Edmund Lowe as a magician of sinister power. The story is a thrilling mystery, telling of a murder in a showhouse during a magic act. Lois Moran plays opposite Lowe.

Seth Parker Film At DeKalb Theater

Seth Parker and his Jonesport neighbors, nationally prominent radio stars, open the week Monday and Tuesday at the DeKalb theater in a delightful, humorous, rural drama entitled "Way Back Home." The whole family will be thrilled by this presentation, which is a classic.

Wednesday, Richard Dix of "Cimarron" fame, appears in "Secret Service," a thrilling, fast-moving story of Civil War days.

"The Common Law," starring Constance Bennett, Joel McCrea, Lew Cody and Robert Williams is the feature offering Thursday and Friday. Fine acting with a great story makes this a very entertaining picture.

Saturday, Ken Maynard is featured in "The Arizona Terror," a fast-moving action drama of the old cattle country.

Tenth Street Show Offers Varied Bill

The story of a mother who falls to the lowest depths is told in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," coming to the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday. Helen Hayes has the title role. Others in the cast are Lewis Stone, Cliff Edwards, Neil Hamilton and Marie Prevost.

Wednesday, Johnnie Mack Brown and Dorothy Burgess are seen in "Lasca of the Rio Grande," the story of a dance-hall girl and her lover, a Texas ranger, who arrests her for murder. The supporting cast includes Leo Carillo and Slim Summerville.

Wheeler and Woolsey, supported by Dorothy Lee and Zelma O'Neal, are seen Thursday and Friday in "Peach o' Reno." They poke fun at Reno and the wholesale divorce industry.

"A Dangerous Affair" is coming Saturday. Jack Holt and Ralph Graves have the leading roles, one as a detective and the other as a reporter. The girl is Sally Blane. "Big Irons," sixth in the series of 12 Bobby Jones golf pictures, is also on Saturday's bill.

BOYS' AND TECH HIGH TO SEE CAPITOL FILM

Boys' High and Tech High military units, companies A of each school, through Captain Austin, commandant of the high school military activities of the schools, have accepted invitations to the Capitol theater to see "Suicide Fleet," the picture current at that theater.

Company A, Tech High school, in charge of Sergeant Johnson, will march to the school in a body Monday afternoon and will occupy the loges, together with the principals of the school.

Company A, Boys' High school, in charge of Sergeant Short, will be guests of the theater Tuesday afternoon, and will also march down in a body.

"Suicide Fleet" was made with the assistance of the United States navy, and its plot revolves around the famous "mystery ship," used by the enemy in the World War.

'Great Lover' Offered At Alamo Theater

Comedy and romance, cleverly mixed together, are the principal ingredients of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Great Lover," at the Alamo theater Monday.

"The Great Lover" offers Adolphe Menjou, the suave, in the title role which Leo Ditrichstein made so famous on the stage.

Menjou provides the romance, with his sparkling and frequently torrid love affairs with six beautiful girls; while Ernest Torrence, Cliff Edwards and Roscoe Ates carry the main comedy burden. Torrence is Menjou's valet, Edwards a grand opera press agent, and Ates a stuttering reporter.

Other players of prominence are Irene Dunne of "Cimarron" as an aspirant for grand opera honors, who nearly burns her moral fingers in her ambition; Neil Hamilton of "Strangers May Kiss" as the young lover; Hale Hamilton and Baclanova.

Tap Dancers and a Silhouette

Samples of Atlanta's stage attractions this week. Left shows the Three Samuels Brothers, precision tap dancers, who are featured at the Fox theater in the Fanchon and Marco idea, "Hot Java." Right is a silhouette of Sammy Cohen, stage and screen comedian, best remembered for his work in "What Price Glory," who headlines the RKO program of vaudeville at Keith's Georgia.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

'Shanghai Express' at Georgia, Dietrich in Timely Thriller

Clive Brook Plays Opposite Seductive Star; Sammy Cohen, Famed Comedian, Tops Bill.

Quite as timely as a newsreel, and a thousand times more thrilling, "Shanghai Express," the new Paramount picture starring Marlene Dietrich, is now playing at Keith's Georgia.

Among the daring passengers who start from Peiping with Miss Dietrich are Clive Brook, Anna May Wong, Warner Oland, Eugene Pallette, Louise Closser Hale and Miss Hale's pet Pekinese. All except one arrive safely in Shanghai after that exciting trip. This is no place to tell how that other person met another fate. Suffice it to say that for everyone the journey proves eventful and the picture full of thrills.

Wheels moving to the rat-a-tat of gunfire, the express is on its way again with fewer passengers and life aboard even more uncertain. Now you wonder if the missionary was right when he warned the doctor of the bewitching loveliness of Shanghai lily. Or isn't the doctor quite able to take care of himself, and shouldn't the lily be cautioned not to break her heart again?

You are advised to go see "Shanghai Express" and there discover for yourself these answers. For this picture, with its dazzling assemblage of stars and its smooth, skillful direction by Josef Von Sternberg, is a real Paramount triumph. It has everything—adventure, romance, excitement, charm, humor, pictorial beauty—that the ideal picture should have.

Headlining the week's vaudeville bill is Sammy Cohen, whose screen career includes a number of pictures. He is probably best remembered in "What Price Glory." Cohen is a character comedian—grotesque in method and appearance, and therefore known as "The American Beaut." At the end of his act he introduces a comely associate as Mrs. Cohen. This young woman, a splendid soprano, renders two solos.

The next feature is Beth and Betty Dodge. The curtain rises, disclosing two page boys in cream-colored uniforms. There is a fanfare of trumpets. The drapes upstage part and there are Beth and Betty Dodge, dressed in the smartest of yesterday's styles—hoop skirts, lace mittens, bonnets and parasols. Their first number is a song, "The New-Fashioned Old-Fashioned Girl." The dresses of bygone days are removed. They stand in a lacey something that may be lingerie or the latest thing in pajamas. In this fetching attire, they sing one of the numbers they had in the Folies Bergere, Paris. This, of course, is sung in French.

The Forum Boys are a quartet. Their voices are known throughout the land because of their radio and recording activities. Klyting's Animal Stars are a group of about 25 dogs, cats, rabbits and pigeons. They are remarkably intelligent and have been wonderfully trained.

The Georgia Concert orchestra, under the direction of Adolph Kornspan, presents "My Maryland."

Poncey Celebrates Birthday This Week

This year the Ponce de Leon has five candles on its birthday cake. Five years ago the doors of this popular theater were opened to the public. In celebrating this event the theater has arranged one of the very best programs possible.

"City Lights" with Charlie Chaplin is the feature tomorrow and Tuesday. You can't know what fun is until you've howled and rocked at this major mirthquake with the king of merriment. Also Chapter 2 of "Battling With Buffalo Bill."

Lawrence Tibbett comes to the Ponce de Leon on Wednesday in "The Southerner," which is said to offer perfect entertainment. The picture has a swell cast, a charming romance, grand songs, and loads of laughs. Easter Ralston plays opposite Mr. Tibbett and Cliff Edwards is responsible for the laughs.

Ruth Chatterton and Paul Lukas have the principal roles in "Unfaithful" Thursday and Friday. The story is one of a good woman whose wounded pride, caused by her wayward husband, whipped her to reckless actions that made her the most slandered woman in Europe.

Saturday Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and El Brendel head the cast in "Women of All Nations." Romeo, Antony and Don Juan could have learned plenty from those three cockeyed marines, "Flagg," Quirt" and the dumb Swede. Greta Nissen also furnished lots of laughs. Chapter 1 of the "Galloping Ghost" with Harold "Red" Grange completes the program.

'Frankenstein' on Bill At West End Theater

Monday and Tuesday brings to the West End theater "Frankenstein," with Colin Clive as M. Frankenstein, the man who created the monster; Boris Karloff, as the monster who kills every one in his path; Mae Clarke, as the fiancee of Frankenstein, and John Boles as his friend.

Wednesday presents the "Hot Heiress," with Ben Lyon and Ona Munson, Walter Pidgeon, Tom Dugan, Thelma Todd, and others. The story is of a hot heiress who gave Park Avenue the cold shoulder for a low-brow lover.

Thursday and Friday has Will Rogers in "Ambassador Bill," assisted by Greta Nissen, Marguerite Churchill, and numerous others. Our "unofficial ambassador" becomes our official ambassador of laughter!

Saturday offers "Lasca of the Rio Grande," starring Leo Carrillo, Johnnie Mack Brown and Dorothy Burgess. Her eyes were like fire and her lips like wine—and no man could resist her!

"The Rainbow Trail" At Empire Theater

George O'Brien plays another of his hard-riding, hard-fighting roles as the lone cowboy hero of the Fox film picturization of Zane Grey's well-known novel, "The Rainbow Trail," which is to be shown at the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, Monday and Tuesday. Others in the cast include Minna Gombell, Roscoe Ates, J. M. Kerrigan and James Kirkwood. An added feature will be the showing of Harold "Red" Grange in the serial, "The Galloping Ghost."

"Bad Girl" will be shown Wednesday and Thursday, with James Dunn and Sally Eilers co-featured in the principal roles.

Manager Alpha Fowler announces that on Friday his theater will show "The Finger Points," starring Richard Barthelmess. This talkie is based on a notorious case of gang rule. Dick Barthelmess plays the role of a young southerner who comes to New York with high ideals, gets a job as a police reporter, and then the fun starts.

A western film, "Shotgun Pass," will be shown Saturday.

'Working Girls,' Bill at Rialto, Has Many Stars

Many personalities and a score of Hollywood's most beautiful actresses appear in the cast of Paramount's picture drama, "Working Girls," the screen feature at the Rialto theater this week.

Paul Lucas plays the part of a romantic scientist who becomes interested in a pair of small-town sisters seeking careers in New York. Judith Wood, 1931 Wampas star, has her biggest role since Paramount signed her to a contract, as one of the sisters. Charles "Buddy" Rogers portrays a Broadway play boy. Dorothy Hall, the original Schatze of "The Greeks Had a Work for It" on the stage, plays the part of the other sister, and Stuart Erwin has the featured comedy characterization.

Frances Dee, another Wampas selection who played Sondra Finchley in "An American Tragedy," has the part of "Buddy" Rogers' wealthy fiancee. Joined with the featured actresses are Frances Moffett, Alberta Vaughn, Greta Gould and others, who portray the working girls.

"Working Girls," Dorothy Arzner's latest production, is from the screen play by Zoe Akins, Paramount writer and author of the Broadway stage hit, "The Greeks Had a Word for It."

Cameo Offers 'The Last Ride' For First Run

"The Last Ride," which opens at the Cameo Monday is one picture which ought to offer satisfactory entertainment to every member of the family.

There is a virility and punch to both the story and its portrayal, that comes as a distinct relief from sex plays and saccharine love tales which stress the fact that "rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake." By that we don't mean to say that we are definitely against good clean love stories but we still must admit a definite delight in pictures which boast rugged, dramatic (we might almost say "melodramatic") flavor, the sort which brings one to the edge of his seat during tenser moments.

An excellent cast has been provided and the direction has been exceptionally well handled by Duke Worne, creater of many successful pictures. The story is by a thur Hoerle, who has many previous screen successes to his credit and he has evolved a most convincing and realistic tale.

Starting Wednesday, "Reckless Living" with a very good cast will be shown for two days. Cyril Gardner has taken apart the race track and its slang-dishing outside-the-law "bookies" and "phone rooms" to give you a glimpse into the inside of the checked-suited gamblers and their methods. With the assistance of Ricardo Cortez, Mae Clarke and Norman Foster, he permits you to find all of the ingredients of good entertainment in these cleverly exposed secrets.

RAYMUND DANIEL DELIVERS ADDRESS BEFORE DE MOLAYS

Raymund Daniel, well-known Masonic leader, was the principal speaker Friday night at the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Atlanta chapter of the Order of the DeMolay, held at the old Masonic temple at Peachtree and Cain streets. Mr. Daniel presented the chapter with a portrait of George Washington, which was a gift of Congressman Robert Ramspeck.

The anniversary celebration opened Friday afternoon with the awarding of degrees to candidates, and closed with a ball at the Moonlight Garden hall. Wallace Jackson and his Ansley hotel orchestra furnished music. Howard Geldert, member of the grand council, was paid high tribute by the members for his aid in the founding of the chapter. Al Dahlberg acted as chairman of the committee on arrangements. Members of the DeMolay from other cities were welcomed by Judge E. D. Thomas, who is chairman of the advisory committee.

Abbey Theater Irish Players at Erlanger This Week Presenting Five Great Plays

Maureen Delaney and Barry Fitzgerald, of the Abbey Theater Irish Players, in a scene from "The Whiteheaded Boy," to be given Thursday night at the Erlanger for the first of an engagement of four performances.

One of the greatest organizations the theater has ever known, the Abbey Theater Irish Players, is coming to the Erlanger theater this week. This, the only playing company from the National theater of the Irish Free State, at Dublin, will give four performances on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. They are now making the first American tour for the past seventeen years, being here by special permission of the Irish Free State government, granted after the seasonal closing of the Abbey theater.

Five plays will be given at the four performances, the Saturday matinee being a double bill, with one of the most famous of short plays as the curtain raiser. They are brought here under the sponsorship of three of Atlanta's largest educational institutions and the Alkahest bureau.

Announcement of the extraordinary engagement, made last Sunday, has already resulted in a flood of mail orders for reservations. Blocks of seats have been requested by groups from as far away as Valdosta, while individually requests have come in, not only from all sections of Georgia, but from cities in Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and South Carolina.

The box office seat sale opens Monday morning at the Erlanger theater, while seats may also be secured from any of the sponsoring institutions. Tickets for the colored section of the gallery also are on sale in accessible places for colored students and others.

The company is under the personal direction of Lennox Robinson, one of the greatest of the younger Irish dramatists. Mr. Robinson has been the guest of Atlanta for several days this week, where he has spoken half a dozen times. The company, while adhering strictly to its rule of never featuring any individual players, yet boasts names in its roster which would call for electric lights in front of any theater in New York.

In addition to the box office and institution ticket sales in Atlanta, mail orders, accompanied by check, will be filled if sent to Russell Bridges, Mortgage Guarantee building.

The schedule of plays for the engagement at the Erlanger follows:

Thursday night, "The Whiteheaded Boy," by Lennox Robinson. Sponsored by Emory University Lecture Association.

Friday night, "The Far-Off Hills," by Lennox Robinson. Sponsored by the Agnes Scott Lecture Association.

Saturday matinee, "The Rising of the Moon," by Lady Gregory and "The Playboy of the Western World," by J. M. Synge. Sponsored by Georgia Tech.

Saturday night, "Juno and the Paycock," by Sean O'Casey. Sponsored by Alkahest Bureau.

CHARLESTON ROUTE IS LISTED BY CLUB

Due to the many inquiries as to the route to Charleston, S. C., where the world-famous Magnolia Gardens are now in bloom, the Dixie Associated motorists have checked the best route from Atlanta, it was announced Saturday.

The best route, according to the association, is from Atlanta to Augusta by route No. 10; from Augusta by United States route No. 78 to Aiken, S. C., thence to Bamberg, thence to Ehrhardt, to Walterboro and then to Charleston. The route is paved all the way from Augusta, it was said, and save for two well-graded detours on the route between Atlanta and Augusta, there are no "side trips."

Laurence, vice president and executive head of the University of Cincinnati and grand consul of the fraternity, will be features of the four-province conference of the Sigma Chi fraternity March 11 and 12 at the Biltmore hotel, H. Stanley Hastings, general convention chairman, said Saturday in announcing the full program. Representatives from 19 leading universities in Dixie and 14 alumni chapters in the larger cities from Richmond to New Orleans will be in Atlanta for the occasion. All three of the addresses will be on fraternity topics.

Visiting speakers at the two-day session will include Thompson McClellan, attorney and state legislator from West Point, Miss.; J. Spencer Bell, Charlotte attorney; Dr. Joseph C. Cleveland, editor of the Magazine of Sigma Chi.

In addition to business sessions, five social occasions have been planned for the convention under the chairmanship of James K. Rankin, president of the Atlanta alumni chapter; W. Ray Mitchell and Thomas B. Branch Jr.

Showing the 'Sally-Jim' Dance

A new dance, which terpsichorean experts predict will be one of the most popular ballroom dances of recent years, is being introduced to America through a feature motion picture. The picture is "Dance Team," which is showing in Atlanta this week at the Fox theater. The dance is called the "Sally-Jim" after Sally Eilers and James Dunn, who do the dance in the film. Above is shown Senia Solomonoff, famous dancing teacher, who studio is on Fourteenth street, Atlanta, demonstrating the dance with the aid of one of his star pupils, Miss Marjorie Bennett. Photo by Bill Mason.

'Suicide Fleet,' Navy War Film, Current Offering at the Cameo

Three Coney Island fakirs, impersonated by William Boyd, James Gleason and Robert Armstrong, and a girl who sells candy kisses at the same playground, impersonated by Ginger Rogers, are the principal characters in "Suicide Fleet," a feature picture made by RKO with the assistance of the navy, and which began a week's engagement at the Capitol theater last Friday.

The story of "Suicide Fleet" is a throw back to the World War and tells of the famous "mystery ship" used by the enemy with disastrous effect. The three carefree playground fakirs enlist in the navy and are placed in charge of the big three-masted schooner which, in reality, is a deadly man-of-war. When they are entrapped and beleaguered by three enemy submarines, the majestic march of the navy to the rescue is bound to thrill all Americans who take a pride in the naval arm of the service. The picture was made with the assistance of the United States navy, and shows the great fleet at its greatest advantage. Aside from the romantic and patriotic appeal of the story as told in "Suicide Fleet," a broad vein of humor runs through its entire length, and a pretty love story involving William Boyd and Ginger Rogers is told to the tune of blasting guns and the roar of the sea.

Also on the program is the Universal newsreel, with Graham McNamee broadcasting the news events, a Lloyd Hamilton comedy and the fourth in the series of basketball featurettes, in which Coach "Doc" Meanwell and the University of Wisconsin five are used in slow and fast action.

WESLEY MEMORIAL PRESENTS SPECIAL PROGRAM TONIGHT

A special musical service will be presented by Wesley Memorial Methodist church, Rev. Felton Williams, minister, Sunday evening, with Carl Millard, organist and choir director, in charge. The chorus will be assisted by several visiting artists and by the Leffingwell orchestra. The visiting soloists are Miss Julia Chapman, soprano; Mrs. F. Harper, contralto, and Mrs. Milton Pierson, tenor, and Robert Guy, baritone.

Outstanding numbers on the program are the anthem, "Holy Art Thou," Handel-Kingsmill, sung by Miss Julia Chapman, Milton Pierson and choir; "Turn Ye Even to Me," Mrs. Harper and choir, and "Tempelweihe," Keler Bela, by the Leffingwell orchestra, under the direction of W. W. Leffingwell, among many others.

LORING WILL RENDER INDIAN SONGS TODAY

Harold Loring, of Boston, will present a program of American Indian songs and stories at the Congregational Christian church at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. He is a concert artist who has studied and taught in nationally known music schools. President Roosevelt requested him to make a thorough study of the music of the American Indian and gave him a federal appointment that afforded him many opportunities to pursue that study. He has lived for years on Indian reservations and has recorded the native melodies and legends of the American Indian. He speaks the Sioux language and is an adept in the sign language.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Builders of America. By Dr. Clifford Smyth. This contribution to American history is a series of biographical sketches of men who have made America. The work has been carefully prepared by the writer covering a period of four years, the thought having been inspired by the work the government was planning for a nation-wide celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the birthday of George Washington, our first president.

Dr. Smyth, who has always been an enthusiastic lover of American history, conceived the idea that a suitable tribute to the father of our country would tell through a series of biographies, how the republic which Washington it might be said was the inspiration, the founder and the guide, was built. And when the task was finished the result was far greater than he anticipated. The idea was original with the author and time and patience was spent in its preparation during the past four years and now, in the year 1932, he presents to American readers, whether in the school room or the political field, 24 volumes covering the biographies of men who made America, which are as follows:

1. Christopher Columbus: Who sailed from Asia and discovered a new world.
2. Hernando Cortez: And "The greatest adventure in history."
3. Francisco Pizarro: And "The conquest of Peru."
4. Captain John Smith: And England's first successful colony in America.
5. Henry Hudson: And the Dutch founding of New York.
6. Roger Williams: And the fight for religious freedom.
7. William Penn: Quaker courtier and founder of colonies.
8. La Salle: And the pioneers of New France.
9. Lewis and Clark: Pioneers in America's westward expansion movement.
10. George Washington: The story of the first American.
11. John Paul Jones: The man who carried the American Flag to Europe.
12. Benjamin Franklin: "The father of all the Yankees."
13. John Adams: The man who was called "Father of American Independence."
14. Alexander Hamilton: The Little Lion of the treasury.
15. Thomas Jefferson: The father of American democracy.
16. John Marshall: Father of the supreme court.
17. Andrew Jackson: The man who preserved Union and Democracy.
18. Daniel Webster: Spokesman for the Union.
19. Abraham Lincoln: The great Emancipator, who preserved the Union.
20. Robert E. Lee: Who brought the south back to the Union.
21. Ulysses S. Grant: Whose motto was "Let us have peace."
22. Grover Cleveland: Who put independent thinking into party politics.

DR. CLIFFORD SMYTH.
Author American History.

The author of this great collaboration is Clifford Smyth, a former well-known newspaperman of New York city, and in connection with his other work he was at one time editor of the New York Times Book Review, afterwards becoming editor of the Literary Digest International Book Review—even before this, in the nineties, Mr. Smyth formed a connection with The Atlanta Constitution, and, as he writes, it was through The Constitution that a syndicate of southern newspapers was formed and he was the writer selected to go to Colombia at the time of the trouble over the Panama Canal. He further says that the experiences acquired at this time have been very helpful in the writing of some of the last volumes in the "Builders of America."

Mr. Smyth married the daughter of Julian Hawthorne and they have three children, Julian, Hawthorne and Sylvia. Mr. and Mrs. Smyth have a home in New York, also in Mount Vernon, N. Y., and he has been connected with Funk & Wagnalls since 1926, publishers of the 24 volumes which comprise this interesting and valuable series of books on American history.

DR. RAGSDALE'S BAPTIST HISTORY NOW ON SALE

Announcement is made of the publication of the first volume of "The Story of Baptists," by Dr. B. D. Ragsdale, of Macon. This first volume is devoted to the organization and development of Mercer University through the Penfield period, or down to 1870, at which time the institution was removed to Macon.

It is proposed that this history of Georgia Baptists will ultimately cover the entire record of the denomination in Georgia, dating back to the organization of the First Baptist church in the state at Kiokee, in what is now Columbia county, in the year 1772.

The Georgia Baptist convention has authorized the preparation of publication of this history as rapidly as the manuscript is ready. Dr. Ragsdale, who for the past three decades has been a prominent figure in Baptist affairs in Georgia, was named as historian. He has been secretary of the convention thirty-odd years and has served as a professor in Mercer University and as a pastor throughout his life.

The volume now in the mails has been subscribed for by interested friends, and additional copies may be had by addressing Dr. B. D. Ragsdale at Macon. The book was published by the Foote and Davies Company of Atlanta.

The feature of this first volume, devoted to Mercer University, is found in the towering personalities who created and directed the activities of Georgia Baptists during the nineteenth century. Such names as Jesse Mercer, founder of Mercer University; Billington M. Sanders, the first president of Mercer; Adiel Sherwood, John L. Dagg, N. M. Crawford, Henry H. Tucker, Thomas Stocks, John E. Dawson, C. D. Mallary, Jesse Campbell, Mark A. Cooper and many others appear constantly throughout this volume and their contributions to the progress of church and state are noteworthy in each instance.

Dr. Ragsdale has done a careful piece of work in this first volume. His sources of information have been newspapers, scattering books of the period, records of the Georgia legislature, minutes of the Georgia Baptist convention, and the Southern Baptist convention, minutes of district associations, unpublished manuscripts, minutes of the board of trustees of Mercer University, files of the Christian Index, and such other published and unpublished facts as have been made available through the cordial co-operation of many friends.

In view of the fact that Mercer University is nearing the celebration of it's centennial in 1933, the second volume of the series will also be devoted to the Baptist institution for men in Macon. It is thought that this second volume will be ready by the end of 1932.

The introduction to the first volume is written by Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, Atlanta, who has collaborated with Dr. Ragsdale in securing information for this series of historical volumes on Georgia Baptist life.

HISTORIC CHARLESTON.

Charleston—Historic and Romantic. By Harriette Kershaw Leiding, author of "Historic Houses of South Carolina." 80 illustrations. In the Foreword the author writes most interestingly of the time when Carolina and Charleston were spread on the map. As you recall, it was Charles Town until 1783, and since that time there have been many whys about the change to Charleston, why so many nationalities, why the struggle between the Roundhead versus the Cavalier, and the worst why of all is "why do Charlestonians 'eat rice and worship their ancestors' if they are not of Chinese extraction?" There is another thing the writer wishes impressed upon the reader, and that is, "if one does not speak 'Charlestonese,' he is apt to feel like a little child outside of a shop window."

Between Ashley and Cooper rivers —lies Charleston. These two rivers are spanned by two great bridges, and on the Ashley river road can be seen many old plantations, among them being Drayton hall, Magnolia Gardens, Middleton Gardens, Runymead, and others. Someone has described them as "lovely, indolent, individual, slightly scornful." This being attributed to the fact that Charleston does not wish to forget, but lives and breathes "in spirit to the principle which established a landed nobility." And for this same reason this old city with its colonial houses and proud old names cannot forget.

Mrs. Leiding has written a most attractive story of Charleston and aside from describing the old colonial and Revolutionary days, she tells of its new developments, the acceptance of which does not mean the willingness of even the younger generation for modern idealism goes hand in hand with modern progress. The illustrations are both interesting and attractive, some of them dating back to colonial times. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Bayberry Lane. By Sara Ware Bassett. The setting for this charming story by a popular writer, is a tiny fishing town on the Massachusetts coast (perhaps you have been there). It was inherited by three sisters, Lilla, Lucy and Louella, from a rich uncle whose estate was called Bayberry Lane. These lovely sisters not only found a home for themselves established a memorial to their dearly loved uncle who made it possible for them to organize what might be called a community center. It is a story that is so well written, with so much to remember and nothing to forget. It is filled with love, charm, humor and a romance that makes the world happier.

The reader will soon understand that the Cape Cod country is the setting and that perhaps not far away can be found Bayberry Lane. (Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia.)

City Girl. By Eunice Chapin, author of "Pick Up." The author made numerous friends who will be delighted to read another romance from her pen. Think of a 20-year-old heroine leaving Four Forks, Montana, for the great metropolis and in a short while becoming the central figure of a "silly set" in Manhattan. There is not a dull moment in the story and it is written in a clever, yet frank, style that will hold the reader's interest.

Miss Chapin is, or was, a magazine editor in New York, when she wrote "Pick Up," the story of Cherry Towne's romantic adventures in Manhattan. There was so much charm and color in her story, so much sparkle and wit, that immediately she was besieged by readers to "write another." (Brewer, Warren & Putnam, New York.)

The Unconscious Sinner. By Victorial Cross. The author has joined England and America in a story whose setting will be located here and there, but the heroine, a young English girl, is so thoroughly alive that she is at home anywhere and the whole story is woven around her. (Macaulay's Book.)

TOLSTOY'S NOVEL.

War and Peace. One of the most valuable stories that has recently been published is a novel by Count Leo Tolstoy. The translation from the Russian is by Constance Garnett.

Tolstoy spent five years, if not longer, in writing this story of "War and Peace." It was in 1864 when he wrote the following paragraph in the first chapter of Part 1: "Well, Prince, Genoa and Lucca are now no more than private estates in the Bonaparte family." These words were spoken in 1805 by a distinguished lady of the Court to Prince—a man high in rank and office.

The author, a great Russian figure who fills a unique place in the world of letters, has spread before his readers a panorama covering many pages with an array of kings, princes, nobles, etc., who lived, loved and moved during the times of the great Napoleonic wars.

The reader's introduction is, of course, to the leading men and women of that time—those belonging to the highest society, linked together by a code of laws and customs which, of course, is affected by the moral atmosphere of the Russian court. (The Modern Library, New York city.)

IN MAYA LAND.

Edge of the World. By George Brydges Rodney. The Mayan civilization, a subject which has been so mysterious in the past. Men and women who wasted precious time at the dance or the card tables, or the social club for amusements, are now studying along lines that really bring interest. The Mayas are the subject of this interesting story in which many questions are asked and are being studied today. For instance, how did Christianity first come into the new world? There have been various stories along this line in which it was said that even the Mayas practiced baptism with water. The story of their customs will perhaps surprise some of the readers. Origin, writing about 225 A. D. says that Paul of Tarsus preached the gospel to the "Islands of the West," but no one has ever really decided where those islands are. The writer has written this as fiction or a historical story. (Duffied & Green, New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

When Southern Labor Stirs. By Tom Tippett, a writer whose home is Katonah, in the state of New York, who says in the preface that his motive in writing this book is to assist those who are interested in the industrial question to understand conditions among southern textile mill workers. (Jonathan Cape and Harrison Smith, publishers, New York.)

The Right To Work. Or How To Stabilize Industry and Employment. A. M. Lorentz. The closing years of the nineteenth century and the opening of the twentieth century found the business world facing a little discontent, then the Great War attracted the attention of the world and later among other things caused the discontent to remain and increase in its energy. The cause has been studied for some time, and this little book which has been written with a note of encouragement among other things offers a slogan, "Depend more on yourself and less on your government." He asks the question, "Are we subjects or sovereigns?" (The Gorham Press, Boston.)

A Lawyer Tells the Truth. By Morris Gisnet. Introduction by Norman Thomas.

". . . . life is short and truth works far and lives long, let us speak the truth." Schopenhauer.

The author is a member of the New York bar, has been active politically for the last 25 years. He is a student of social, economic and political conditions. He is possessed of first-hand information about the practice of law and the administration of justice. He writes most interestingly of how the bar and bench function in the machine age. (The Concord Press, New York city.)

Bon Jour Soldat. The funniest war diary ever written. By Verner C. Beck. The author describes a unique journey through the World War with the American artillery—he starts with the mobilization and ends with his return home. American activities in France present a most humoristic war entertainment.

"There are wars that the world has remembered,
There are wars that the world has forgot—"

(The Stratford Co., Boston.)

JUVENILE BOOKS.

Peter and Nancy in Europe. By Mildred Houghton Comfort. Author of Happy Health Stories. A little book with its bright covers which would attract the attention of any child is the story of two children, Peter and Nancy, and what they did while visiting and what they thought and said upon returning to their own home. In the front of the book is an interesting and instructive map which traces their trip accompanied by Uncle Lee, from Minnesto across the big ocean. The frontispiece is a page picture in colors of Peter and Nancy in Spain. This is a book that should be in the hands of every child, not only for its attractive style, but if they will join Peter and Nancy they, too, will have the pleasure of a lovely trip abroad. (Beckley-Cardy Co., Chicago.)

Little Plays for Little Folks. By Beatrice Creighton. The covers of the book tells the story for they are attractively illustrated with the little folks in costume. It contains a collection of seven simple plays. The costumes also are simple and easily made. The plays are so delightful that they will give much pleasure. (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

POETRY, DRAMA, ART.

Arrows of Desire. By Mary Hoxie Jones. MacMillan's book. These poems by a new poet have the following comment from a well-known critic: "She has a fresh lyric gift and a sensitive ear. She sings of gardens and the seasons, of death and love, and of foreign places. There is in her poems an awareness of beauty which has nothing in common with the harshness of the extreme moderns:

March.

"Think! This is March!
Soon will the larch
Grow green on its black branch,
Green on its limb.
Think how the cardinal
Makes his own festival,
Far away, dim,
Only a spot of red.
Soon will a peony shoot
Red at its pointed root
Shove up its head.
Sing cardinal, sprout larch,
Shove buds, hurry March!"

Singing Along the Way. By Nora Smith Robinson. Banner Press, Emory University. Once upon a time in a little city beside the yellow waters of the old Chattahoochee, a little blond girl, swinging her book satchel, was daily seen "singing along the way" to old College Hill for the duties of the day. The girl grew to womanhood, married and moved away from the old home town, and now she has published under the above title a collection of poems which will revive many pleasant memories; among them there are many which reveal her true patriotism, several which resurrect mammy songs of childhood, several woven around her adopted state—Alabama, and to these she has added her first poem dedicated to the superintendent of her first school. Another poem entitled "Almost Home," tells its own story:

"While seated on my porch one day my heart with anger torn,
An old-time darky in a cart rode slowly by my home,
The old ox scarce could pull him and the sight was sad to see.
But his voice with touching pathos rang out this melody
Chorus:
"Almos home — Chillun — Almos' home!
I's wanderin' in the valley whah
de waves ob Jordan run;
De sun am settin' mighty bright, de
Lawd am whisperin, 'Come!'
My feet hab touched the watahs—
Chillun—
Almos' home."

A deposit of talvertine marble has been discovered off the coast of Florida on Maderia island.

Canon C. W. Townley, 79, of London, England, recently rowed across Lake Windemere and Back again, a distance of twenty-two miles.

An ancient home-made telephone, believed to be the only one of its kind in existence, was recently discovered in the razing of an old home at Battle Creek, Mich. The device, made more than 50 years ago, consists of two drumheads on frames with a fine copper wire attached by a button connecting the drumheads.

SOCIETY

MRS. LAURANCE MATHEWS JR.

MISS MARY TRUMBELL ARMSTRONG

MISS MARGUERITE HODNETT

BEAUTIFUL recent brides and brides-elect are pictured on today's feature page with Mrs. Raines heading the list, having been before her marriage Miss Grace Woolford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Woolford. Mrs. Mathews was the former Miss Anne Bratton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bratton, her marriage to Ensign Mathews, U. S. N., having taken place Monday at St. Mark's Methodist church. Miss Armstrong is from Macon, her engagement being announced today to Richard A. Tharpe, of Thomaston. Miss Hodnett's engagement is announced to Dr. James George McDaniel, of Atlanta, formerly of Eastman, Ga., the marriage to take place Saturday, April 2. Photographs of Mrs. Raines and Miss Hodnett by Paul Farmer; Thurston Hatcher made Mrs. Mathews', and Warlick, of Macon, made Miss Armstrong's.

Miss Hodnett To Be Bride Of Dr. McDaniel in April

Enlisting the cordial interest of a wide circle of friends is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Head of the engagement of their niece, Miss Marguerite Hodnett, to Dr. James George McDaniel, of this city, formerly of Eastman, Ga., the marriage to take place Saturday, April 2.

Miss Hodnett is the only child of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Wesley Hodnett, her mother being before her marriage Miss Hattie Head. The bride-elect graduated from the North Avenue Presbyterian school and received her A. B. degree from Sweet Briar College in Virginia. She is a popular member of the younger social set and is beloved by countless friends. She is a member of the Young Girls' Circle for the Tallulah Falls school and of the Girls' Cotillion Club.

Dr. McDaniel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Thyrza McDaniel, of Eastman, Ga., the latter being before her marriage Miss Ada Cowan. Dr. McDaniel is the brother of Mrs. Joseph Burkett, of Macon; Mrs. Edwin Methvin, of Eastman; Charles Ely McDaniel and George Thomas McDaniel.

The bridegroom-elect received his B. S. and M. D. degrees from the University of Georgia, after which he spent three years in the University hospital in Augusta, serving the last year as house surgeon at this institution. For the past year Dr. McDaniel has been practicing in Atlanta, where he is prominently identified with the medical profession.

Sentiment Is Attached To Mrs. Raines' Ring.

The narrow platinum band with which Almon Rice Raines plighted his troth to his bride, the former Miss Grace Woolford, is valued by lovely Mrs. Raines more for the sentiment attached to it than for its beauty. When Mr. Raines announced his approaching marriage to members of his family, who reside in Savannah, Ga., his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Martha Meek, gave him the gold band wedding ring given her by her husband, the late Almon Rice Meek, whose name Mr. Raines bears.

This youthful bridegroom had the gold ring covered in platinum and engraved with a delicate design of orange blossoms before he presented it to his beautiful blond bride. Inscribed on the inside of the ring is "Friend, Sweetheart, Wife," and the date of the marriage. Additional sentiment is added to this inscription, for it is the same that is engraved inside the wedding ring of Mrs. C. A. Woolford, mother of Mrs. Raines, and for several generations has been engraved in the wedding rings of the women of her family. A beautiful likeness of Mrs. Raines may be seen on The Constitution's feature page today.

Evening Gowns Are Trimmed With Fur.

The vogue for trimming evening gowns with fur in dark shades was strikingly illustrated recently at a brilliant reception at the Piedmont Driving Club when a number of Atlanta's young maids and matrons, noted for their smart costumes, appeared in gowns featuring this style. Miss Louise Glancy, of Detroit, Mich., who is visiting her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hull, wore a particularly lovely gown of this type in maize flat crepe with a deep cape collar banded with mink fur and tied in a soft bow. When dancing Miss Glancy tied the cape so that it made a narrow strip of fur across her neck, revealing an extreme low decolletage and with the cape crossed in front and tied at the waistline in the back.

Mrs. Oliver Healey was a smart figure gowned in a Hattie Carnegie model of pink beige crepe, worn at first with a close-fitting brief coat with wide bands of exquisite beige fox fur edging the armholes. Later she removed the coat, revealing a low-cut neckline of severe simplicity.

Miss Anne Alston, blond subdeb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Alston, wore a gown of ciel blue satin with a short coat, the sleeves being banded with fox fur.

Miss Cooper and Mr. Milton Wed at Impressive Home Ceremony

Marked by impressive dignity was the wedding of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Cooper, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Walter Cooper, to Virgil Winfred Milton, of Waycross and Atlanta, which was solemnized at high noon Saturday at the home of the bride's parents on Fairview road in Druid Hills. Rev. Donald P. McGeachy Sr., pastor of the Decatur Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the families of the bride and bridegroom and a small group of close friends.

The setting of the ceremony was in the spacious drawing room, where an improvised altar was formed before the handsome Georgian mantel by an arrangement of palms and baskets of Easter and calla lilies. Against the green background were placed seven-branched candelabra holding burning white tapers. Preceding the ceremony an orchestra played "All for You" and "O Promise Me" and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played while the wedding party assembled at the altar. During the ceremony, Mrs. Mary Butts Griffeth Dobbs played "Traumerie," by Schumann.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Cooper, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and Emory Leonard, who acted as his best man. The ethereal blonde loveliness of the bride was enhanced by her wedding gown, a Hattie Carnegie model of heavenly blue crepe roma fashioned along the graceful long lines, with lace bolero to match her Renaissance sleeves. Her hat of blue straw trimmed with a bunch of white grapes was made along the Canotier style, which so enhances the bride's beautiful profile. Her bouquet was of Pernet roses and blue sweet peas.

Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was given by the bride's parents. The exquisite table in the dining room was overlaid by a Morrican cloth and held in the center by a three-tiered wedding cake, richly embossed in pastel flowers and valley lilies. The crystal candelabra were showered with valley lilies and white tulle and Mrs. Calvin Stewart kept the bride's book.

Mr. Milton and his bride left for a wedding trip and Mrs. Milton wore a traveling gown of blue and beige crepe. Her coat was beige trimmed in winding bands of pointed fox.

Mrs. Milton is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and is the sister of James Walter Cooper Jr. and Morton Cooper. She finished her education at Bessie Tift College and has enjoyed a wide circle of friends throughout the south. Mr. Milton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Milton, of Waycross and is the brother of Miss Laura Milton and Dr. Harold Milton Jr., also of Waycross. He is a graduate of Oglethorpe University and is now associated with Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Wynn—Hartley.

The marriage of Miss Maurine Wynn and Scott Hartley was quietly solemnized Friday afternoon, February 26. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Adams, at his home on Avon avenue, in the presence of members of the families and a few close friends.

The bride wore a smart costume of independence blue, with a corsage of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Hartley are residing at 3420 Rainey avenue, Hapeville, Georgia.

Bentley—Armstrong.

WASHINGTON, Ga., Feb. 27.—The marriage of Miss Katie Reid Bentley to George Foster Armstrong Monday evening was an event of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McAlpin Bentley Sr., and the nuptial rites were pronounced by the Rev. W. T. Evans, pastor of Washington Baptist church, in the presence of the immediate members of the two families.

Scouts and Camp Fire Girls Meet Today.

The Girl Scouts and the Camp Fire Girls of Atlanta meet this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the Congregational Christian church, Ponce de Leon and Piedmont avenues, to hear Harold Loring, who for a number of years ha been a student of American Indian music, folklore and symbolism. Mr. Loring was appointed by President Roosevelt to transcribe without any improvement the melodies of the Indian. Mr. Loring speaks the Sioux language fluently and is an expert in the sign language. He will sing and play their war, peace and birth songs. He is a capable concert pianist who has specialized in a study of the songs of the tribal life of the American Indian.

Moore-Moore Rites Take Place March 5

Of wide interest are the wedding plans of Miss Irma Vivian Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Linton Moore, of Decatur, and Hugh Littleton Moore, of Atlanta, formerly of Sharon, Ga., the marriage to be solemnized at the home of the bride on McDonough street Saturday, March 5, at 5:30 o'clock. The Rev. Ansley Moore, brother of the bride-elect, assisted by Dr. A. J. Moncrief, will perform the ceremony, after which the young couple will leave for a motor trip through Florida and South Carolina. On their return they will reside on Hill street in Decatur.

Dickson—Eberenz.

Cordial interest centers in the marriage of Miss Mildred Lee Dickson and George Martin Eberenz, the ceremony having taken place the evening of February 16 at the Sacred Heart rectory, with Father Cotter officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Dickson, whose lovable disposition has endeared her to a large circle of friends. Mr. Eberenz is the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Eberenz and the late Henry Eberenz. He attended Marist College and is in the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Miss McNeal Sings.

Little Miss Janet McNeal will be guest of the First Methodist church Senior Epworth League Sunday evening, rendering several vocal solos. Miss McNeal is a solo artist, and friends are invited to attend the league and hear this gifted young girl. The league convenes at 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Lawton's Preliminary Report Given on Roadside Survey in Ga.

Under the auspices of the Garden Club of Georgia, Mrs. W. L. Lawton, chairman of the national council for the protection of roadside beauty, made a survey of the roadsides of Georgia during January and February. A preliminary report of Mrs. Lawton's findings follows:

"Georgia is in the midst of her highway building with more than half of her system still to be paved. Her first thought must, of course, be the road bed for some time to come. However, there is a fundamental roadside planting which means an economy in the maintenance of the roadbed. That is the planting of shoulders and slopes. No amount of tree and shrub planting will make road sides beautiful so long as they are bordered by raw shoulders and slopes. The Georgia highway department is now doing excellent work in shoulder planting, especially in the southern part of the state. Wild honeysuckle, Cherokee roses are admirably suited for cuts, kudzu for fills. Flowering shrubs may be used on slopes, laurel, dogwood, redbud, etc. Many Georgia garden clubs are doing fine work in tree planting on town approaches. Here more or less formal planting is in order.

No Formal Planting.

"No formal planting along rural highways should be tolerated. The average rural road should have only natural planting, always using native material. We do not want "standardized" roadsides. When the landscape designer insists upon formal planting because the road is flat and monotonous, it is like trying to cover an ugly face with cosmetics. Even the flat country has its own character and after all the traveler wants to see Georgia. Preserve the character of the road. Make green the shoulders and slopes. Add trees where needed to cover the ugliness of the poles. Bring some of the flowering shrubs to the foreground, here and there, and the planting job is well done. There is still the clean-up which is another story.

"Georgia should follow the example of other states and establish at least three small nurseries for conservation of native material. When new roads are built, there should be in the highway department a man trained in landscape horticulture whose job it would be to decide what trees and shrubs could be left on the right-of-way, and to transfer to the nearest nursery all other native material worth saving but which must be cleared out of the roadway. Connecticut has five such nurseries where she saves thousands of trees and plants. After two years in the nursery the plants are used on the roadsides with almost no loss in the transplanting. Georgia has plenty of state land available for such use.

Columbus Situation.

"The city of Columbus does all its street planting from a city nursery started through the initiative of one man with material secured from refuse thrown out by private gardeners in the usual pruning. Highways near Columbus are now being planted with material which a local farmer has saved and brought in from the woods to his small nursery and which he now donates to garden clubs. Just as Georgia is finding her good roadbeds an economic asset, so also will she find attractive roadsides an economic asset. Tourists judge a state by what they see along the highways.

"The tree signs north and south of Atlanta, are the worst we have found in any state. There are also quantities of the small signs along the road, most of which are probably paying no tax and therefore illegal. For example, in motoring from Atlanta to the Tennessee line up state route 3, it is difficult to find a single mile which is entirely free from advertising. The same is true on the main road to Athens and along many other routes. The highway department is trying to clear up the tree signs but the job is hopeless until Georgia adds to her sign law a penalty for illegal signs and also a provision holding the firm whose product is advertised on the sign responsible for it. Now is the time for Georgia to seek sign control before conditions grow worse. Other states are making headway in their campaign to clean road sides. Why not Georgia? From Atlanta to Marietta the signs average 16 to the mile or one every six seconds and this does not include the scores of tree signs and signs on filling stations. From Atlanta to Hapeville signs average 20 a mile, one every four and a half seconds, besides sign plastered trees."

Perennial Garden Club Plans Carnegie Display

Perennial Garden Club is said to be the only study garden club in Georgia and every member is required to have a garden. Quite a number specialize on certain classes of flowers and are constantly requested to speak before garden clubs of Atlanta and Georgia. A great deal of valuable information has been gleaned through books at Carnegie library.

Beginning in March and continuing throughout the year there will be a table placed near the stairs at Carnegie, and upon this table members of the Perennial Club will keep fresh garden flowers. There will be a card with the display on which will be shown the botanical name, the common name, the class of flowers, sunshade and soil requirements and the grower's name. Unusual perennials will be shown and roses will be featured at least once a week during rose-blooming time, as will other flowers in season.

Mrs. Walter R. Lamb, the president, states that the members of the club will in this manner show their appreciation of Carnegie library, and believe that this plan will be educational and inspirational to a great many visiting the library.

Mrs. E. F. Fincher, 715 Flat Shoals road, will be hostess Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock, March 1. Mrs. David D. Long, who has had unusual success with delphiniums, will speak on this flower and Mrs. F. G. Meeker will give the calendar for this climate.

West End Civic Club Literary Department Meets Wednesday

Literary department of the Civic Club of West End, of which Mrs. Murray Howard is chairman, meets in the club auditorium Wednesday, March 2, at 3 o'clock. "Women of Shakespeare" will be discussed by Mrs. Clyde Spinks and her committee. During the year Mrs. Murray Howard has directed a course of study of the lives of "Women of Personality," which course has proven both interesting and instructive. The program of Wednesday will be the last of the series.

Monday evening, February 28, Mrs. A. L. Smith and Mrs. C. C. Chamberlain will receive club members and friends in the auditorium at 8 o'clock and tables will be arranged for bridge.

Mrs. J. H. Savage, Washington bicentennial chairman, presented a patriotic program Wednesday to an audience which filled the club auditorium to its capacity. "America" was sung with Mrs. N. G. Baggett leading, followed by the invocation by Mrs. A. J. Merrill. Phases of the life of Washington were presented by Mesdames R. T. Connally, P. D. Johnson and R. L. Ramsey. From Washington's example, Miss Martha Steedman prepared and presented a "Challenge to Modern Youth." Costume dances and readings were given by little Betty O'Kelley and Martha Jester. Miss Martha Livingston played "Washington's March" and Mrs. Frank Ligon sang "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny." Mrs. Jesse Manry carried her audience to Candler field and then by airplane to Mount Vernon. The trip through the house was described in detail as each room was entered. Of special interest was the account of how each piece of furniture which had been disposed of after Washington death had been traced, bought and replaced in the old home. Gifts from France were described and their location given. At the conclusion of the imaginative trip Mrs. J. F. Bockius presented the club with a rooted spray of English ivy from the tomb of Washington. The meeting closed with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The cooking school held during the past week under the auspices of Mrs. Otis Witherspoon and Mrs. E. O. Thornton was well attended. Mrs. A. P. Boardman, who has conducted several successful classes for the Civic Club, was instructor.

Miss Betty Chipley Weds Mr. Hudson At Trinity Church Ceremony in Columbus

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 27.—Dignity and impressive charm, in keeping with the Lenten season, characterized the wedding of Miss Betty Chipley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barschall Andrews, and Walter Lloyd Hudson, which was solemnized at high noon Saturday in a setting of exquisite beauty at Trinity Episcopal church. The Rev. Geoffrey Hindselwood, rector of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a brilliant gathering of southern society.

The altar decorations was of Easter lilies, and waxen tapers burned in seven-branched candelabra, casting a soft glow over the sacred scene.

As the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march pealed forth from the organ, where Erwin H. Vonderau presided, the ushers entered and took their places awaiting the approach of the bride. They were James Huff, Hunt Maxwell, James Fletcher, Henry Watson Jr., Bernard Smith, of Birmingham, and Leslie Dallis, of LaGrange.

The groomsmen were William Alexander and William Morgan, of LaGrange. The bridesmaids, Miss Louise Fisher, of Newnan, and Miss Cynthia Chappell, wore gowns of dream blue crepe with ankle-length skirts and short sleeves, with touches of American Beauty at the waist and neckline. Their hats were of rough blue straw, self-trimmed, and blue slippers and arm bouquets of American Beauty roses completed their costumes. The maid of honor, Miss Florence Banks, wore a gown similar to the bridesmaids with hat of American Beauty straw, and her flowers were American Beauty roses.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful bride, strikingly lovely in her bridal robes, entered with her father, Barschall Andrews, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Lloyd Radcliffe Ash, of Atlanta. Heavy rose-white satin was used to fashion the wedding gown, which was moulded to the figure, the graceful flare at the bottom of the skirt extending to form the very long train. A voluminous tulle veil, sprigged with orange blossoms, was caught to her head with a cap of rare Duchess lace, from which fell the short face veil. An arm bouquet of calla lilies accentuated the patrician beauty of the bride.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Barschall Andrews entertained members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests with a seated breakfact at their home in Green Island Hills. In the dining room, the bride's table was covered with a Venetian point cloth, and in thec enter was a silver bowl filled with white roses and valley lilies, at the four corners of the table, green tapers burned in silver candelabra. The bride's cake was made three-tiered and embossed with calla and valley lilies. Coffee was poured by Mrs. E. A. Feimster Jr. and Mrs. Edward Swift, Jr.

Mrs. Andrews, mother of the bride, wore an afternoon gown of blue crepe with hat to match. Her flowers were a shoulder spray of valley lilies. Mrs. James Riley, of Birmingham, aunt of the bride, was gowned in French blue with accessories of a darker shade. She wore a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. William Alexander was strikingly lovely in an afternoon gown of dusky turquoise with hat and slippers of midnight blue Her flowers were valley lilies.

Wedding Trip.

Mr. Hudson and his bride left for a wedding trip to New Orleans. The bride's going-away costume was of blue tweed with accessories to match.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. James Riley and Gayle Riley, Bernard Smith, Mrs. Frank Clements, Mrs. Harry Burns, of Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Mrs. Julian Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Radcliffe Ash, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hooper and Dr. and Mrs. W. Registration for Camp Toccoa, Ga., Opens Here Tuesday, March 1

Registration for Camp Toccoa, the summer camp of southeastern Camp Fire Girls, opens Tuesday, March 1. Camp Toccoa is located at Toccoa, Ga., 108 miles from Atlanta, on the Southern Railway, and is enjoyed by girls from 10 states. Although the ownership is vested in the Atlanta Camp Fire council, this is a regional camp and any Camp Fire Girl in the southeast is eligible to attend. Girls expecting to register for the entire season of eight weeks are urged to register immediately as the present capacity of the camp limits the all-season campers to 30, leaving adequate space for girls desiring to stay for shorter periods.

There will be five sessions of camp. Girls may register for all or any number of sessions. The camp will be under the capable supervision of Mrs. Laura V. Lombard, executive secretary of the Atlanta council and camp director of last year. She will be assisted by an efficient staff of young women, chosen for their marked ability in leadership. An average of one adult to every five campers is maintained.

Waterfront protection is in charge of an accredited Red Cross life-saving examiner, a woman of experience in camping and in instructing girls in swimming, canoeing and rowing. Her assistants are all senior lifesavers and young women competent in giving instruction to beginners. Advance swimming and diving will be given with separate class instruction by an expert in this line.

A graduate nurse is in charge of the health cabin and safeguards the health of the campers, under the supervision of Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, of the state board of health. For further information call Camp Fire Girls, fifth floor, Davison-Paxon Co., or call Walnut 3738.

'College Night' Features Opening Of MacDowell Festival Monday

The third MacDowell festival ever given in the south opens Monday evening, February 29, at 8:30 o'clock, at the Studio Arts building, corner Fourteenth and Peachtree, with one of the most auspicious beginnings in its history, the first program being "College Night." Musicians from Shorter College, Andrew College, LaGrange College and Brenau College will assemble to give the opening program of one of the greatest musical projects Atlanta has witnessed given by local and state talent.

The MacDowell festival will last from Monday through Saturday evening, March 5, with programs given morning at 11 o'clock. Honor guests of the festival will be Mrs. Crosby Adams, nationally-known musical figure, and Mrs. J. J. Clyatt, of Tifton, state president of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs.

Miss Evelyn Jackson, director of the festival, who first conceived the idea of such a memorial to MacDowell three years ago, and whose untiring efforts in its behalf and never-ceasing inspiration have developed the festival into more than six times its first proportions, will give the welcoming address Monday evening. Miss Mozelle Horton, who has assisted Miss Jackson in carrying out the plans of this third festival, will also briefly welcome the participants, and both Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Clyatt will have short inspirational messages.

The public is invited to each program, there being no admission to any program. Contributions are requested, which will go to the MacDowell Colony, in Peterborough, N. H., which is doing so much to advance creative work among American artists.

Grandmothers Present Gifts to Baby Bullard.

A fortunate baby is Ralph G. Bullard Jr., the sturdy infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Bullard, who has been showered with the exquisite gifts of relatives and friends since his birth Monday, February 8. Mrs. Edmund Bullard, the baby's paternal grandmother, came from Charlotte, N. C., to personally give Ralph Jr. a dainty cap of rare duchess lace, which was worn by his father and was her handiwork. On the baby's chubby finger is a tiny gold ring which was also worn by his father as an infant and was the gift of his grandmother, in addition to numbers of robes and small garments made by Mrs. Bullard.

Mrs. F. G. Corker, mother of Mrs. Bullard, the former Miss Myrtis Corker, made the beruffled cover for the baby's bassinet, which is fashioned of flesh-tinted point d'esprit trimmed with tiny pastel-shaded flowers and delicate blue bows. So sturdy and well developed is this youngster that he bids fair to follow in the footsteps of his father and become a football star when he enters Georgia Tech.

Atlanta Favorite Sings In Palm Beach Show.

From Palm Beach comes the story that Mrs. H. H. Windsor Jr., of Chicago, the former Louise Hunter, of Metropolitan Opera and Atlanta musical comedy fame, came out of her professional retirement last week to appear as the star in the Kiwanis benefit show. Music and lyrics written especially for Mrs. Windsor by Arthur and Oscar Hammerstein, was the vehicle for her lyric soprano voice, as well as one selection from her former operatic roles. This annual Kiwanis benefit brings Palm Beach society with its dazzling display of jewels to fill the diamond horseshoe of the Paramount theater.

Charming Story Relates To Violinist's Name.

"And thou shalt call His name—"

On an evening 17 years ago, a young honeymoon couple in New York returned, weary and rebuffed, to their temporary living quarters, after spending a whole fruitless day looking for a home.

Of Palestine background, but citizens of the land of the free, which their parents had sought for its traditional (perhaps only traditional?) liberality towards all faiths and peoples, these young New Yorkers had been turned away from one building of flats after another with the curt denial, "We do not rent to Jews."

In their own room, the bride shed a few tears, but they were not of shame. On the contrary, when she spoke it was to proclaim a supreme faith and loyalty.

"When our first born comes, if he is a boy," she said to the young husband, "let us call him 'Yehudi,'" which in their tongue means Jew.

So, Yehudi Menuhin, who at 16, after years of recognition as a true prodigy, is given now, by a universal critical acclaim, the accolade of authentic art as well as genius.

All great men, history tells, stem from great mothers. And who shall say that the youthful violinist, the sensation of the musical world today, who plays in Atlanta March 28, was not marked for a special destiny on that day when his mother-to-be asserted with undaunted courage in the face of a hostile world her credo?

Great art and great faith are alike things of the spirit. And why may not the gift of the boy be the fruit of his mother's spiritual heroism?

Mr. Churchill Speaks Of Mrs. Longworth.

When Winston Churchill, man of affairs and letters, visited here last week and charmed everyone coming within range of his voice, he spoke of seeing Mrs. Nicholas Longworth while in Washington, D. C. She was seated next to Mr. Churchill at the first dinner she has attended since her widowhood. She wore a gown of black tulle over a foundation of dull black chiffon, and the shoulder straps of the closely-fitted, square-neck bodice, were of dull jet beads. Mrs. Longworth wore her abundant hair just as she wore it in her girlhood days, but she has discarded the pompadour of that period. She wore a delicate platinum chain, studded five inches apart with a small diamond, to which was attached a diamond-studded platinum pendant.

That Englishmen possess a turn for gallantry similar to that used by southerners was disclosed when he made a very pretty speech to Miss Eugenia Bridges, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bridges. Miss Bridges, who had called on Miss Diana Churchill at the Biltmore, remarked that she knew it must be very easy for Mr. Churchill to have on his travels such a charming companion as his daughter. And, the brilliant man of letters, including Miss Bridges and his daughter in a graceful little bow, remarked that he thought her "in very excellent company."

Miss Virginia Hall Elected May Queen.

A beautiful Georgia girl, Miss Virginia Hall, of Cedartown, Ga., has been honored by her election as May queen at Sweet Briar College in Virginia. Arrayed in regal robes Miss Hall will reign over a court comprised of girls chosen as the most beautiful in the college at the May Day festivities which will be held in "The Dell," a picturesque part of the campus. Groups of students in colorful costumes will present folk dances for the approval of their chosen sovereign and the celebration, to be held in the early part of May, will assemble a throng of spectators from nearby colleges and cities in addition to the families of the students.

The election of a member of the senior class to act as May queen is one of the most anticipated events of the spring and it is probably the highest honor which can be conferred upon a member of the Sweet Briar student body. Miss Hall, who is a striking brunet and the daughter of Mrs. M. H. Hall, of Cedartown, has acted as a maid of honor to the queen for the past three years and has been a belle at the dances held at the University of Virginia, Washington and Lee, the University of North Carolina, V. M. I. and other near-by colleges throughout her years at school.

Miss Hall attended Washington Seminary in Atlanta for two years and has frequently visited here as the guest of Miss Hazel Stamps, Mrs. L. L. Shivers and others. She has numbers of friends in Atlanta among the younger set and college contingent.

Miss Elizabeth Everett Attends Celebration.

Miss Elizabeth Everett, lovely young Atlantan and a student at Trinity College, in Washington, D. C., was an interested participant in the bicentennial celebration held in the nation's capital. As the granddaughter of Mrs. Mollie Sheehan Moran, this charming girl has a host of personal and inherited friends, and news of the brilliant celebration of the Order of Washington, whose membership is composed of collateral descendants of General George Washington, and others whose ancestors distinguished themselves in colonial and revolutionary days, was all the more interesting because of Miss Everett's membership.

The celebration took the form of a banquet and ball and was held at the Hotel Lafayette on the natal day of Washington. An Atlantan, who was made an honorary member, was Lieutenant Charles Moran, military intelligence reserve, and Mrs. David D. Cladwell, vice president general of the D. A. R. of Washington, was also accepted as an honorary member. Dr. J. G. B. Bulloch, chancellor general, presided and his address stressing Washington's policy of preparedness was a high point of the evening. Among the prominent guests were Daniel Smith Gordon, Dr. George Tully Vaughn, Charles L. Wingate, Major Amasa M. Holcombe, Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell and his daughter, Miss Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, and Rev. James McIntosh Eckard, of New York.

Mrs. Elrod Sails For European Visit.

Lure of the old countries which beckon vacationists each season has an enthusiastic traveler in interesting Mrs. Blanche Irwin Elrod, who has planned a trip abroad, and is sailing this week from Norfolk, Va., aboard the City of Baltimore for cities beyond the seas. Upon her arrival in Europe she will be joined by her sister, Mrs. I. J. Kalmon, and this congenial pair will travel together, going later to Rotterdam, where Mrs. Kalmon makes her home at the picturesque little Hotel Wiemar, overlooking the canal and surrounded by wide gardens of brilliant hued tulips.

Scenes on the canal suggest old Holland unchanged by the introduction of modern customs. Boats bearing men, women and children pass and wooden shoes and the colorful native costumes are the order of the day. Tales of heroic Holland, the building of dykes, the love of mother country are suggested by these sturdy Dutchmen as they toil past towards the markets, and Mrs. Kalmon, whose residence abroad has given her a complete understanding of the foreigners, will introduce Mrs. Elrod to fascinating new scenes and experiences.

Paris, too, will be included in their travels and there they will visit Mrs. Irving Gumbel, who maintains an attractive home at Neuilly Sur Seine. Mrs. Gumbel was the former Miss Marjorie Kalmon, and was graduated from Washington Seminary. She has acquired a very thorough knowledge of French and speaks with the accent of a true Parisian. From Paris Mrs. Elrod and Mrs. Kalmon will go to Brussels, and at Eastertime they will visit Switzerland, and after that Dutch gardens flaunting brilliant-hued tulips will prove inviting for these beauty lovers.

Talented Atlanta Children To Appear in Mammoth Revue Sponsored by Penny Club for Establishment of Milk Fund

The accompanying photograph presents a trio of gifted Atlanta children of the Sunset Club, who will appear in the mammoth kiddie revue to be staged at the city auditorium Saturday, March 5, under the auspices of the Penny Club, the proceeds to be used to establish a milk fund for under-nourished children. At the upper left is Evelyn Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Phelps, who will do a tap dance; upper right, Alta Lena Kimball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Kimball, as she will appear in an attractive gypsy costume; lower right, Evelyn Oglesby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Oglesby, who will do a group of acrobatic dances. The revue is under the direction of Lou and Janet, of radio fame, with Mrs. Julian Hirshberg and Mrs. Richard Schwab as chairmen of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Outstanding among the events scheduled for the week is the brilliant kiddie revue to be staged Saturday, March 5, by members of the Sunset Club at the city auditorium, the proceeds of which will be used to form a milk fund for the Family Welcome Society. The revue is sponsored by the Penny Club and the idea for the milk fund originated with Mrs. Julian Hirshberg and Mrs. Richard Schwab, members of the Family Welfare motor corps, from their contact with the actual needy cases.

This motor corps consists of women who voluntarily give both their time and their services as drivers, as well as the use of their cars, to the trained investigators for the Family Welfare Society, thus at least doubling the amount of work that each investigator previously could do. In connection with this work, some of the members of this corps became increasingly aware of the desperate need for milk in needy families, which could not possibly be taken care of by the funds now available from the other Community Chest agencies. They therefore originated a plan to be sponsored by the Penny Club and to be efficiently distributed to names of needy, provided by the Family Welfare Society. A few generous individual donations already have this fund functioning, and about 50 urgent cases are receiving the necessary milk each day. There are hundreds of such cases in Atlanta requiring milk not only to relieve the present suffering, but also to prevent a future generation, that is under-developed physically and mentally because of malnutrition.

The next step in the development of this milk fund is the Kiddie Revue. Some 200 children will participate in this performance, and they have been perfectly trained by Lou and Janet, of radio fame, assisted by the Jack Rand School of Dancing. The program will include excellent singing, dancing, attractive skits and pageants.

The Fulton Brothers Electric Company has generously agreed to furnish amplifiers, with which to equip the auditorium especially for the occasion, so that every sound from the stage will be clearly audible in all parts of the house. There will be a matinee performance at 2:30 o'clock, March 5; tickets being 10c for children and 25 cents for adults. An evening performance will be given on the same day at 8:30 o'clock, tickets being 25 cents for children and 50 cents for adults. Tickets are on sale at the Penny Club headquarters, 42 Edgewood avenue; the Boots Walker library at J. P. Allen's, Rich's tearoom and Davison Paxon's tearoom.

Among the talented children who will be featured on the program are: Frances Marie Bess, Evlyn Oglesby, Alta Lena Kimball, William Blue McKay, Evlyn Phelps, Betty Wall, Sam Allen, Elizabeth and Jane Waters, Mickey Zackery, Betty Mae Price, Elsie Quay Herrington, Carl Meadors, Norma Butler, June Van Sickle, Camille Litton, Paf Wellborn, Mitzie Hirsch, Martha Verdi, Clara Young, Frances Wheeler, Emilie Van Stavoren, Margaret Baldwin, Betty Jo Yarbrough, Frances Johnson, Do Do Bridges, Charlotte Whitfield and Josephine Wynn Calloway.

Southern Woman's Manuscript Read Here Published in London

BY MAINER LEE TOLER.

Twelve months have passed since I had the interesting experience of interviewing Frances Guignard Gibbes, well-known South Carolina writer of poetic drama, when she was a distinguished guest in Atlanta. The receipt last week of a copy of "Up There," a three-act play written by this gifted southerner and published by the Mitre Press of London, recalled the pleasant February afternoon in 1931 spent with this successful writer in her apartments at the Winecoff hotel. "Up There" was then being written and from a sketchy manuscript its author read me parts of the play which has just been published and that will doubtless be produced shortly by some theatrical manager because of its beauty and worth.

I recall that she told me she felt as if a divine inspiration had led her to write this play, the scene of which is Mont Saint Michel, that renowned shrine in France.

"It happened early one spring morning as I approached Mont Saint Michel," said Mrs. Gibbes. "All was blue—sky, water, clouds—and over the heaven pointed spires of the great abbey there hovered misty clouds and among these clouds I seemed to see one shaped like the wing of an angel."

Inspired by Tradition.

She confessed that perhaps her inspiration was influenced by her knowledge of the tradition associated with the historic and celebrated Mont Saint Michel. She told me that as she ascended the thousand steps leading to the cathedral that her imagination took a backward turn to the fifth century when Saint Aubert, bishop of Avranches, had a vision in which the Archangel Saint Michel appeared and pleaded with him to build the abbey on this mount to his glory.

"The pleas of this strange apparition led to the building of this most impressive monument of all France and inspired me to write 'Up There,'" said Frances Guignard Gibbes. She continued during the interview to describe the beauty of the great Norman cathedral which rises from a pinnacle of rock in a vast tidewashed plain half a mile from the Normandy coast and that for centuries has been the mecca for countless visitors.

Members of Atlanta's Friday Morning Reading Club will share my interest in the publishing of "Up There." For during her visit here last winter Mrs. Gibbes also read the unfinished manuscript to this group of Atlanta women who meet each week to study, read and discuss the best in literature and current events. So enthusiastic were these local literary critics of the play "Up There" that its success was assured even then—one year before it was published. Other plays written by the gifted southerner which have received critical praise are "Jael," "The Stranger," "The Strange Woman," "Hilda" and "The Face," which are surpassed only by the exquisite charm and beauty of her latest work.

Wife of Professor.

In social life Frances Guignard Gibbes is Mrs. Oscar L. Keith, of Columbia, S. C., wife of the professor of romance languages at the university of that state. In addition to having the distinction of being a native of the state that produced such writers as DuBose Heyward, Julia Peterkin, Ambrose Gonzales, John Bennett and Archibald Rutledge, Mrs. Keith can also be proud of the fact that she was the first woman student to enroll at the University of South Carolina.

Mrs. Keith's literary attainments have won for her wide recognition as well as many prizes in this country and abroad. Two years ago she was selected by the editor of Nouvelle Literaire, a French publication in Paris, to write her opinion of the influence of French letters. Her views were published in Nouvelle Literaire with flattering comment.

Three hundred and sixty-five days have slipped by since Frances Guignard Gibbes told me of her literary ambitions. But with the publication of "Up There" she has gone far toward eliminating poetic ornament and achieving poetic atmosphere—the goal for which she is striving.

Patriotic Tea Given At Mrs. Hunnicutt's

Kirkwood Civic League sponsored a George Washington silver tea Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Wilbur L. Hunnicutt on Rockyford road, the patriotic note being expressed in the national flags adorning the house. A flag was draped above the picture of George Washington, at the base of which were lighted candles placed in a candelabrum, set in an arrangement of ivy sent from Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington in Alexandria, Va.

Resting upon a silver-framed mirror placed in the center of the tea table was a silver basket filled with snowy gypsophila, from which radiated sprays of ivy grown at Mount Vernon. Mrs. C. A. Virgin and Mrs. S. L. Owen poured tea from silver services. Misses Anne Carpenter, Florine Lewis, Mary Jane Wilson and Mary Louise Bullock, dressed in colonial costumes, assisted in serving tea. Misses Helen Boone and Evelyn Brannon, wearing colonial costumes, met the guests at the door.

Relics and curios were exhibited, among the list being a piece of the door post from the home of the mother of George Washington, owned by Mrs. H. Y. Brittain; a knitted bedspread over 125 years old, owned by Mrs. H. E. Clark; blue Majolica butter dish over 200 years old, owned by Mrs. Wilbur Hunnicutt; a powder horn and shuttle of ancient date, owned by Mrs. E. V. D. Manning, and curios in the form of candles moulded into figures of Martha and George Washington, owned by Mrs. Elam Dempsey.

Mrs. Natalie Buchanan introduced Martha and George Washington, impersonated by Miss Hallie Cassels and Louis Cassels Brown; Misses Jeannette Buchanan, Helen Boone, Mary Emma Bishop, Edith Jones and Eva Stence, from the Natalie Buchanan School of Expression, gave readings, and vocal selections were rendered by Misses Yula Foster, Kathryn Owen and Mrs. L. C. Dabney, accompanied by Mrs. J. L. Jackson.

State President Announces New Associations Organized

BY MRS. R. H. HANKINSON,
President of the Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers.

By invitation of Superintendent Cleveland, Mrs. Jack Williams, of Waycross, president of the eleventh district, organized parent-teacher associations in two schools at Valdosta Thursday. Center Grammar school and Adair Street Grammar school set up complete organizations, and the junior high school will organize in the very near future. The attendance at the two meetings was approximately 100.

At Manchester, Ga., on Wednesday, Mrs. Cooper Campbell, Mrs. Frank David, Mrs. H. B. Harper and Mrs. Wheeler Tolbert, of Columbus, Ga., organized a parent-teacher association with Mrs. Eugene Brown as president. Enthusiastic addresses were made by H. R. McLarty, superintendent of the Manchester schools, and Editor Johnson, of the Manchester Mercury. The columns of the Mercury were opened to P.-T. A. stories.

Mrs. Roe's triumphal march around the state is still a matter of appreciation and inspiration. Eighteen associations gathered at the Teachers' College at Statesboro, and joined with the students in classes conducted by Mrs. Roe. Due to the death of her father, Mrs. Lawrence Kelley, president of the first district, was unable to attend, and was represented by Mrs. Robert Majors.

City Council President Emphasizes Importance of Good Leadership

BY MRS. ROBERT P. CHESHIRE,
President of the Atlanta Council, Parents and Teachers.

Inasmuch as the time is approaching that new leaders are elected for the year 1932-1933, much serious thought and consideration should be given this most important part of the year's work. Good leadership is the great need today, not only in the parent-teacher movement, but in all educational, business and other organizations. William John Cooper, in an article in the United States Daily, brought out several points which are well worth quoting: "A leadership in education, as well as in other fields, makes serious demands upon those who would attain it, among the more important of which are: First, a willingness to undergo hard work. Those who have had much contact with human beings are impressed with the general attitude of 'get by.' Students in high school and college are not excepted from this principle. A careful inquiry will disclose the fact that they are willing to do just enough to pass; the 'get-by' attitude is the first characteristic of the average man, it is never the characteristic of the leader. Any number of specific cases can be called to mind by employers in the business world.

"Second: Leadership requires a physical capacity to stand hard work. Those who are born with weakened bodies are handicapped from the beginning. Young people, however, may profit by reading the career of Theodore Roosevelt, a man who possessed other qualities of leadership but was without this one. Realizing his handicap, he went from college to a western cattle ranch and built himself up.

"Third: A clear-cut purpose or aim. Although this aspect is best evidenced by careers of such military leaders as Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, it nevertheless applies in great or less degree to leadership in all fields. Many never achieve leadership in any field because they do not realize what they want to do—they are unable to make up their minds.

"Fourth: An ability to make use of obstacles. Another outstanding characteristic of the average man is what the boys on the football team term the 'alibi.' It is so easy to blame the other fellow that few are willing to assume the responsibility for their own difficulties.

"Fifth: An ability to get along with people. Dr. Leonard P. Ayres set this down as one of the essentials of leadership, under the name of 'don de gentes,' which corresponds roughly to the English, 'the gift of folk.' It is especially required of the business executive.

"The sixth characteristic of leaders is an outstanding capacity to identify the self with the cause. Great principles recognized as spiritual truths seem to make little impression upon a material world. Once a great principle, however, is embodied in the human form and actually lived in a material world, it has immense influence."

As a parent-teacher member she should first learn to follow. A good leader is always developed from a loyal follower. This is the very first rule to learn and to abide by.

At a recent conference held in Atlanta by Mrs. C. E. Roe, field secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, the six qualities which a good interpreter must have were outlined by Mrs. Roe. It will be well worth the while of all parent-teacher members to possess themselves of these six qualifications, namely: (1) vision; (2) work; (3) knowledge; (4) faith; (5) sense of humor; (6) enthusiasm.

Members of parent-teacher associations, in making their choice of a leader, should appreciate the importance of selecting one who possesses the best qualifications, one who will actually lead and one whom the members will be inspired to follow.

on beautiful, well developed, Atlanta-Grown SHRUBBERY

Only seasonable conditions and the rapid development of our entire stock have made necessary the disposal and clearaway of much of our finest varieties. In order to get rid of this overstock we are offering it at the most surprisingly low prices. We are not going out of business. We're simply making these special sacrifice prices—for a limited time—in fact, only until our surplus is depleted.

All are splendidly developed specimens grown in local soil and acclimated to conditions and surroundings that are most favorable for continued growth in this section.

Georgia D.A.R. Hold Celebrations Of Washington Bi-Centennial

BY MRS. STEWART COLLEY, of Grantville, Ga., State Editor.

Georgia D. A. R. have certainly entered into the celebration of the bicentennial with a will to accomplish many inspirational deeds. With Mrs. Bun Wylie, state regent, and the state chairman of the Washington bicentennial as leaders, Georgia D. A. R. will forge ahead determined to accomplish greater things this year than ever before. Practically every chapter in the state has entered into the celebration and with one accord. There could not be a more appropriate time in the history of our country, when the people as a whole should awhken, and make a determined effort to keep alive the ideals of George Washington, the God-given leader of America.

Mrs. Henry McCalla, state chairman of the Helen Rogers Franklin trophy, writes the following note to the chapter regents: "Please refer to page 184 in your 1931-32 proceedings and find the requirements to win the Helen Rogers Franklin trophy. Make your reports as full as possible and send to me by March 5, so that I may judge them in time for conference. This is important."

The editor wishes to call attention to the report on Immigrant's Manual which is to be sent to Mrs. H. B. McMaster, state chairman, at Waynesboro. Please send amount given by the chapter to the immigrant's Manual Fund and also the number of manuals distributed.

February meeting of the Sergeant Newton chapter, of Covington, was held at the home of Mrs. C. W. Porter. Mrs. A. M. Norris, regent, presided, and Mrs. Carrie Mobley gave a brief history of the chapter, which is 37 years old this month. Mrs. A. B. Harwell reported that a tree had been planted on the schoolgrounds in celebration of George Washington's birthday. Mrs. Trox Bankston reported on legislation and Miss Sallie Mae Sockwell read an interesting piece on national flags. Mesdames R. F. Travis and R. E. Everitt presented a framed copy of the famous Stuart bust of Washington to the chapter. Mrs. P. W. Godfrey was made honorary regent of the chapter and the delegate to state and national conferences will be the regent. Alternates elected to these conferences are Mesdames T. C. Swann, O. W. Porter, W. D. Travis, S. A. Ginn and G. T. Smith.

Lannahassee chapter, of Buena Vista, was entertained at the February meeting by the Misses Lowe. Mrs. Bessie Burt, regent, presided, and Mrs. J. S. Burgib gave a report on the flag. The program presented was as follows: Toast to Georgia, Miss Floyd Lowe; song, Mrs. T. N. Williams; "Georgia, the Colony," Miss H. E. Bitt; song, by Mrs. I. L. Williams; toast, by Mrs. W. B Short. Music was furnished by Mrs. B. T. Rainey, and Misses Nellie Burgin and Evelyn Lowe.

A tea was given by the Vidalia chapter at the home of Mrs. Frank Darby to commemorate the bicentennial of George Washington. A program was given and about 200 guests called during the afternoon. Vidalia chapter is to be congratulated on the splendid work that it is accomplishing.

Adam Brinson chapter, of Emanuel county, met at the home of Mrs. I. T. McLemore with Mrs. I. A. Brannen, associate hostess. Mrs. Thomas Lanier Black, program chairman, presented the following program: "Social Life of Washington," by Mrs. T. L. Blake, and "Washington, the Builder of the Nation." This chapter will unveil a marker at an early date to the pioneer settlers of Emmanuel county. This will be a most auspicious occasion and will commemorate the brave acts of these early patriots.

Elijah Clarke chapter, of Athens, met at the home of the regent, Mrs. M. R. Redwine, who presided. This meeting was in celebration of the birthday of the chapter. George Washington's birthday, and Georgia Day. The spirit of each of these dates was portrayed in the program that followed. The opening prayer, "Washington's Prayer for His Country," was read by Miss Moina Michael. Those who took part in the program were introduced by Mrs. J. V. H. Rucker after she had read a short portion of "The Red Old Hills of Georgia." An article, "George Washington in Georgia," was given by Miss Laura Blackshear. This article was based on a diary kept by George Washington while on a visit to Georgia in 1791. During the luncheon several appropriate toasts were given: "Our Chapter," by Mrs. Julius Talmadge; "The Flag," by Mrs. Horace Holden, and "George Washington," by Miss Annie Linton. The chapter welcomed as a new member, Mrs. Julian Moore, who has transferred her membership from John Clarke chapter, Social Circle, Ga.

Elijah Clarke chapter, of Athens, has inaugurated a plan in regard to loan scholarships which is of decided significance from the standpoint of D. A. R. ideals. Realizing the importance of safeguarding the usefulness of her student loans from a standpoint of patriotic service, this chapter is taking pains to see that no money shall be loaned to any student who is not a 100 per cent American boy or girl in purpose, beliefs and general outlook. To this end all loan beneficiaries are now required in signing their notes to also subscribe to the American creed—thus signifying their allegiance to the United States of America, and their purpose to keep its ideals inviolate. It is hoped in this way to help educate a splendid type of citizenship which shall be an asset to the state and nation. Elijah Clarke chapter has for years been outstanding in scholarship work, having been commended by the national chairman last year for excellent national standing. This chapter is half owner with the state D. A. R. of the War Memorial fund for boys at the University of Georgia, having contributed $2,500 of the $5,000 invested. In addition to this the chapter maintains a loan scholarship at the University of Georgia and two loan scholarships at the Georgia State Teachers' College. Active interest is always shown to loan students and they are invited once each year to meet with the chapter. In this way they are made to feel that they have the interest and love of the organization, which is a source of inspiration to any boy or girl.

James Pittman chapter, of Commerce, with Mrs. C. E. Pittman, regent, presiding, met with Mrs. C. C. Ward. The treasurer reported all honor roll requirements have been paid. The committee to have the picture of George Washington framed for the school reported it has been hung in the library. A year's subscription to "The National Republic" has been given school by chapter. A George Washington tea was held Monday, February 22, at the home of Colonel and Mrs. E. C. Stark. The following delegate and alternates were elected to the state conference at Waycross: Regent, Mrs. C. E. Pittman; vice regent, Mrs. T. C. Hardman, Mrs. L. L. Davis, Miss Suzanne Stark, Mrs. M. M. Bryan, Mrs. H. P. DeLaPerriere and Mrs. W. W. Stark. To the national conference in Washington: Delegate, Mrs. C. E. Pittman, regent. Alternates, Mrs. T. C. Hardman, Mrs. Maria Respess Carson, Mrs. H. P. DeLaPerriere, Mrs. W. W. Stark, Miss Suzanne Stark, Mrs. H. Abbitt Nix, Mrs. John Turner and Miss Louona Little. Committee to judge the song in song contest: Mrs. Claud Little, Mrs. W. N. Harden and Mrs. Eugene Runion. The chapter indorsed Mrs. J. D. McCurry as state regent to be elected at Waycross meeting in March.

Savannah chapter met at the home of Mrs. Wilber Coney, 1718 Drayton street. It was decided to have a card tournament at the Hotel De Soto Easter Monday and all interested are invited. Mrs. George Williams was appointed to send an Easter box to Mrs. Newsome and Miss Poole, two real Daughters of the American Revolution. The chapter welcomed Mrs. J. S. Merrin, of Flemington, as a new member. The chapter is taking count of its members who exercise their privilege of voting. An invitation was accepted to attend a planting of three camphor trees on the grounds of the Forty-ninth Street school at an early date. This celebration is a part of the George Washington bicentennial tree planting program. The trees will be known as the D. A. R. Row. An announcement was made that through the effort of Mrs. J. Thomas Wood a Georgia flag has been placed in the Washington Memorial chapel at Valley Forge. A Henry S. Redding, agent, with Mrs. P. N. Harley, alternate, were elected delegates to the national congress and the regent's alternate to the state conference will be Mrs. C. Howard Harley. Eight names were reported for the chapter of Children of the American Revolution by the organizing regent, Mrs. P. N. Harley. It is the plan of the chapter to present the new chapter at the state conference.

Stephen Heard chapter, of Elberton, entertained at a colonial luncheon recently at the clubroom in observance of George Washington bicentennial. The room was decorated in patriotic colors featuring a large picture of George Washington and a copy of the constitution of the United States draped in the United States flag. Mrs. W. H. Irwin and Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, who wore colonial costumes, poured tea. Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, regent, gave a dedication of program to George Washington. Mrs. Dozier J. Thornton introduced the speaker, Raymonde Stapleton, who gave an address on the constitution of the United States. Mrs. Ernest Korten sang "The Last Rose of Summer." Mrs. Willie Thornton rendered a group of old-fashioned airs. A solo dance by Miss Mary Ann Arnold was given. The ladies presenting the program were gowned in colonial costumes.

Nancy Hart chapter, of Milledgeville, Mrs. Steve Thornton, regent, erected two bronze tree markers in honor of George Washington. The tree planted at the Georgia Military College, was marked the liberty tree, planted by the chapter 11 years ago, on the third anniversary of Armistice Day. The program was as follows:

Music, C. M. C. band; invocation, Rev. P. H. Harding; "Pledge to the Flag," Mrs. Y. H. Yarbrough; remarks by regent, Mrs. Steve W. Thornton; "George Washington, Colonel Erwin Sibley; history of tree and presentation, Mrs. J. I. Beason; unveiling by Cadet Captain Steve Thornton Jr., Cadet Jack Thornton; acceptance, President George Roach; "Star-Spankled Banner," C. M. C. band.

At the Georgia State College for Women the chapter planted a holly tree with the following program:

Music, G. M. C. band; invocation, Rev. F. H. Harding; pledge to the flag, Mrs. Y. H. Yarbrough; remarks by regent, Mrs. Steve W. Thornton; "George Washington," Rev. A. G. Harris; presentation of tree and marker, regent, Mrs. Steve W. Thornton; unveiling, Miss Ann Orme Sallee and Miss Mary Owens Sallee; acceptance, Dr. J. L. Beeson, president; "Star-Spangled Banner," G. M. C. band.

Community Theater Changes Date For Next Presentation

The Community theater announces that the date of its next presentation, which was scheduled for February 29-March 1, has been changed to March 16. Season ticketholders will have an opportunity to see "Paris Bound," a popular play given by the Officers' Dramatic Club of Fort Benning, of which Major H. B. Lewis, U. S. A., is president. This production is brought to Atlanta under the auspices of the Community theater and is offered to its patrons instead of a regular Community theater production. Early in the year the Community theater was invited to give "Ariadne" or "Business First" to the Officers' Dramatic Club of Fort Benning. The presentation of "Paris Bound" is in the nature of a return courtesy.

The Fort Benning company has been directed by a trained director who has had eight years' experience on Broadway. The company is making a short tour and Atlanta was included by special request of the Community theater, of which A. Ten Eyck Brown is president and Janet Millis Shepherd is director.

Future plays to be given later by the Community theater players are in rehearsal and an elaborate plan of dramatic offerings to Atlanta for the coming months will be announced soon.

Atlanta Motor Club To Open Membership Campaign at Dinner

Women will take an active part in the membership campaign of the Atlanta Motor Club to open with a dinner in the ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel Monday evening, February 29, and continue for two weeks. The goal of the campaign is 500 new members. There will be three divisions of campaign workers, the red division headed by Robert P. McLarty, the blue by Carlton Smith, and the gold or women's division headed by Mrs. Russell R. Whitman, assisted by Mrs. John M. Cooper and a number of other prominent Atlanta women who will act as captains and members of teams. A thorough canvass of automobile owners who are not now availing themselves of the advantages of the Motor Club-A. A. A. membership will be made.

"Women in other cities over the country take great interest and actively participate in the work of the A. A. A. clubs," says Mrs. Whitman, "and it seems that we are needed here to help carry out the plans which are not only of direct benefit to motorists, especially the women motorists, but of real service to the community. When we realize that there are nearly 1,200 other clubs like the Atlanta Motor Club, with over a million members, composing the American Automobile Association, we appreciate what such a mobilization of men and women in a cause of common interest signifies. A member of the motor club here becomes automatically a member of all the other clubs, entitled to the same privileges and benefits as from the home club.

"Women are especially interested in the free emergency service of the Atlanta Motor Club, which means that we can always phone the club for assistance when we have trouble in the city with batteries, tires, run out of gasoline when not near a filling station or have other difficulties with our cars. If the trouble cannot be fixed on the spot by the club's mechanics, our cars are towed to any garage we select free. This is a splendid protection to women driving alone. Then we are interested in the accident insurance policies for ourselves and families; the road condition and touring information always available day and night; the fact that when touring the free service of all other A. A. A. clubs is available the same as at home. These are just a few of the direct benefits.

"But we women are, I think, even more concerned in the larger work of the club, such as the establishment of schoolboy patrols at schoolhouses, for the added safety of our children, a work only just started and which should be extended; for the betterment of traffic conditions, especially in the downtown congested districts; for the adoption by the legislature of Georgia of the safety responsibility act and the drivers' license law as adopted in New York and many other states; against higher gasoline taxes and surely against further diversion of the gasoline tax for other purposes than good roads; for roadside control and beautification; for more attractive entrances to Atlanta by auto, this last to my mind being most important.

"An increased motor club membership will greatly augment our influence and guarantee greater service to the community. This opportunity for service should challenge the interest and support of every forward thinking woman. I extend a cordial invitation to all women who are interested to join us in this work, and telephone Hemlock 9628."

Better Films Group Hears Address By Dr. Memminger

Dr. M. M. Memminger, noted Atlanta divine and orator, was the feature speaker Thursday at the luncheon at which the Better Films Committee entertained at the Henry Grady hotel. Mrs. Patrick Bray, the president, presided, introducing Dr. Memminger, who recently returned from an extensive eastern trip. He spoke of his visits to the movie houses of the great metropolis and the coming presentation of many interesting films.

Mrs. Warren White made a plea that the members of the Better Films Committee keep in mind the vision of a theater in Atlanta which would show only the best of educational and cultural films, carrying out an idea recently advanced by Mrs. Patrick Bray and which has received favorable consideration. Mrs. H. W. Wilder, of the advisory board, spoke briefly and splendid reports were made by all chairmen of committees.

New members introduced were: Mrs. J. R. Little, Mrs. A. McAdoo Wilson Jr., Mrs. A. McAdoo Wilson III, Mrs. Richard Hagar, Mrs. William J. Poole, Mrs. N. O. Newman, Miss Gertrude Askew and Mrs. Vergil Warren.

The Little Japanese and the Big Chinese

The large figure of the Chinese, in his typical Mandarin robe, represents big China with its population of 478,418,00. The figure is compared here with the small figure of a Japanese, who represents little Japan, with a population of 64,447,000. The small sketch of a Chinese peasant represents the strength of China as a military power. Notice how small the little Chinese is compared with the big Japanese, the bristling army officer, who represents the military strength of Japan.

By Whitley Noble

CALL a Japanese a Chinaman and start trouble. The Japanese have utter contempt for the Chinese.

On the other side of the question is the bland Chinese, with a background of thousands of years and a marked tendency to show annoyance at his little brown brother who has "gone western" only in the last seventy years. To the Chinese the Japanese are a foolish people with an overly developed lust for blood.

These opposing racial traits may be one of the underlying reasons why the Japanese and the Chinese always are at war or always seriously considering war on each other. Though widely dissimilar in character, the Japanese and Chinese curiously are very much alike in physical make-up, methods of thinking, and their mutual love of art. It may be that those characteristics go away back to antiquity, when the ancestors of the Japanese were also the ancestors of the Chinese. Only the Hwang hai and the Tung hai, two miniature seas, separate Japan and China on the map, but there is a hatred between the two nations that has stood ever since the Japanese Empress Jingo undertook the conquest of Corea in A. D. 200.

These two oriental peoples, who sprang largely from the same stock, have risen together from the dark ages frequently quarreling and often fighting each other. At times in their early history the Japanese were too busy with internal strife to think of China, and at other times, in a later period, they were so interested in suppressing Christianity that they passed up opportunities for trouble with their yellow brethren. But Japan was not the aggressor in every scrap. Strange as it may seem, the Chinese on more than one occasion attempted the conquest of Japan.

Today Japan is a closely knit little kingdom with a population of approximately 65,000,000. There are 18,000,000 more Japanese subjects in Corea, Formosa, and the island of Saghalien. Japan proper is densely populated. It is thoroughly imbued with occidental ideas. It is modern in almost every respect. It is militaristic, and strongly suspected of having dreams of a vast empire. It lacks many of the natural resources that China possesses, especially those of Manchuria. It could use the natural wealth of Manchuria to an advantage. It has heavy investments in China. Japan is a world power, with an efficient army and one of the strongest navies that sail the seven seas. Japan may feel that it is the natural guardian and protector of China against western exploitation. On the other hand, it may feel that the time is ripe to establish itself firmly in China for all time. The crisis in Manchuria and the flareup in Shanghai may develop into an international showdown.

Where Japan can be pictured as a mighty little fellow, China takes the form of a weak and flabby big fellow. China, with a population of more than 400,000,000, is a loosely connected nation, without even a stable government. The country has been racked by civil wars for more than a decade. Unscrupulous foreigners, many without national affiliations, have bargained with greedy Chinese generals for the spoils of war. The generals have pocketed gold, while their ignorant soldiers have fought and died for a few pieces of copper a day. The thunder of artillery and the staccato song of the machine gun have smothered all sounds of industry for years in the wretched land. The Chinese are not considered able soldiers, by the western measure, but they have carried on a program of human butchery among themselves for so long that even foreign intervention might be considered justifiable. There, again, Japan may consider itself the nation best entitled to intervene.

When Japan sent an army through Manchuria and swept the feeble Chinese opposition before it, the statesmen in Tokio said they did not seek the annexation of Manchuria. When the Japanese occupied Shanghai and bombarded Nanking the reason given was "the protection of the lives of Japanese citizens and the safeguarding of Japanese property. Japan, through all of the trouble, has said that it intends to withdraw its armies when China again is safe for Japanese and Japanese property. Disinterested observers of the situation in the east see in Japan's militaristic action a forerunner of the seizure of Manchuria and possibly some of China's chief ports by the Nipponese kingdom.

Other observers go so far as to say that Japanese forces are making war upon the Chinese because the latter are utterly helpless to defend themselves. China has been pictured by some as a colossal beast, brought to the point of complete paralysis by its own poisons, and now just waiting to be flayed and quartered. Japan is seen ready with the skinning knife.

Japan's first foreign war was the conquest of Corea in A. D. 200. In A. D. 663 a Nipponese fleet was annihilated by a Chinese fleet in a row over Corea. In the thirteenth century Khublai Khan, a Mongol ruler of China, tried twice to subdue Japan with an invading fleet and an army. A typhoon wiped out his great armada in 1281. In 1592 the great Taiko Hideyoshi, the "Napoleon of Japan," attempted the conquest of Corea, but the Chinese went to the aid of the Coreans and defeated the Japanese. Six years later the Japanese crushed the armies of China.

The American Commodore Perry opened ports of Japan to foreign commerce in 1854. In 1894 Japan and China went to war again over Corea. A Japanese fleet was victorious in the Yalu river battle, and the soldiers of Nippon took Port Arthur and Talienaun. Japan got Formosa and the Pescadores islands then. As the result of the Russo-Japanese war in 1904, which was a decisive military and naval triumph for Nippon, establishing it as a first class power, Japan got control of Corea, which it formally annexed in 1910.

What is a Hurricane?

How One of Nature's Great Destroyers Goes into Action

The Story of the Tropical Cyclone, Bete Noir of the Mariner, and Its Devastating Sweep Over Sea and Land

By Howard Barry

THE tranquillity of the tropics is broken from time to time by the rising of a hurricane, that agent of destruction which springs from the sea in the neighborhood of the West Indies and goes raging westward to devastate the Florida coast and the shores of the Gulf of Mexico. The stanchest ships in its path are shaken from stem to stern, and weaker ones frequently are overwhelmed by mountainous waves. Cities are transformed into ruins, and entire countrysides are scattered with the wreckage of farmhouses. People are crushed beneath the falling walls of buildings, and relief work is impeded by the destruction of lines of communication.

Three hundred sixteen hurricanes of various degrees of severity have occurred over a period of fifty years. Eighty-four have reached the coast of the United States, and sixteen of these were strong enough to do considerable damage. Since the earliest discoverers sailed to the West Indies and the islands of the Caribbean, mariners have feared these storms. Columbus once was caught in a hurricane and barely escaped with his life. Many similar disturbances were recorded in the logs of ships long before it became customary to keep systematic weather charts.

A meteorologist's picture of a hurricane. The arrows indicate wind direction, which is always counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere. Figures represent barometric readings and shaded areas indicate clouds. The low pressure area in the center is called the "eye." It is comparatively cloudless.

What the storm does to the forest. The scene was in the Ruhr district of Germany.

A graph showing the remarkable changes in temperature and air moisture during a hurricane. There is high temperature and low humidity in the cloudless, low pressure area at the center of the system and comparatively low temperature and high humidity in the surrounding high pressure area.

What is this terrific force with which man, in spite of all his ingenuity, still is unable adequately to cope? With the development of weather bureaus, more and more knowledge has been amassed, so that now it is possible to say what a hurricane is. But it never has been determined why a hurricane is; that is, what causes the condition which inevitably develops into one of these destructive storms.

A hurricane consists of an area of extremely low pressure surrounded by an area of much higher pressure. The winds, therefore, tend to blow toward the center, but are diverted by the earth's rotation so that they circle round the center counter-clockwise in the northern hemisphere. The whole system, which may be 50 or 100 miles in diameter, moves in a northwesterly direction until it reaches the mainland of the United States, where it turns north and later northeast, showing a general tendency to follow the coast.

The typhoon of the Pacific is essentially the same as the hurricane of the Atlantic. These storms usually originate in the neighborhood of the Philippines and sweep the coast of China.

Although the name hurricane, in its strict sense, originally was understood to mean a severe windstorm originating in the West Indies, popular usage now applies it to any tropical cyclone except one which occurs in the China sea. This still is called a typhoon.

The tornado, too, is essentially the same as a hurricane, consisting of a low pressure area surrounded by a high pressure area. It differs from a hurricane in two respects; it spreads over only a few hundred yards instead of many miles, and it originates over land, whereas the hurricane is oceanic.

The season for the true hurricanes of the West Indies runs from June to October. They never occur at other times of the year. Tropical storms as a rule are more violent than those of the more temperate region, the difference in pressure between the center and the surrounding area being more pronounced.

To understand winds in general (and a hurricane is just a wind of exceptional strength) it is necessary to understand the nature of air pressure. Air is something substantial; it has weight, which may be measured by the barometer. A glass tube sealed at one end is filled with mercury and then placed, open end downward, in a dish of the same liquid. On a calm day at sea level, the mercury in the tube will sink until it reaches a point about 30 inches above the level of the mercury in the dish. It will remain at this point because the pressure of the air upon the mercury in the dish is sufficient to balance the downward pressure of the column of mercury. Under these conditions there is said to be a pressure of 30 inches. At the top of a high mountain, where the air is less dense than that in lower altitudes, the mercury in the barometer would fall, because the weight of the air pressing against the mercury in the dish would be insufficient to balance the weight of the mercury in the tube. Suppose now that a barometer at Kansas City indicated an air pressure of 30 inches, and a barometer at Cincinnati a pressure of 28 inches. The tendency then would be for the air from the high pressure area near Kansas City to flow toward the low pressure area at Cincinnati, causing a wind in that direction. This wind would not be direct, however, because many other factors, notably the rotation of the earth, would tend to divert it.

If the pressure between two points varied greatly and they were not far distant from one another, the rush of air would be of such tremendous force that a tornado would result.

Every two or three years a particularly furious hurricane is unleashed in the tropical seas. One of these struck Belize, British Honduras, last September, demolishing the city and taking the lives of 1,200 inhabitants. Fire and pestilence added to the horrors of the disaster.

The worst hurricane ever known to have swept the Caribbean occurred in September, 1930. This great storm wiped out the ancient city of Santo Domingo and left the bodies of 4,000 dead scattered among the ruins. In many cases the houses were so completely demolished that scarcely a stone was left upon a stone.

A hurricane caused several deaths and did widespread property damage on the Florida coast in September, 1929. One of the worst inland storms which the United States has experienced struck Lorain, O., in 1924, killing 100 people.

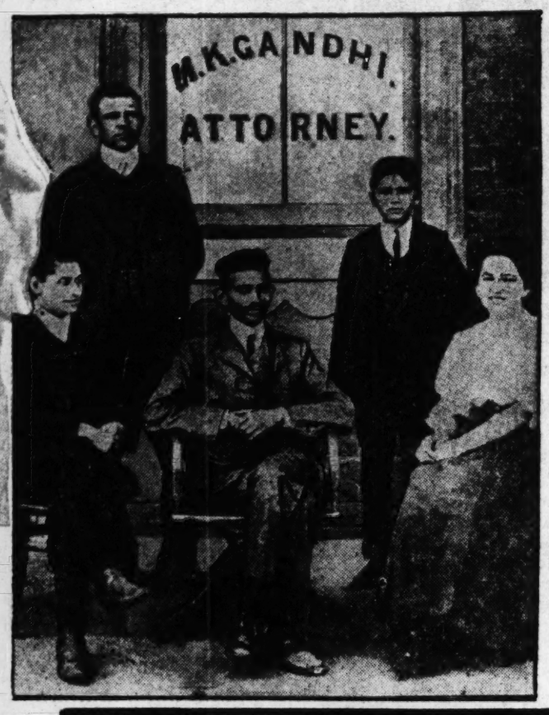

MAHATMA

The Decalogue of Gandhi

1. Truth.
2. Ahimsa, translated into English as love.
3. Brahmacharya or chastity.
4. Restraint of the palate, which Gandhi elaborates as eating for mere sustenance of the body, abstaining from intoxicating drinks and drugs.
5. Abstaining from the possession of things for themselves.
6. Adherence to life's law that one's bread must be earned by the sweat of one's brow.
7. Swadeshi, the belief that man's primary duty is to serve his neighbor.
8. Belief in the equality of all mankind.
9. Belief in the equality of all the great faiths of the world.
10. Fearlessness.

IN INDIA a grotesque wisp of a brown man called on his 350,000,000 people to boycott English goods; and in Lancashire, hive of the British cotton industry, hundreds of thousands of laborers were thrown out of work. A thousand of Lancashire's looms and millions of its spindles lie idle; it is a "devastated area" of one of history's strangest "wars." Such is the power of Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, the Mahatma—the "Great Soul."

Against the tanks, airplanes, and dreadnaughts of the puissant British empire, the leader of India's struggle for independence pits sheer human will. With only a spiritual arsenal of three weapons, non-cooperation, non-violence, and the boycott, does he fight his cause.

The boycott, especially, hits London in the solar plexus, the pocketbook. In the forefront of India's imports from Great Britain are cotton goods, and this rich trade is fast being lost. In 1930 cotton imports from England fell off a billion yards. If Gandhi attains his aims, every other import will be similarly lopped off.

What, then, would Gandhi's free India wear? Khaddar, cotton cloth from the native spinning wheel and loom. And what would it eat? Fruits, vegetables, and cereals raised by the sweat of the brow. And what would it do for such necessities as locomotives, chemical laboratories, automobiles, radios, vacuum cleaners, electric ice boxes, and grand pianos? It would have none of these.

What Gandhi is actually attempting, indeed—and the western world should mark it well—is to drive the machine age out of India, to restore ancient pastoral civilization; in his ideal state would remain only the spinning wheel and the plow, those emblems of his war for independence. To Gandhi, the machine is the unpardonable sin of the west.

Non-cooperation, like the boycott, has political and economic potentialities. It prescribes abstention from government and strikes against taxes. The third of Gandhi's weapons, however, non-violence, is a pure appeal to conscience; it imposes passive resistance to force, even so far as martyrdom, upon the Mahatma's followers.

India has been well schooled in submission. It felt the heel of Alexander, of Genghis Khan, of Tamerlane; of the Portuguese, the Dutch, the French. Then, in 1613, came the East India company, under the beneficent rule of which the peninsula was goaded into such berserk reprisals as the Sepoy mutiny of 1857-58, with such horrors as the massacre of Cawnpore.

The palmy days of "the company" are past. England put a stop to its civilizing activities by taking over the government. Indian blood, of course, still is spilled on occasion. In 1919, 500 rioting Indians were killed and 2,000 were wounded; even in 1932 demonstrators have been killed here and there. Armed persuasion of unarmed colonists, however, seems to be going out of fashion. The world may decide to be squeamish, and the home constituencies may not be inclined to approve. Gandhi's non-violence, therefore, might have surprising consequences.

What manner of man is this 93 pound mite who so audaciously tweaks the lion's tail? Physically, he is a joy forever to the caricaturist. Bald. Bespectacled. Almost toothless. Scrawny. When it's warm, there's nothing in his weekly wash but his loin cloths. But to look at him is not to know him; it is necessary to consider his personality and his past.

Sixty-two years ago Gandhi was born at Porbandar, in northwest India, of cultured, though not high caste, parents. At 13 he took a bride of the same age. Incompatible, he and his child wife adopted the relation of brother and sister after the birth of their fourth child. He went to England at 19 and studied law at the University of London, returning to India in 1891.

To this point the young attorney had been a conformist to British culture. Now came a momentous clash with the West. Called to South Africa in 1893 in connection with a lawsuit, he found the government there passing restrictive laws against his countrymen, whom it treated like the scum of the earth.

Gandhi eventually gave up law practice, coming to consider it immoral; placed himself at the head of the South African Hindu cause, and launched a twenty-year battle. Most important, he forged his new weapons of nonviolence and non-cooperation.

Hindus were jailed by the thousand. Gandhi himself was repeatedly beaten and imprisoned. In the end, however, he was victorious: in 1914 full rights of citizenship were restored to Asiatics. Nonviolence had triumphed over force. The Prince of Peace went home to India a national hero.

His Indian campaign of non-cooperation he opened in 1920. In 1922 he was sentenced to six years in prison; of this sentence, however, he was compelled to serve only two years. In 1930 came the famous march to the sea, for the making of illegal salt. The British salt tax created a monopoly on manufacture: the holy man's march, therefore, was a shrewd dramatization of civil disobedience. It made the Mahatma the idol of the masses; had he ordered them to march against the British, India would have run with blood from the Himalayas to the sea.

Last autumn Gandhi went to the round table conference on home rule in London, but "without illusions." His skepticism proved well founded; the conference was almost without result. One of the obstacles was failure of Hindus and Moslems to agree on cooperating between themselves in a new government; and that failure threw the spotlight upon one of the holy man's major problems. The support of India's 70,000,000 Mohammedans is important, perhaps vital, to Gandhi's campaign.

In January the Mahatma was thrown into prison again, along with disciples by the thousands. Women stepped into the vacant places of leadership. Most famous among these swaraj feminists are Mrs. Gandhi, also recently imprisoned; Sarojini Naidu, the poetess; and Madeline Slade, "Mirabai," the mahatma's handmaiden. "Mirabai," daughter of an English admiral, gave up name and fortune to follow the holy man.

During his struggle with the occident Gandhi found himself spiritually. He has become the spirit of India incarnate. He is a medieval mystic in a materialistic world. He has no worldly possessions. He leads a life of monastic asceticism. His diet is goat's milk, fruit, and nuts; for a Hindu to eat meat, of course, is sin. He observes one day of silence each week, believing, as a Hindu, that suppression of the physical senses leads to rapport with deity. He adopted the loin cloth, with a shawl in cold weather, to be like the hungry millions who are naked.

Theologically, the Great Soul is an eclectic. There is room in his system for Jesus, Buddha, and Mohammed, as well as Siva, Vishnu, and Brahma. He believes the Bible, the Koran, and the Zend-Avesta to be as divinely inspired as the Vedas. The Sermon on the Mount is said to have inspired his movement of nonviolence, as the teachings of Tolstoi became the basis for his doctrines of social reform.

Fundamentally, however, Gandhi's credo is Hinduistic. He believes in reincarnation, in the sacredness of the cow, in idol worship, and in caste. He wages a passionate crusade, nevertheless, for the emancipation of that outcast, the pariah.

Had he lived in the sixth century B. C., in the age of Gotama Buddha, the Mahatma could hardly have escaped deification. Even in this century, indeed, in the day of the newspaper, the radio, the telephone, he is regarded by some disciples as another Buddha, another Christ. Perhaps he will be elevated to godhood yet; in India's population of 350,000,000 there still are some 300,000,000 who can neither read nor write. To be a god, however, is not in Gandhi's program.

"I have no special revelations of God's will," he says; "I have no desire to found a sect."

Will Gandhi's crusade succeed? Time will tell. If it should fail, will he sanction violence against Great Britain? It is not impossible.

"If India must win its independence by violence," he has said, "let it be by that legalized violence called war."

But it is more likely that he will fight out the battle along the present line. Gandhi is in no hurry. If he does not free India this year, perhaps he will succeed ten years from now. Perhaps he will die before victory is won. Even so, he can come back to renew the battle in some reincarnation.

As Gandhi would appear in court dress. Had he worn such a costume when he was a guest of the king at tea during the round table conference, he would have been just another oriental sycophant, sartorially confessing the superiority of occidental culture. Who Can't Rhyme What?

ROB WAGNER'S "Script," a Hollywood weekly of snap and sparkle, carries an ear on its masthead, as follows:

The Script is as yet unable to pay for any magazine material and it cannot be responsible for mss. or drawings unless accompanied by return envelopes. It views all poetry with suspicion, especially that trying to rhyme California, oranges or Beverly Hills.

Hey—Rob. I'm with you on the oranges and Beverly Hills. But where do you get that California suspicion? Ten years ago I wrote a song, published by Jerome Remick, one of the first of the California crop, and the chorus, as I remember it, ran:

California, I wanna warn ya, that I'm coming back to you,
Back to the golden state, right through the Golden Gate,
I'll soon be there to breathe the air
Of beautiful flowers everywhere.
I sigh for your blue sky and your sunkissed palm-trees, too,
Tell all the sweet girls who adorn ya,
I wanna warn ya, California,
That I'm coming back to you.

And that rhymes better when it's sung than it does when it's read. So keep your oranges and Beverly Hills, but lay off California, gol dorn ya.

Au Revoir, Joe

Joe Zelli, owner of the most famous tourist cafe in Paris, limped up the gangplank of the Europa, which sailed off with Joe and a lot of busted illusions he had about Broadway. He can tell Montparnasse and the goggle-eyed world that he paid his share of the war debt, and no moratorium.

He bowed in with the Royal Box, an elegant speakeasy, but the dry agents couldn't parle vous Francais and they said it with axes. Joe shrugged and said he didn't know this prohibition thing was really serious, so he bought in on the 300 Club and didn't sell hooch; and New York nightclubs that don't sell play to $0.00. Joe found that out.

So he financed and produced "Papavert," an American version of a play which he has in Paris, and a hit there. It died standing up, punch-drunk from the critics' notices. But did Joe weaken? No: knowing Broadway mythology, Joe didn't realize that when a show passes out it stays that way. But he had it rewritten and reproduced, paid actors for rehearsals and lay-offs, paid for a lot of ads explaining, and reopened at the same house. Came the dawn and went "Papavert."

And Joe looked up the sailings and lammed for thence with a very bad Zelliache.

ELECTRA, HERSELF

Blanche Yurka, Star Tragedy Queen, Also Good Scout.

These Be Men!

Broadcasting with the glee club of the Uniformed Firemen's Association of Greater New York on a three-stations-in-three-hours microphone marathon, I had more kick out of a radio job than since I ran one on a short wave to Commander Byrd in Little America. When I was a kid I wanted to be a fireman. When I was a young reporter I covered fires in Chicago, a town what's GOT fires. And I never got over my rapt affection for these smoke-eating he-guys. I talk their line of talk and I like it.

We were making a flying campaign for the 8-hour 3-platoon system, and I'm for that. These underpaid, overworked, honest servants of the public don't ask an 8-hour day when anything is burning; they ask only that they shouldn't have to be on fire-house detail all hours of the day and night. They're entitled to reasonable time with their families, for recreation, reading, religious worship and rest. And an 8-hour day these days is no longer regarded as short. I remember in Chicago when I was fighting for a 12-hour 2-platoon firemen's day and City Hall thought I was fanatical.

Them's Pipes

Blanche Yurka, America's most illustrious tragedienne, with probably the most glorious speaking voice I have ever heard, has started tour in "Electra," the original Sophocles opus, not the one adorned with the becoming mourning. I sat through it and was thrilled by the hoary classic. It's swell theatre right today. And how that woman does do that part!

It is refreshing to dine with her, as I did after the matinee, and find her a bubbling spring of wit, colloquial and cheery, no lofty millinery and no elephantiasis of the cranium, if you get what I'm trying to register.

Idiosyncrazies—

In the radio studios male singers of heavy songs open their collars at the throat. When they perform before audiences they wear collars too large for them normally, to let the Adam's apple glub up and down freely.

Carl Boxer, a colored singer, is in the choir of a cathedral, a synagogue and the Rockefeller Riverside Church.

Gov. Olson of Minnesota, of Scandinavian viking stock, was raised in the ghetto of Minneapolis and speaks Yiddish fluently, even making public speeches in kosher mamma loschen. He should feel at home on Broadway or Hollywood Boul.

Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., through Larry Lynch, director of publicity, writes to say I made Annie Russell out to be 73 years old and that I was at least a decade off, and adds, "Almost no one passed his twenties likes to have his age exaggerated. This is particularly true of women, especially those of the theatre." The sexes are a bit scrambled and the "passed" is literatim as of either Larry or GB, his amanuensis. And from a college, too! Well, the sentiment is sound and I apologize to dear young Annie, bless her. And I just naturally like anybody who signs himself Larry. I sign myself Jack. I could make it Jacquin, as Who's Who does, and as my mother and teachers used to in the passed.

A stew in a nightclub pulled out a $100-bill and sent it to the crooner with a request for "My Gal Sal." It was a lot of dough and the warbler didn't know the words. So he phoned his wife and woke her up and got bawled out and she didn't know the lyrics, either. So he phoned his brother, who could only remember "a wild sort of devil but dead on the level." So he phoned another crooner, who could only get as far as "They call her frivolous Sal, a peculiar sort of a gal." So he pieced the two together and faked the rest of it and sang the chorus over and over and over, and pretty soon the stew sent up a $50-bill with a request that he stop singing stale old stuff and go into something fresh, like the Maine stein song.

Harry Spingold, head of the radio department of the big and powerful William Morris Agency on Broadway, has his own studio for tryouts. The performer works at a regulation mike and Spingold gets it by actual air transmission several rooms distant. I think this is unique.

Will Morrissey, Lambs Club clown, shoestring producer and famous liquor-upper, announces he has signed the six-months pledge in a church and written his confessions under title of "I Talk Too Much," meaning that when soused he up and said things. Will was overseas as head of an entertainment corps and has since then put on more real failures for less real money than any other showman in all history.

Charlie Winninger, the very veteran comic, in "Through the Years" interpolated (or, anyway, introduced) one of the swiftest gags of the season. Pointing to his white hair (natural) he starts "There may be snow on the mountains, but ——" I can't tell you the rest here. It's a wow!

Fresh caviar is billed in the stiffer Times Square chow palaces at $2.75 . . . Don't those sturgeons know there's a depression?

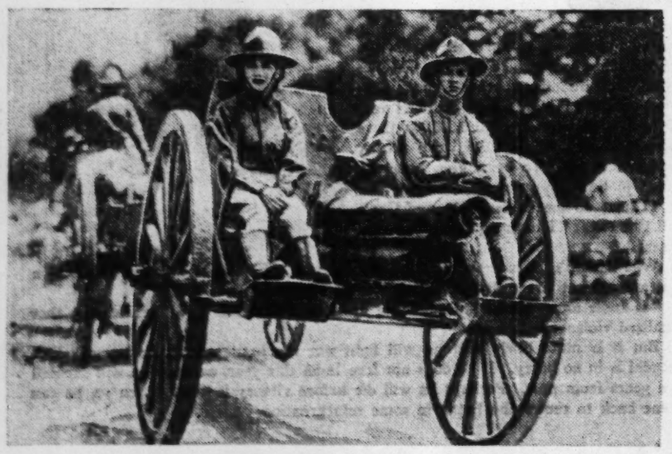

A reader writes me a four-page letter and puts on the P. S.—"Pardon the poor penmanship as I have a broken arm."

That's fan-mail!

Was Attractive Young Mrs. Albert K. Ross, Claimed Her Harassed Bridegroom, After She Had Drafted 47 Rules for His Personal Guidance.

She Gave Hubby 47 Rules for Life

And No Wonder He Said No

For 27 of Them Were About Money

"Let's Put Our Marriage On a Business Basis," but the Romance of Rebecca and Albert Cracked Under the Strain

IF you were a newlywed husband and your wife handed you forty-seven rules for your personal guidance, and you found that twenty-seven of them were all more or less snarled up with money matters, what would you do?

In the case of Albert K. Ross, young University of Pennsylvania student, this problem was particularly vexatious, since his marriage to the good-looking and clever Rebecca Roddy had promised well. But some of the regulations that the new Mrs. Ross decreed proved a little too much for Albert.

Result: a swift domestic crack-up, with annulment awarded the weeping bride and an expression of pained surprise on the groom's face.

If you, too, are young and married, or about to be married, yourself, you will be interested to hear on which rocks the Ross's ship of love was wrecked. Here are 27 of the stern decrees from the original 47.

That we will have no children for at least two years, and only when we have sufficient finances to properly support, rest and educate them.

That when our first child is born, you (Ross) will take out educational insurance for it and for each additional child.

That you will guarantee to so increase your salary that when you have reached the age of fifty you will be receiving an income of $10,000 a year.

That you will give me a certain percent of your salary each pay day for all household expenses, to be used by me as I see fit.

That you will not question my expenditures, provided that I keep within the limit of the percentage.

That these household expenses shall include food, clothing, all incidentals.

That you will pay the rent, gas and electric bills.

That whatever I save out of each percentage shall be saved for some piece of furniture, books, magazines, travels.

That we shall make a budget and that we will keep to that budget. the best of our ability.

That I shall receive from you a salary for fulfilling the duties of cook and housemaid.

That such shall be $2 a week.

That with every $5 increase in your salary my salary will be increased $2.

That my salary shall be mine to do with as I please.

That you will never demand an explanation as to how I use my salary.

That you shall receive for yourself an equal amount, to be used by yourself as you wish.

That I will never demand an explanation of you as to the use you make of your allowance.

That your allowance shall be used solely for those things which give you pleasure...

That my allowance shall be used in the same manner...

That you make me your sole beneficiary upon my resignation.

That you shall increase your life insurance $500 for every increase in salary you receive.

That I shall make you my sole beneficiary as soon as you have made me your sole beneficiary.

That whatever money I have saved from my teaching shall be mine to do with as I wish...

That should I give you such money such sum shall be regarded as a loan...

That you shall sign a note for such money.

That you shall put all furniture in my name...

That if either of us shall depart from these conditions we shall report the offender to a lawyer...

That such offense may be committed by you only three times...

This breathless catalogue of don'ts was compiled by the firm-faced bride in an effort, as she phrased it, to put the marriage "on a business basis."

But it didn't work out. There was an argument over insurance. Then more arguments over this and that. In September, 1931, Rebecca and Albert separated. The bride spent many nights in prayer for "a solution to our terrible dilemma."

"DO YOU SWEAR—?"

Above and at Right: Two of "The Papers" in the Ross Matrimonial Mix-Up.

HE REFUSED.

Did Solemn-Looking, Bespectacled Albert K. Ross (Above) to Acquiesce in Wifie's Demands That He Obey Her 27 Monetary Restrictions.

No solution was forthcoming, so Rebecca went to court with a plea that her marriage be annulled. Meanwhile her husband, too, had been praying for inspiration—which didn't prevent Rebecca from getting her decree.

Weeping, she exclaimed, "I am happy, but I believe in marriage." She added, "I'm not cynical and all this won't deter me from marrying again if I meet a man I love."

"Don't you think your wife loved you?" the master in chancery who tried the case asked Ross.

"She took vows at the altar to love and cherish me," was the answer. "She didn't live up to them."

Those 47 rules...

Her Eyes Hypnotize Frogs, Birds, Rabbits!

STUDENTS of mesmerism have always recognized that it's comparatively easy to hypnotize a human being, particularly if the subject offers willing co-operation.

But up-and-coming Jugoslavia has just proudly produced a real phenomenon in this line. She's a beautiful young society girl who, scientifically-minded, has mastered the trick of hypnotizing animals, even against their will!

Meet Mademoiselle Mady Sojka, at right, who moves in the loftiest strata of Belgrade bluebloods, but whose keen interest in medical and psychological topics has brought her to the attention of the leading scientists.

Mademoiselle Sojka first became attracted toward the study of hypnotism when she noticed that one of her pet rabbits fell into a deep, coma-like state if she gazed at him intently for five or ten minutes. At first she thought Bunny was ill, but upon awakening from his torpid slumber he seemed especially fit and refreshed.

So Mady continued her experiments upon other rabbits, and has now taken up the hynotizing of birds and even frogs. Note, in the photograph, the uncommon power, depth and luminousness of her magnetically compelling eyes. And if you gaze steadily at the picture for several minutes, you may find yourself getting slightly drowsy. Or maybe just the opposite.

Whatever your opinion, you can't deny that Mady is a very beautiful girl.

How the Archeologist Reconstructs the Past

The Basket and the Hoe His Tools as He Recovers the Glories of Great Ancient Civilizations

By John A. Menaugh

THERE are no more continents to discover. The whole world has been mapped and remapped, catalogued, and card indexed. The most remote spot, not excluding the polar regions, now is within comparatively easy travel distance by the fast-flying airplane. Where once the explorer faced heartbreaking hardships and grave and unknown dangers, the casual traveler now goes his way unmolested and in comfort. Romance and adventure have gone glimmering, and in their place has come science to carry on in a new field. That field might be called discovery, but a better term is recovery, for its objects have to do rather with the recovering of the old than the discovering of the new.

Man today knows more about the world of the ancients than men have known at any time in previous years or previous ages. Through the efforts of the archeologist the story of the long ago is being revealed daily. Ancient cities, undreamt of a century ago, are being laid bare to scientific study. Complete histories of civilizations of the dim past are being recorded through the work of men who have devoted their lives to the business of recovering the old world.

The archeologist is a scientist whose field is antiquity. His work begins where that of the paleontologist leaves off, though the interests of the two overlap considerably upon the border line. The field of the archeologist includes both the prehistoric and the historic, and he takes cognizance of all of ancient man and his works.

The antiquarian scholar of yesterday was a stay-at-home. He left the most important phase of the work of reconstructing the past to the haphazard methods of the untrained student, content with mere fragments of uncertain data. Today the real archeologist is many men in one. He must be capable of taking an active part in a field expedition. He must be a fairly efficient engineer, a photographer, a director of men, a translator of hieroglyphic or cuneiform inscriptions; and above all, he must be deeply interested in the tiniest of detail. What fifty years ago would have been regarded as a rubbish heap, during the excavation of an old temple or an old tomb, today must be sifted thoroughly. It is exacting investigation of this sort that has revealed many important links in the reconstruction of the ancient past. The present-day archeologist actually digs for what he finds.

The era of the modern archeologist began fifty or sixty years ago, all efforts toward serious and scientific study of the past before that time having been conducted along loose and inefficient lines. The last two decades have brought the richest finds and the most advanced study in archeology.

When the archeologist goes about his business he works from the surface down, rather than from the bottom up. Through translations of inscriptions on walls or tombs found at an earlier date he has a fairly definite knowledge of what he is going after. He knows, for instance, from previous studies by himself or by others that an ancient city, or temple, or tomb is located somewhere within the region he is exploring. Perhaps a mound upon an otherwise flat desert holds the key to his problem. Perhaps a river, or a lake, or a mountain pass indicates the possible location of his buried treasure. When he has exhausted all possible information upon the subject, through the study of earlier records, and has decided upon what is the most promising spot to begin digging, he sets to work. His field headquarters are established, sometimes merely a group of tents or shacks, sometimes an elaborate structure of permanence, with laboratories, libraries, offices, and workshops. He employs scores and possibly hundreds of native workmen to do the rough work. He may have to transport his building materials and supplies across deserts upon the backs of camels. He may be more fortunate in having motor trucks at his command, or may be within a short distance of a railroad, in which case his task is simplified. When actual digging begins he is the boss upon the job.

The most important tools of the archeologist on an expedition are the hoe and the basket in the hands of the native excavator. The hurry-up methods of the steam shovel or of even the pickax and the shovel would never do on such a delicate task as uncovering an ancient city. European or American laborers could easily ruin the best preserved of buried cities with their impatient way of digging. The native excavator, be he an Egyptian, Syrian, or Persian, knows the value of patience and is willing to scrape carefully with his hoe the sands which bury an ancient hidden wall. The dirt dug up with every movement of the hoe is carefully placed within a basket to be carried to some distant dumping ground. As the excavators get close to the object of their search, after the surface dirt is disposed of, every basketful of rubbish is sifted carefully for possible bits of relics of the past.

A captive balloon rising, with an electrically operated camera attached for taking photographs from the air of the excavations at Armageddon.

The archeologist's problems vary widely with the regions in which he works. In Upper Egypt, where rain falls but once every five years, the soil usually is light and loose, often being but drifted sand. In that region a cast-off boot will lie for centuries without deterioration, so it is easy to understand why the works of ancient man are so well preserved there. The mummies of the dead and even the garments worn by the Egyptians of thousands of years ago are found in splendidly preserved condition. In other regions of the world, where the archeologist labors, vastly different conditions are found. Where there is much rainfall and more rapid corrosion, the tombs of the dead and the houses of the ancients are in a more ruinous condition. Where the ravages of time and the work of the elements have flattened the ruins, the archeologist's work is of a delicate nature, indeed.

The scientific excavator knows the value of photography. Photographs are taken of all successive stages in the disinterment of an ancient burial or the deblaiement of an ancient building. Sometimes even line drawings are necessary to make clear the plans of an old city as they are laid bare. As objects of the past are taken from the ruins, expert handling is essential. Each object is carefully wrapped in cloths and crated, and many, before they can be set up as exhibits in museums, must be treated with chemicals to preserve them.

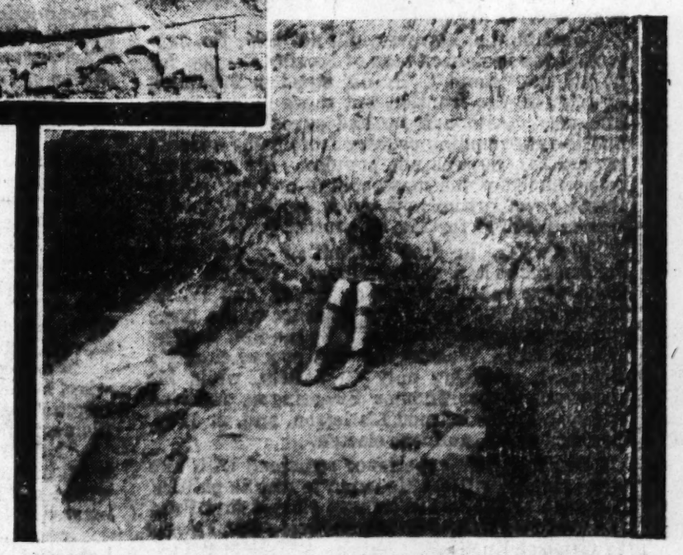

The greater part of the archeological work which is being carried on at the present time has as its scene of operation the Near East, that region which lies like a horseshoe around the eastern end of the Mediterranean. That territory has been chosen because it is the region in which the most highly developed civilizations of ancient times flourished.

City streets of Armageddon in the days of Solomon, as photographed from the captive balloon maintained by an Oriental institute expedition. The photograph was taken after excavators had laid bare the streets of the ancient city.

The Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, which was founded in 1919, is the leader in the field of archeological research in the Near East. Since its founding the institute has dispatched thirteen expeditions to Egypt and western Asia to excavate the ruins of ancient cities. Twelve of those expeditions still are actively engaged at sites of important centers of civilizations of the past. The institute maintains a prehistoric survey, which has been conducting field work along the banks of the Nile. The survey will be shifted to Asia Minor to continue its work. At Sakkara, the cemetery of old Memphis, near Cairo, excavations have been going on for some time. At Abydos, in Upper Egypt, the institute is carrying on a scientific study of the old Egyptian temples; and at Luxor, in the Valley of the Kings, where once stood ancient Thebes, other excavations are being made. In Palestine, at Megiddo, the site of the Biblical city of Armageddon is being cleared for study. The institute's Syrian expedition is preparing to attack a mound covering 35 acres, which lies halfway between Aleppo and Alexandretta. The mound, called Chatal Huyuk, is believed to contain remains of the Biblical city of Calneh. The mound of Alishar in Anatolia, which is being excavated, is expected to yield rich treasures which will throw much new light on the civilization of the ancient Hittites. At Khorsabad, near the modern Mosul, in Assyria, and also near the site of ancient Nineveh, excavations are going on. It was from this region that the great winged bull which adorned the palace of Sargon II. was recovered. The huge statue, weighing 40 tons, now is housed at the Chicago headquarters of the Oriental institute. The institute holds a concession from the Iraq government to excavate a group of four ancient mounds which lie about 50 miles north-northeast of Bagdad. At Tell Asmar, the most important of the mounds, a great palace of the Sumerian age has been found. The institute also has an expedition at work in Persia, and at other centers of old civilization in the Near East.

A huge square pit descends into the native rock 120 feet below the summit of the city mound, down which the women of King Solomon's time followed a winding staircase to the water at the bottom. This was the most extensive work of engineering in the time of the Hebrew kings.

In connection with the excavations on the site of ancient Armageddon and at other points, members of the Oriental institute's expeditions have taken a number of extraordinary photographs from the air through the use of captive balloons. The balloon, of the type used for meteorological observations, carries a camera, which is operated through an electric cable by a photographer on the ground. The balloon rises to a height of several hundred feet, permitting photography of wide expanses of city and surrounding country that could not be accomplished satisfactorily in any other manner.

DEFYING TIME

DURING the present nationwide observance of Washington's 200th anniversary, sponsored by the Government's Bicentennial Commission, much is being said about his qualities as a statesman. But the real story of his experiences in politics and statecraft is little known.

In the following article the author reveals the human side of our First President. It is presented against the background of his thrilling battles with unpopularity, disloyal associates and the intrigues of foreign governments. The story is based on documents, many of them hitherto unpublished, supplied by the commission.

BEHIND the years of glittering achievements are the years of drab plodding and preparation. The vision of George Washington that always rises before us at every mention of his name, is the Washington of later years, the Commander-in-Chief of the Revolutionary Army, the man who presided over the Constitutional Convention, the First President of the United States.

Most of us do not realize that even Washington had to pass through a period of small beginnings, of disappointments and defeats. Before the statesman was the politician, who had to "carry his district" like any small-town office holder of today.

In 1755 Washington confided to his brother, Jack, that he would like to run (or "stand" as they termed it then) as a candidate for the Virginia House of Burgesses. He asked his brother to interview prominent citizens, and added:

"Sound their pulse, without disclosing much of mine. If they seem inclinable to promote my interest, and things should be drawing to a crisis, you may declare my intention and beg their assistance. If, on the contrary, you find them more inclined to favor someone else, I would have the affair entirely dropped."

Washington, however, did not have the support of the important men of Fairfax County, for he did not "stand." He did stand in Frederick County, on the frontier, but there defeat faced him also. Although he had saved Winchester and the surrounding country from being overrun by Indians, he was not popular. He was held responsible for the massacres of outlying inhabitants. Authorities now agree, however, that it was impossible for him to protect these people.

Moreover, he had committed a far more serious crime in a political sense. Virginia elections were usually based on liquor, and Washington attacked "the great nuisance in the large number of tippling houses." So the first time he ran for office Washington was overwhelmingly defeated, receiving only 40 ballots, while his opponent, Capt. Thomas Swearingen, received 270 votes. He learned his lesson, and, in 1758, he stood again, and was elected.

But that first experience remained with him throughout his life. He came to dislike politics. So much so that when he was elected first President of the United States he wrote desparingly to General Knox:

"In confidence I tell you (with the world it would obtain little credit) that my movements to the chair of government will be accompanied by feelings not unlike those of a culprit who is going to his place of execution; so unwilling am I, in the evening of a life nearly consumed in public cares, to quit a peaceful abode for an ocean of difficulties."

His inauguration as First President was fraught with many delicate problems. High officials were baffled. Vice-President Adams solemnly asked the Senate: "The President, I suppose, will address Congress, but how shall I behave? How shall I receive him? Shall it be standing or sitting?"

Another great problem was how to address the President. The Senate finally decided to call him: "His Highness, the President of the United States and Protector of their Liberties." The House, however, objected to such a long prefix and rejected it, and the question was never settled.

Then, when the time came for the inauguration, there was further trouble. Just before the oath was administered it was discovered there was no Bible in Federal Hall. Happily Chancellor Livingston remembered there was one at St. John's Masonic Lodge, in the neighborhood, and a messenger was dispatched in great haste to secure it.

The first "White House" was the home of General Samuel Osgood, located in Cherry Street, where Franklin Square is now located in New York's downtown section. At that time, however, it was objected to by some as being too far out in the country. Eventually the President moved into the old McComb mansion on Broadway, a short distance below Trinity Church.

"FARMER" WASHINGTON

The expenses of the Presidential mansion were settled weekly. Upon the bills being presented the President would, in the words of his adopted son, "rate his steward soundly upon his expensiveness, saying that, while he wished to live conformably to his high station, liberally, nay, handsomely, he abhorred waste and extravagance."

Washington was by no means a rich man when he became President. In one letter, while negotiating to take over some land, he wrote Clement Biddle:

"I shall candidly declare that to pay money is out of the question with me—I have none, and would not if it was to be had, run into debt to borrow."

Indeed, financial circumstances made him impatient with the demands of his relatives. Writing about his niece, Harriet, to his sister, Mrs. Betty Lewis, Washington said:

"This much, I know, that she costs me enough . . . I shall continue to do for her what I have already done for seven years past, and that is to furnish her with such reasonable and proper necessaries as she may stand in need of, notwithstanding I have had both her brothers upon my hands, and I have been obliged to pay several hundred pounds out of my own pocket for their board, schooling and cloathing, &c., for more than the period aforementioned."

The mood reflected in this and other letters undoubtedly was the result of his trying problems as President. As I have said before, we usually think of Washington in relation to his triumphs, we overlook—or, perhaps, do not even know—the moments of his unpopularity. That is because, in our school days the history books proceeded on the false notion that Washington was a kind of super-human being, who could do no wrong, nor invite enmity.

MOTHER AND SON

Yet twice during his Presidential terms he was forced to act counter to the public sentiment. The first time was when a strenuous attempt was made by the French Minister to break through the neutrality proclaimed by Washington in the French-English crisis. The second occasion was his signing of the treaty of 1797 with Great Britain. This caused a popular outburst throughout the country. But in both instances Washington revealed his great courage by refusing to swerve from what he thought right. "These are unpleasant things," he exclaimed, "but they must be met with firmness."

Why is it that the history books thrust before us in our youth referred to Washington's courage only as it was revealed on the battlefield? Surely there is an even finer example of patriotism and courage in his defiance of popular prejudice in the field of statecraft. In the light of new correspondence, for instance, let us glance at his fight for the preservation of America's neutrality.

The French Revolution had started in 1789, and in 1793 France was at war with Prussia, Austria and England. On April 22 of that year Washington issued his famous proclamation of neutrality. But there was a strong element in this country that held we should go to war with England on the side of France. Washington said, "No!"

In Philadelphia, according to John Adams, "ten thousand people in the streets, day after day, threatened to drag Washington out of his house, and effect a revolution in the Government."

Matters became more involved when M. Genet, first Minister of the French Republic, popularly known as "Citizen Genet," arrived here, determined to undermine Washington's attitude. Without waiting until he should be presented to the President, he started propagandist operations among the French sympathizers. Enraged, the President demanded his recall.

But the people of the United States, for a time, seemed more in sympathy with Genet than Washington. Our President was being submitted to attacks from all sides. But even in the face of this wave of unpopularity he refused to waver in his determination not to be drawn into the Franco-British quarrel.

Sorrowful, almost desperate, he wrote a letter to Patrick Henry (October 9, 1795). It is the real forerunner of his Farewell Address. For obvious reasons, I must stress that it is being presented here because of its historical importance, NOT in relation to present-day political discussion.

"I persuade myself, Sir," he wrote, "it has not escaped your observation, that a crisis is approaching, that must, if it cannot be arrested, soon decide whether order and good government shall be preserved, or anarchy and confusion ensue. My ardent desire is, and my aim has been, to comply strictly with all our engagements, foreign and domestic, but to keep the United States free from political connexions with every other country, to see them independent of all and under the influence of none.

"In a word, I want an American character, that the powers of Europe may be convinced we act for ourselves, and not for others. This, in my judgment, is the only way to be respected abroad and happy at home."

All this time Washington faced further difficulties. His cabinet was overrun with personal jealousies and political ambitions. It has been said that in Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson, Henry Knox and Edmund Randolph, Washington showed great judgment in selecting statesmen. That is true, but he displayed less vision in picking friends.

Randolph later was to resign and criticise the President sharply, accusing him of "rank partisanship." Jefferson was also to resign and direct his attacks upon the President so vividly that Washington was forced to write him a sizzling letter. This is what he said:

"Until within the last year or two I had no conception that parties would, or even could, go the length I have been witness to; nor did I believe until today, that it was within the bounds of probability, hardly within those of possibility, that while I was using my utmost exertions to establish a national character of our own, independent, as far as our obligations and justice would permit . . . I should be accused of being the enemy of one nation and subject to the influence of another; and, to prove it, that every act of my administration would be tortured, and the grossest and most insidious misrepresentations of them be made, by giving one side only of a subject, and, too, in such exaggerated and indecent terms as could scarcely be applied to a Nero, a notorious defaulter, or even to a common pickpocket. But enough of this. I have already gone farther in the expression of my feelings than I intended."

Even Hamilton was ungrateful if not disloyal to Washington. The President had taken Hamilton from obscurity and made him famous. But the latter was never exactly true to his chief. After four years of staff service he resigned under circumstances he pledged himself to General Washington never to disclose. Then, in evident irritation, he told the cause.

Years later he revealed his contempt toward Washington. He was constantly antagonistic, spoke disparagingly of Washington's talents, and then penned this astonishing letter to a friend:

"I believe you know the place I held in the General's confidence and councils, which will make more extraordinary to you to learn that for three years past I have felt no friendship for him, and have professed none. The truth is, our dispositions are the opposite of each other, and the pride of my temper would not suffer me to profess what I did not feel.

"Indeed, when advances of this kind have been made to me on his part, they were received in a manner that showed at least that I had no desire to court them, and that I desired to stand rather on a footing of military confidence than of private attachment."

In time Washington's personal popularity silenced his enemies and political critics. But it is no wonder that he could not be persuaded to consider a third term as President. It was with relief that he turned back to Mt. Vernon. By this time many changes had taken place and the General was now one of the last of his generation.

Perhaps the best picture of home life at Mt. Vernon is given in a remarkable letter recently discovered by the Bicentennial Commission. It was written by a young girl from Philadelphia, who had been invited by Mrs. Washington to visit her. This is what she writes:

"I have just returned from a visit to Mount Vernon, and have been really quite delighted with the place and its inhabitants. They live in great style and with the utmost regularity. Breakfast is on the table at 7 o'clock, dinner at 3, tea at 7, and supper at 9. The hours before breakfast are spent in any manner most agreeable to the individual.

"After breakfast we work, read or attend to Miss Custis ,who plays most charmingly on the piano, until about 12 o'clock, when we dress for dinner. This is only the females of the family. The male part never make their appearance from the time of breakfast until dinner. The President employs his mornings in riding over the farm. He is one of the most charming men in the world, always in good spirits, and makes it his chief duty to render all around him as happy as possible. . . .

"But to conclude with the amusements of the day—after the ladies leave the drawing room we spend the hours until tea time in conversation, reading or writing as is most agreeable to us. After tea we walked until the dew began to fall, when we again turned our steps to the portico, which commands a most extensive view of the Potomac and the adjacent country. The prospect is most noble, indeed, and at the same time beautifully romantic. We sit in this delightful place admiring the scenery around, rendered more beautiful from the serenity of the evening. . ."

Thus, through the closing years of his life, Washington lived in contentment. Many friends from all parts of the country—and the world—visited him until he was forced to admit in a letter that his house was "a well resorted tavern."

But he was happy, as was Mrs. Washington. Both had spent 40 years of married life together, years of tenderness and devotion.

His very last days were spent by Washington looking over his great estates. A visitor who decided to go out to meet him was directed to look for "an old gentleman with a white hat and umbrella, riding alone on horseback."

He died as he had wished, for fifteen years before his death, he wrote:

"From the clangor of arms and the bustle of a camp, freed from the cares of public employment and the responsibility of office, I am now enjoying domestic ease under the shadow of my own vine and my own fig tree; and in a small villa, with the implements of husbandry and lambkins around me, I expect to glide gently down the stream of life till I am entombed in the dreary mansion of my fathers."

And now a nation turns two hundred years to the past to honor the memory of its greatest citizen, leader and builder. From February 22 to Thanksgiving Day every man woman and child will have an opportunity for a better understanding of the man and his achievements.

Under the auspices of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, a vast program is being carried out. A network of local committees, patriotic, military and civic organizations, schools and colleges, has been perfected to honor his memory. For every important holiday this year an appropriate program will be presented in virtually every community in the United States.

Unique in this celebration is the special Publicity Division of the Bicentennial Commission. Under the direction of E. P. Allen it is, in a very real newspaper sense, "rewriting" the story of Washington. Cooperating with the historians under Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, these men and women in the capital are helping all of us, whether we be writers, or students or casual readers, to find the human side of our history.

Another division has prepared special plays and playlets, motion pictures and slides showing the life and times of Washington. The educational division has inaugurated essay and oratorical contests for pupils in all the schools and colleges of the nation—the winners to be awarded with special medals.

All plans have been completed for cooperation with state commissions, city and town officials, churches, religious, literary, social, business and labor groups.

Out of all this should come a finer and clearer conception of Washington. Removed from the glacial isolation of detached heroism, rescued from the diatribes of the debunkers, he assumes a greater stature than ever before. Majestic, austere—and yet, withal, human—his memory defies the corroding influence of time.

THE END.

SECKATARY HAWKINS FAIR & SQUARE CLUB

"A QUITTER NEVER WINS—— ——A WINNER NEVER QUITS"

Seck Hawkins promised his old Chinese friend, Su Chow Ming, to help rescue Flower of the Sun, a Chinese girl who is being held by Su Chow's enemies until the valuable Emperor's Sword is given in exchange. The sword, however, has been sent back to its shrine in China. Hawkins recognizes Flower of the Sun at a feast of Chinese children, and later meets her while horseback riding, when she gives him a tiny pink rose. On the way home he is challenged to a pony race with Sadler, and the latter is captured by Su Chow's enemies, mistaken for Hawkins. The Emperor's Sword having been sent back to China, Su Chow Ming makes an imitation of it, which Hawkins delivers at the headquarters of the Fong Shu and rescues Flower of the Sun and Sadler. Jeckerson and his men, who had the place surrounded, capture everyone except the old Fong Shu.

WE BOYS held our club meeting as usual next day, and I had to tell them all about my exciting adventure of the night before, and how I had safely brought back Flower of the Sun to old Su Chow Ming and rescued my pal, Sadler of the Seventeen Pony Riders. After the meeting I chased them all out to play on the river bank, while I went back into my writing room to write the minutes of the meeting.

I had not been writing very long when in came three men—Jeckerson, Judge Granbery and the father of Sadler of the Seventeen.

"Two gentlemen to see you, Hawkins," said Jeckerson, as he shoved aside the curtains that hang in the doorway to my writing room.

"I think I see three gentlemen," I said, laying down my pen and smiling up at him. "You forgot to include yourself—"

"Who? Me? Oh, I'm only a detective!" Jeckerson laughed lightly as he shoved chairs up for the other two. "These gentlemen want a word with you, Seck."

"My boy," said Judge Granbery, after they had taken their seats, "I want to let you know how proud we citizens of this town are of you and your fair and square club, for adding another good deed to your record. I don't say that I didn't have my fears for you, when I learned what a dangerous mission a lad of your years had been sent upon, but somehow or other I felt certain that you would finish what you started out to do—"

"Thanks, Judge!" I exclaimed, with a laugh. "A quitter never wins, you know—and a winner never quits. And you, Mr. Sadler, you were great to have that much faith in me, when your boy was held prisoner by that gang—in my place—"

"I was not at all afraid," spoke up Mr. Sadler. "You see, I had known that my boy had had several adventures with you and your club. He seemed to know you so thoroughly, and trusted you implicity. It was that faith of his that made me feel certain that you would come back with my boy safe and sound—"

"I'm not so sure about that safe and sound part of it," I broke in. "He stood a lot of strain while he was a prisoner—"

"Yes, but Doctor Waters had him fixed up in no time. Why, he was out on his pony today, gathering up his sixteen pals, and stated that he would lead them down here to your clubhouse and thank you personally for what you did for him. And I thought I'd beat him here, and ask you to accept a reward, or a token, a purse of money that you might use as you see fit, or divide up among your club mates, as you—"

"No," I said, holding up my hand. "I cannot take it. My clubmates wouldn't want me to, either. Because your boy was captured while in my company, and mistaken for me, and suffered all those dreary hours of imprisonment for no fault of his own. It was only fair and square that I should do as I did—"

There came a sudden sound out in the meeting room. Strange voices in a strange language—then more footsteps, and we all got up and went to the curtained doorway. In the meeting room stood a number of Chinamen. Good old Su Chow Ming stood at their head.

"Greeting, honorable Hawkins!" came his lovable old voice. "Last visit to trouble you at this clubhouse on river bank. Soon go back to Mother China across far sea. But first perform duty imposed upon my humble self by great mandarin Chan Wu Hung, father of delightful Yat Kwong Fah, Flower of the Sun, recently restored to us by you. He send to me this most precious garland of famous gems, with instruction to place same around neck of one who restore to him his daughter from hands of enemies."

He took from a hidden pocket in the folds of his sleeve a rosary of large stones, an even dozen on a double strand of waxed string, and hung them upon my shoulders.

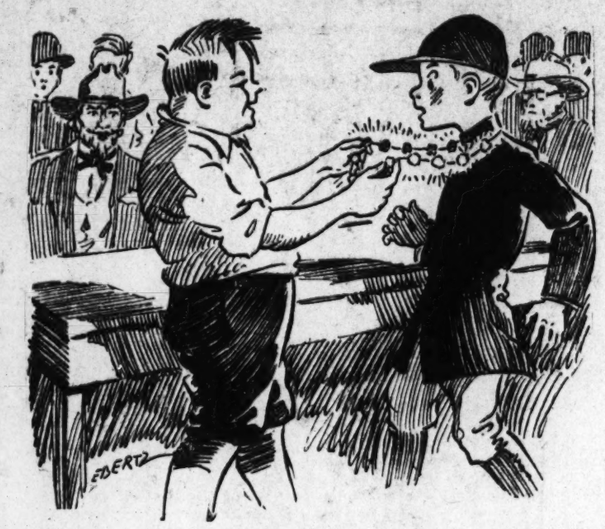

"And now," said Su Chow, "my duty here is done. China needs me in its hour of need. I go hence tonight upon steamer. Honorable Jeckerson have accepted commission to come with me and aid in work. We follow commands. It was good fortune to meet such fat boy who write in clubhouse on river bank. Maybe some day we meet again. The blessings of your noble ancestors descend upon you. Su Chow Ming says farewell."

He took both my hands in his, and looked down into my eyes for a moment. Then he pressed me close to his fat sides and whispered, "Remember always, never fail friend. It is magic password to happiness."

Then he turned away and walked swiftly through the lines of Chinese, and out the door. His followers turned and went out behind him, closing the door, and we were alone!

"Great purple amethysts!" exclaimed Mr. Sadler, as he and Judge Granbery gazed at the strange necklace about my shoulders. "I've been trying to buy a set of them for my wife for years—this is the first time I've seen any in 20 years—"

But I wasn't interested in amethysts or anything else at that time. I took off the necklace and laid it down on the table, where Mr. Sadler and Judge Granbery bent over it, while I looked up at

"They are yours, now," I said.

Jeckerson with a sad frown, and then walked dejectedly back into my writing room. He followed me. We were alone.

"Well," he said, "you ought to be happy after that. What makes you look so downhearted now?"

I turned upon him slowly, and looked up into his eyes. And then I saw something in Jeckerson that I had never known before. His eyes told me, now, that he thought more of me than I had ever imagined a man could think of a boy other than a son. For the first time in my life I saw a bit of moisture in Jeckerson's eyes—but his face was smiling!

"So you're going?" I said. "Su Chow Ming was right about that, wasn't he?"

"He's always right," said Jeckerson, nodding. "My work here is through, Hawkins. I've got a big chance over there, with Su Chow. I'm growing old—the money I will make on this commission will be enough to take care of me in my old days—and I'm all alone in the world, you know—no one to care about me, you see—but Su Chow needs me. We are going to follow the trail of Fong Shu, until we find him."

I gazed out of the window for a moment. I caught sight of a line of pony riders coming down the river path.

"I'm going to miss you," I said softly. "You've been a great guy, Jeckerson—to me, you have! You've taken me on many adventures since I've met you, and you've always had enough trust in me even though I'm only a kid. Now it won't seem the same—when you're gone—away off there in China!"

He came over and laid his hand upon my shoulder.

"Kid," he said, and his voice was husky, "you've been a great guy to me, too! I'll never forget you! Why, I'll brag about you to every American I meet over there—and I'll miss you, too. We've been great pals, you and I, and you've helped me out on many occasions where older heads would have failed me. But maybe I'll come back some day. China is in a seething caldron right now—Su Chow needs me. And I like the lovable old Chinaman so much that I think I'd go with him even if there wasn't any pot of gold at the end of this rainbow. Turn around. Now, look me in the eyes!"

He jerked my shoulders around, and I looked up at him. For a moment he smiled down at me, and then he said:

"Nothing in the world could keep us apart, Seck—some day we will be together again."

* * * *

There came a clatter of hoofbeats, and loud "Whoa! Whoa!" from many throats, and we both ran out into the meeting room. Judge Granbery and Mr. Sadler had the door open, and upon the porch were coming Sadler and some of his pony riders, while others held the ponies in a semi-circle in front of our clubhouse. Our boys, attracted by the pony riders, had come up from their play, and were now crowding around.

"Hello, Seck," old pal!" cried Sadler of the Seventeen as he ran forward and took my hand. "I just brought the gang around to thank you for all you've done for me—"

"I ought to be the one to do the thanking, Sad," I said, with a grin, as I shook his hand. "Come inside, and let's hold a meeting."

We crowded them all into the clubhouse, seating as many of our visitors as possible, our own boys lining up along the wall on either side.

"I've asked Hawkins to accept a reward for your rescue," said Mr. Sadler to his son, "but he won't accept. But see here, son, what the old Chinaman brought him, for restoring the little Flower of the Sun girl."

"Gee, dad!" exclaimed Sadler, as he bent over and looked at the large amethysts. "That's what we were trying to buy for mother in Hongkong last summer!"

I stepped up and took the beads. Sadler of the Seventeen looked up, a curious expression on his handsome face. I placed the large rosary over his head and it rested upon his sholders.

"They are yours, now," I said, "for what you had to suffer for me when you were captured in my stead by my enemies!"

"Oh, no, hey!" shouted Sadler, as he quickly lifted the string of gems from his neck and brought them over his head, holding them out to me. "I wouldn't think of such a thing! It wasn't your fault I was captured by mistake for you—"

"In a way it was," I put in. "And if you don't want the things—those amethysts or whatever you call 'em—give them to your mother and tell her you earned them—for her! She'll like that—mothers always do—coming from a son, you know, Sadler—you know how it is—mothers are funny that way—"

"Only on one condition!" exclaimed Sadler, suddenly. "I've always wanted you and your club boys to have ponies, like my gang. My dad will give you a pony for every stone in this string—won't you, dad?"

"I should think each stone would be worth about two ponies—" began Mr. Sadler.

"We only need ten now," spoke up Jerry Moore, our toughest and roughest member, "and us boys sure will be glad to get 'em—"

"No, we will need 12 by summer," spoke up our captain, Dick Ferris, "when the twins come back from their fancy school in Massachusstts."

"Then that is settled!" announced Mr. Sadler. "Twelve ponies for 12 valuable amethysts. Hawkins, you and your boys come up to our stables and take your choice of the ponies before we supply the summer parks."

"Yeah, but—" interrupted Dick Ferris, "but ponies have to eat. Who'll pay for that, and what will we have for a stable?"

"My boy," spoke up Judge Granbery, "the money your fair and square club has earned in rewards for doing good deeds for those who needed you has grown sufficiently to take care of that. Furthermore, I'm sure Roy Dobel's daddy has a barn big enough, and plenty of surplus hay to let you kids enjoy what will please you most. All right, Mr. Sadler, the deal is closed! It's a generous gesture on your part, but I'm free to tell you I'm mighty glad you've helped to make the fair and square club happy! Let the boys have the ponies. I'll see to it that they are taken care of!"

The judge got a grand hooray from all the kids, then—not only our club, but Sadler's Seventeen, too. From now on, there would be two sets of pony riders, one riding down from the mouth of the river where Watertown lay with all its wharves and skyscrapers, one riding over the ridge of hills that bordered the right bank of the old river where our clubhouse stood.

I felt strangely alone after they had gone. And now my thoughts went swiftly to my good old friend, Doctor Waters. It was he who had befriended us boys when we first started the club—it was he who had fitted up our clubhouse—in fact, he had been a patron saint to us. We had neglected him lately—because of the turn of our adventures—but now I went to him and told him how lonely I was—and how I was going to need him. And poor old Doc—the best kind of a man a boy could ever know—and he without wife or child of his own—he seemed to understand.

That night he drove me in his little old rattletrap of a car to the great docks at Watertown. I was to say goodbye to Jeckerson before he sailed on his first leg of the journey to a far, far land. And it was Jeckerson who thought of it, I suppose; for, after I had left him and he had gone to his stateroom on the steamer, and I was walking toward the gangplank where Doc Waters waited, I heard the soft pattering of wooden clogs, and I turned to see a beautiful little fairy running toward me—

"Honorable Hawkins! Wait! Wait! It is I, Yat Kwong Fah—"

Yat Kwong Fah! Yes, it was she—Flower of the Sun! The little Chinese girl whom we had rescued—Jeckerson and I—from the clutches of her father's enemies. Almost breathlessly she ran up to me, where I waited—

"O Fat Boy Who Sings of Swans Upon River," she whispered, as she reached up and laid her hands upon the lapels of my checkered jacket, "I never forget you—how kind you were—to save me from Wu Fong—even though I seem to trick you into enemy's hands—"

"Let go," I said, in a low voice, "the boat is about to leave—"

"Honorable Hawkins," she was speaking rapidly, "I shall tell my honorable father how brave are boys in America—I shall pray the blessing of your noble ancestors—fall upon your head—"

"Let go!" I said. "There! It's the whistle—the boat is ready to go!"

The deep siren of the steamer drowned out my words. Before the grip on my lapels was loosened she raised herself upon her tippytoes—I felt the soft brushing of her lips across my cheek—one simple kiss—and then she was gone, running back along the deck. I hurried to the gangplank while another blast of the ship's siren spurred me into the arms of faithful Doc Waters.

DID YOU GET YOUR SCRAP BOOK?

The second edition of the Seckatary Hawkins Scrap Book is now off the press. Bring 10 cents or send 15 cents to The Constitution office for your copy, in which to paste the daily strips of Our Club's Adventures.

Last week's password was a difficult one, although most of our members like to perform difficult feats, and kept at it until they found the word "Popocatepetl," which is a smoking mountain in Mexico.

This week we have one that should be easy for all. Here it is:

BORONNIS SCOURE

To start you off, think of a book that almost every boy and girl has read or should read. It is the title of a story, also the name of the man about whom the story relates. That should be enough to help you work it out. Just rearrange the letters in their proper places, and it will not take you long to discover what it spells.

WHAT THE SECKATARY HAWKINS BOYS AND GIRLS ARE DOING

Dear Pen Pals:

It doesn't seem possible that winter is over and spring is just around the corner, does it? I think that March is an awfully interesting month; it isn't really winter, and it isn't really spring, and it's so chuck full of changeable weather that it's almost like reading a book to watch the different sorts of days that it gives us. But no matter what kind of a day it happens to be, there are always those March winds that have that hint of springtime in them! Our subject this week is going to be about "March Winds." It may seem a little difficult, but just try and remember something that March winds may have done to you. Maybe it wasn't a harsh wind that you want to write about, but a nice mild wind that came in very handy when you flew kites or took a sail on the lake, or went rollerskating and pushed you gently down the street. Whatever your own personal experience with a March wind may be, there's no denying the fact that it brings to all of us the same message. It's the first attempt of old Mother Nature to rouse us and tell us that spring is just over the next hill, and that we must get out and enjoy these earliest warm days. It's the advance messenger, the sturdy fellow who chases winter away for another year.

And now for our regular meeting, which we open with a communication from an Ohio pen pal:

Dear Seck:

Long, so long have I watched the paper to see the good results the other members of our club get. So I finally decided to write a letter to you, and with all my might I wish you would send one of your interesting books.

Even though this letter is not worth reading, I will persevere until you make up your mind. I sit around day by day and read the Seckatary Hawkins section of the paper, and wonder if I'll ever be as lucky as the other members are. Indeed, they must be interesting, or the others wouldn't be writing so often. Here's hoping I win a book.

Yours, fair and square,
EVA LAURICE ABRAHAM, 13,
3101 Scoville Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

The next letter comes from a pen pal down in dear old Georgia, who is in her first year at high school and enjoys being a "freshman":

Dear Seck:

I guess you'll be surprised to hear from someone that hasn't written in quite a while. I have just finished reading your page and decided I would sit down and write you a nice, long letter.

It has been like summer here quite a while, and is just now turning a bit cold.

Seck, this is my first year in high school, and I enjoy being a "freshman," although I am teased frequently, but I do not mind that.

What is your favorite hobby? Mine is reading, although I have none of your books nor have never read one. I sure do hope I will be lucky enough to win one of your interesting books, and, Seck, tell all the club members to write me, and I'll promise I will answer every letter I receive.

Yours, fair and square,
CLESSIE SAYLORS, 15,
Douglasville, Ga.

One of our pen pals in Michigan wins a book of our earlier adventures with the following letter which tells in verse about some of the important events in the month of February:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins—This is the first time I have written,
But with that writing-bug just now it seems I have been bitten.
And now I'd like to tell you some events of February—
There are several quite important ones, and one that's gay and merry,
By this, of course, you understand, I mean St. Valentine's Day,
For this brings fond remembrances and many parties gay.
But there are many other dates that we should bear in mind—
Birthdays of Lincoln and Washington are among the ones we find.
Some battles of the Civil War and of the World War, too,
Took place in February, now see if it's not true.
Gold was found in California on a February day,
Though many years since then have past, for so our histories say.
In the harbor of Havana was sunk the battleship Maine,
In February '98 many sailors died in vain,
A treaty of peace with Mexico, and Florida purchased from Spain;
And this will end my story, though there's others I could name,
I'd like to be a member of your club, "the Fair and Square,"
But our paper has no entry blanks to help me get in there.
And now I bid you all adieu, and luck to you I wish again.
My name is Betty Johnston, and I live in Michigan.

BETTY JANE JOHNSTON, 12,
44 W. Kirgman Ave., Battle Creek, Mich.

Illinois is heard from next, and this pen pal is one who works hard for the club and sent in four new members:

Dear Seck:

I have just finished reading. I read your page in the paper every week. It sure is interesting. I hope I win a book with this letter, because I cannot find any more good books in the library at school. I think your books are very interesting.

I have gotten four new members for the club. I gave them each a membership blank, and they sent them in with a letter and a two-cent stamp.

Well, Seck, as I cannot think of any more to write, and I have some geography to do, I will close.

Yours, fair and square,
VIOLA M. SPENCE, 13,
Colona, Ill.

And now we must close again till next week, with the hope that you will all find our subject this week a very interesting one. If you are not yet a member, sit down at once and fill out the membership blank, and then write your letter or story or poem about "March Winds"—or make a drawing if you prefer. Remember, this is good practice for you; you not only stand a chance of winning a book of our club's earlier adventures down on the old river bank, but you also add to your experience.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square.

Seckatary Hawkins

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

Write on one side of paper only. Make your letter interesting to other pen pals who may see it in print, as well as Seckatary Hawkins. Limit it to not more than two hundred words. Try for good penmanship and correct punctuation. Your age must be given, as well as your full address. Above all, write plainly. Address all letters to Seckatary Hawkins, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

PRIZE WILL BE SECKATARY HAWKINS BOOK

Today's Prize

Dear Seck:

When I grow up, unlike most girls, I expect to live out west and own a ranch. I like music and play the piano and it is among my highest ambitions to be a musician.

Most all girls love music but they do not like the idea of living on a ranch and having lots of cattle and horses. I am a lover of dogs and expect to have lots of dogs also. I do hope this will come true, 'cause I just love that kind of life.

Yours, fair and square,
KATHERINE WEATHERLY, 14,
Mountain City, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have a story book that I won in school. The name of it is "Angela Goes to School." It surely is a good story, but not as good as yours. I read your stories in the paper daily. Tell your pen pals to write to me and I will answer.

Well Seck, I wish you and your pen pals good luck.

Yours, fair and square,
MISS GLADYS PINION,
Route 7, Cumming, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I guess you will go to school until May. Our school will close in March.

Seck, I live down on the river. In the summer I fish. I wish some of you fellows would come down sometimes. The 22d is going to be a big time with me.

Yours truly,
WALLACE PRATHER,
River View, Ala.

Dear Seck:

This is my third letter, but it hasn't won a book, so I'll try a verse this time:
Dear Seck, I've tried and tried,
And writing has made me tired,
This verse a book I hope will win,
If not I'll try and try again.

No. 2 is a prayer to win a book,
And through the papers I'll look and look,
It seems as if I soon will cry,
But no, I'll try, and try, and try.

No. 3 is of my hobbies, for I have four.
Writing letters, sewing, boatriding and swinging to and fro.
And now I'll close, good-bye I'll say,
And may your club live many a day.

Forever, fair and square,
GLADYS MARIE HARRISON,
605 Hamilton St., LaGrange, Ga.

Dear Seck:

A boy writes a letter to Seck Hawkins. He mails it and comes home. Next Sunday he rushes to the paper. Yep, here's Seck Hawkins' page, hope I won a book. Nope, my letter isn't there. I'll write once more, maybe I'll get my letter in this time. Next Sunday the same thing happens and the boy says he'll write just one more time. He is disappointed again, but he writes once more, hoping he will get a book. This time he hopes he won't be disappointed. He wants other boys to write him, too. And he needs a book.

Yours, a pen pal,
ROBERT S. COBY,
Frostproof, Fla.

Dear Seck:

I have a cat which is very sweet, he won't scratch. I have had other pets, too. I just mention this because in Saturday's paper you said every girl and boy has a pet.

I am 13 years old. Will be 14 in August. I am 5 feet 1 inch tall, blue eyes, blond hair and weigh 88 pounds. Oh! I forgot, I'm ugly.

I am a freshman in high school, on the basketball team, member of Glee Club, member of Dramatic Club, like outdoor sports, like to read and don't like to get my lessons.

I like your motto, colors and story. I read the letters and story Sundays.

Yours, fair and square,
CATHERINE O'BRYAN,
[illegible], N. C.

Dear Seck:

I am going to tell you about my favorite pet. It is a horse. When I go to the country every summer to spend my vacation, the most enjoyment I have is with my pet horse, Bob. He gallops up and down the pasture with me on his back. He is brown and white and his tail is long and wavy.

Yours, fair and square,
FREDERICK LAY, 12,
263 Mildred St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Well here comes one of your old Terheel members. I'm trying to get a book. My sister, Jennie Sewell Marks, got honorable mention, but I want higher than that!

Gee! but do we have good old times at school! We had a debate on "Slavery." The negative side won, but I can try again as you say "a quitter never wins and a winner never quits."

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY W. MARKS,
Tillery, N. C.

Dear Seck:

I am 4 feet 8 inches tall, blue eyes, light brown hair, my age is 12 years, and I weigh 90 pounds. My birthday is May 10, and my skin is fair.

Yours, fair and square,
FORREST WILLIS,
Route 2, Box 3, Sharpsburg, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am 9 years old and am in the fourth grade. I want to tell you about my trip to Atlanta. One Monday morning my uncle, father and mother decided to go to Atlanta, so we went to Grant park and saw all the animals, then to the greenhouse and saw all the beautiful flowers. Then it was time for lunch. When we had finished eating it was time to come home.

Yours, fair and square,
CLYDE RICHARD JR.,
Chatsworth, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Will you admit a farmerette to join your happy club? I surely hope so for I've been an admirer a long time.

First, I'll tell you how I look. I am 12 years old and have blue eyes and brown hair. There! Now I hope you all will like me.

I attend May Public school every day and I am in the fifth grade. I enjoy my work lots and am studying hard so that I may get promoted this year.

Yours, fair and square,
GEORGIE COSON,
Route 5, Dallas, Ga.

Dear Seck:

This is the month of February, and February is a month for great men as George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

Well, Seck, I read that you wanted all of your pen pals to write you and tell you what they would like to grow up and be when they are grown. I would like to be a mail carrier. I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade. I go to school at Longstreet Junior High school. Hoping to hear from all of your club members very soon.

Yours, fair and square,
LEURETTE PUCKETT,
[illegible], Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have been thinking a long time I would write you, for I enjoy your club very much.

I go to May Public school every day, and I like it very much. I am in the fifth grade and am studying hard and hope I'll get promoted this year.

I have blue eyes and blond hair and am 11 years old. Have I a twin? I hope so, and if I have please write me.

Yours, fair and square,
AUDIE HITCHCOCK,
R. F. D. 3, Dallas, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I'm a enthusiastic reader of your thrilling adventures down on the old river bank, in both the daily and Sunday paper.

Seck, I think your slogan and motto are O. K. I'm a 15-year-old Virginia girl with dark brown hair, gray eyes, a medium complexion, am 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 118 pounds.

For my pets, I have six cats and one dog. My dog's name is "Queen." She will go after the cows and play ball with me.

I am learning to play the guitar, but not making much headway, but a quitter never wins and a winner never quits.

Yours, fair and square,
GERTRUDE MEVENER,
Box 39, R. F. D. 1, Hightower, Va.

Dear Seck:

I should like to join the fair and square club. I have read all of the letters and should like to get one of your books. I am a little boy almost 10 years old and in the sixth grade at Olympia Grammar school.

I am 3 feet in height and weigh about 81 pounds. I have red hair, blue eyes and, of course, I am freckled faced. My favorite pastime is reading and playing. I have read almost all of the Jerry Todd books. I like mystery stories, too.

One of my pets has just died and I cried very much. He was a big brown and white dog, a mixtures of Collie and German police. His name was Andy and he was about two years old, and was a fine pal. His twin, Amos, died last winter.

Yours truly,
HARBERT BENNETT,
905 Fifth St., Columbia, S. C.

Dear Seck:

I am taking military at R. E. Lee Institute of this city. It has always been my wish to become a great military leader. Father says when I finish high school he is going to try to get me in at West Point Military Academy in New York, so, of course, I am going to try hard.

I have been through Fort Marion, at St. Augustine, Fla. They have stuffed birds, bones of people, bird eggs, animal skins, armor, and all sorts of things. They also had a wishing fireplace. It was very interesting there.

My favorite hobby is reading. I could read all day. I like your motto, "Fair and Square," and your colors, red and white.

Dear Seck:

I can't help but think how your club fits in the life of one of our famous presidents, George Washington. He was like your club motto, "Fair and Square." If it hadn't been for his fairness how far do you think he would have gotten toward being the Father of our County?

If a man or boy wants me for a friend he must play fair and square at all times.

Yours, fair and square,
W. A. HUSTON,
R. F. D. 1, Lilburn, Ga.

Hints For Flower and Vegetable Gardeners

BY W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

THE reasoning that is going on in the minds of the many new converts to vegetable gardening this year is very sound. In most cases there is some ground that is available in the background or side yard that is serving no productive purpose. With only a minimum of time and labor this plot may be put into service and from it there may be secured fresh, crisp, delicious vegetables for the table. After this garden is once in operation there comes a feeling of security regardless of what might happn.

Too, there is considerable economy in raising one's own vegetables. There is practically no cost involved. The only tools necessary are a rake, a hoe, and one good back. A handful of seeds, a bit of fertilizer, a prayer for rain on the right days, and all there remains to do is pick and eat the vegetables.

There is a natural longing for working in the soil and making things grow that has been handed down to us through the ages until we often call it instinctive. In most cases our fathers and forefathers were all tillers of the soil.

Regardless of the reason behind this desire to have a vegetable garden, there is this desire and it must be satisfied.

The problem that confronts us is this: "What can be done now to begin a good, successful, early vegetable garden?" The very first time that the ground is dry enough to plow there are any number of vegetables that may be planted. Irish potatoes, onion sets, beets, carrots, all kinds of greens, such as spinach, rape, mustard, kale and Swiss chard, radishes, lettuce, asparagus roots, Bermuda onion plants, cabbage plants, English peas, all may be planted and the sooner planted the better.

ENGLISH PEAS.

Now is the time to plant the tall growing, heavy-bearing varieties of English peas, such as Thomas Laxton and Telephone. The favorite variety is Telephone, which is a fairly large wrinkled variety. To save considerable work in staking, it is well to plant English peas in double rows about 18 or 20 inches apart so that you use one to support the other. If you will keep the soil worked up around the stems they will bear much longer.

RADISHES.

One of the favorite early spring vegetables is the old-fashioned radish. There are several different types that should be found in every garden. The little, round, red radish with white bottom is Rosy Gem, probably the best and most popular all-around early radish. Similar in quality and shape, but solid red in color is Scarlet Button. The other small variety of radish is Early Scarlet Globe. The long variety illustrated is White Icicle, and this may also be had in a red radish.

All radishes depend for their crispness and delicacy of flavoring on steady, rapid growth during cool weather and to insure this proper growth plant them in mellow, rich soil, which has been heavily fertilized with 12-4-4 or some other well-balanced commercial fertilizer.

BEETS AND CARROTS.

Companion plants to radishes are beets and carrots. They also require a rich, loamy soil and should be grown rapidly to insure the proper texture of the flesh. Be sure that the ground is mellow so that the roots will be well shaped.

The two most popular varieties of beets are Early Wonder, Improved Blood Turnip or Detroit Dark Red. These are both well-shaped, real early varieties.

Carrots may be had in a number of different shapes, from the very solid, almost round Oxheart to the very long orange variety called Improved Long Orange. However, the favorite variety for table use is the Chantenay, a half long, blunt, well-shaped variety.

For a continuation of these delicious vegetables from our garden replant every 10 days or two weeks and seeds should be covered only half an inch when planted.

GREENS.

The stand-by of every typical southern home is greens. This word covers a multitude of evils, but includes turnips, mustard, rape, Swiss chard, kale, spinach, and several others not so widely used. After we had been enjoying them for several years we found that they were healthy and life-giving, containing vitamins and other strange things. After this information was garnered they tasted no differently but were served more often.

The standard of these greens to be measured by is the turnip. If there is one vegetable that is planted in every southern garden, it is the turnip. It is such a well-known vegetable that it seems a waste of time to enumerate its good qualities other than to say that it is invaluable. Turnips will do best in new ground, or ground that has not been in cultivation for two or three years. If stable manure is to be used it should be well rooted and worked into the soil about a month before the time to plant the seeds. Apply a liberal application of some commercial fertilizer in the row at the time of planting and repeat this about three weeks later. If the turnips grow fast the greens are much more tender and palatable. Use about one ounce of seed to 100 feet of row.

The standard variety of turnips used in North Georgia almost exclusive of the others for spring planting, is the Purple Top Globe. This is a white, globe-shaped variety with a purple or red top. It makes a fairly large amount of greens and very fine turnips. For a good, early variety, try Flat Dutch; for a yellow variety, use Amber Globe; for stock or chickens, use Cowhorn.

There is a new variety that is meeting with a great deal of success in a number of sections in the south, a recent introduction from Japan. This variety makes an unusual amount of very fine roots. The root is pure white about the size of Purple Top Globe and its greatest plea for distinction is the fact that it is louse resistant. There have been cases of lice destroying Purple Top Globe, and not touching this Japanese turnip, where they were planted in the same field.

SPINACH.

Probably the best variety of Spinach for early planting is Aragon, although Bloomsdale is widely planted. Spinach may be planted any time during the year if the ground is not frozen. It germinates in the coldest weather and always may be depended upon to give a good, heavy crop.

Mustard, rape, kale, and Swiss chard may be planted for variation and will give a delightful change for the table. Plant an ounce of seed for 50 feet of row. Fertilize thoroughly on planting and afterwards.

EVERGREEN LAWNS.

At the time this is being written there has been no satisfactory weather for planting lawn grass seed so far in February. For best results, that is a good root system, lawn grass should be planted at the very earliest opportunity.

At the first break in the weather is a fine time for repairing old, worn out, spotted lawns. One good method to do this is to rake evergreen lawn grass seeds into the worn spots, covering them slightly with a top dressing of sheep manure and then soaking thoroughly. It is a good plan to keep a bag of sheep manure and a small sack of grass seed always on hand in order that the bare spots may be repaired as they appear.

By the way, in times of drouth, when watering becomes necessary, be sure to soak the ground thoroughly, leaving the sprinkler turned on for two hours or more in each position. A light sprinkling attracts the fine roots to the surface and is therefore detrimental.

The chief reason for the planting of good mixtures rather than separate varieties, is that planting soil and season conditions are variable. Some grasses are better suited to particular conditions than others. With a good high-grade formula mixture based on a thorough knowledge of southern conditions, there is a far better chance of getting a good stand of grass from a single planting than with any one variety.

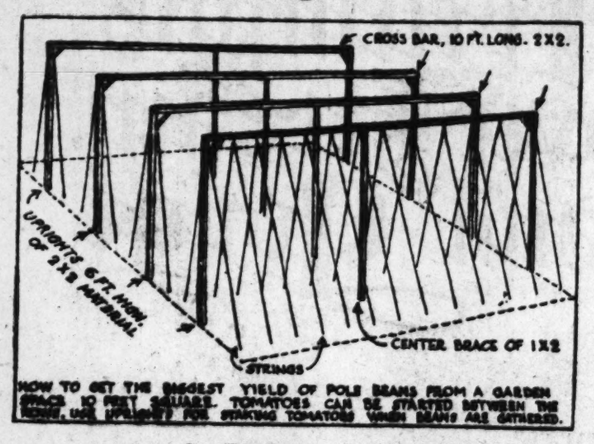

Most seed houses have a mixture of various grasses that will grow well here in the vicinity of Atlanta. In most instances you will find that your seed house will have two mixtures, one for the generality of fairly sunny lawns, and another mixture for the very shady ones.

It happens that we have here in the south, unusual weather and soil conditions, and mixtures that are entirely satisfactory in other sections of the country are practically valueless here.

Sow these grass seeds after having removed all rocks and roots, and then apply a mixture of 100 pounds of sheep manure and 25 pounds of a good high-grade commercial fertilizer, to each 1,000 square feet.

Five pounds of seed will be sufficient for the same area. If your soil is lacking in humus, one bale of granulated peat moss will correct this drying and baking tendency. Apply sheep manure, commercial fertilizer and peat moss by spading or plowing them in. Rake thoroughly, mixing the fertilizer with the soil, and working the soil down smooth, very fine and level.

The March Vegetable Garden

HOW TO GET THE BIGGEST YIELD OF POLE BEANS FROM A GARDEN SPACE. 10 FEET SQUARE. TOMATOES CAN BE STARTED BETWEEN THE ROWS. USE UPRIGHTS FOR STAKING TOMATOES WHEN BEANS ARE GATHERED.

Get The Garden Started.

WHAT TO PLANT IN MARCH.

FLOWERS: Sweet peas may be planted. Use only the Spencer and Early Flowering types. The best plan is to use the separate colors. All kinds of perennials may be transplanted at this time, including pansies, aquilegia, canterbury bells, pansies, hollyhocks, English daisies, rock cress, thrift, etc. It isn't too late to plant larkspur and bachelor button seeds.

ROSES: Roses should be planted immediately. The two-year-old outdoor grown plants are best. Green house roses that have been flowering all winter are not very satisfactory as a rule.

SHRUBBERY: Plant all kinds of evergreens, conifers, flowering shrubs, and fertilize your old shrubbery.

GRASSES: Evergreen mixtures and Kentucky Blue Grass may be planted at this time. Give your old lawn a top dressing of sheep manure and bone meal.

VEGETABLES: Continue to plant asparagus roots, horse radish roots, rhubarb roots, artichokes and Irish potatoes.

VEGETABLE SEEDS: Beets, Brussell sprouts, cabbage, collards, carrots cress, Swiss chard, kale, kohl rabi, lettuce, mustard, onion, parsley parsnip, petsai, garden peas, radish, rape, rutabaga, Aragon spinach, salsify and turnips.

COLD FRAME: Plant Cauliflower, eggplant, pepper, tomato and onion seed.

WHAT TO DO IN MARCH.

MULCHING: This is the last chance for giving the rose and perennial bed a thorough mulching with peat moss and sheep manure. This mulch will hold moisture in the beds throughout the spring and summer and is of vital importance. A mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth is best.

FERTILIZING: As plants begin to grow rapidly with the spring weather fertilize them often with a complete, well-balanced plant food. A fairly heavy application of bone meal and sheep manure should be broadcast over the lawn, as well as around the shrubbery, perennials and roses.

PRUNING: March is the best month for pruning all kinds of bush roses. Err on the heavy side of pruning rather than on the light side. Most varieties of roses can be pruned from 8 to 12 inches from the ground. They should be given a thorough spraying with Massey dust directly after this pruning.

Over the Garden Wall

BY LADYE GAYE

DIARY OF A DIRT DIGGER:

MONDAY NIGHT:

RECENTLY a garden clubber from Virginia was heard to boast, "My vegetables are all pedigreed. Why, the corn served on my table required the services of the famous Dr. Delue, of New York city, many years to perfect. It is known as Golden Giant corn, and was accomplished by the crossing of two other sweet corn favorites, the Golden Bantam and Howling Mob. It is a splendid blend." Which reminded me, that it is just as easy and but little more expensive—at seed-buying time—to purchase only the very best to be had: the spire type larkspur, early-blooming cosmos, wilt-resistant asters, semi-double hollyhock, double nasturtium—to mention a few with pedigrees.

TUESDAY:

There are as many different methods of raising seedlings as there are gardeners, it seems. Here's one—After the seed are sown, cover the ground (which, by the way, should not be too rich) with dry sphagnum moss rubbed through a fine selve. This will keep both ground and seed from drying out. The seeds will come up through it and still be mulched. Sort of like eating your cake and having it, too.

Another good way to start early seedlings is in little nursery beds out of doors. These must, of course, be placed in a position sheltered from cold winds, perhaps on the south, east or southeast side of a wall or a tight board fence. The lee side of a hedge or similar more or less open windbreak is not so good because cold air passes through. There is considerable competition with hedge roots and there is no reflection of heat as would be obtained from fence or well.

The soil in these little protected beds should not be rich, because root development, rather than top, is what is needed by plants to be transplanted. Poor, sandy soils compel the seedlings to forage for food and thus develop sturdy roots, so a light, sandy loam is best. When necessary, this sandy loam may be made artificially by mixing sand with the original soil. If sand is not available, fair substitutes are sifted coal ashes or leaf mold.

Above all, these beds must be well drained, for if wet, they will be cold, and not only will the seed then be slow to sprout, but much of it may decay. If not naturally well drained, tile or other material may be resorted to. Where the soil is inclined to be wet, still further advantage may be gained by raising the beds 2 to 4 inches above the ground level, which tends to dry and so warm the soil.

Care must be exercised to sow the seed much more thinly than is recommended for the open garden, because, in the nursery beds, conditions are more favorable, and the seedlings should have ample space in which to develop sturdy roots. Also, when sown thinly, they may be allowed to remain where they are until removed to the garden. In this way, transplanting to flower pots, flats or another bed may be avoided. After the seedlings are removed, the nursery beds may be planted with tomatoes, cantaloupes, beans, watermelons, or other heat-loving vegetable. They will grow much more rapidly there because of the heat reflected from the wall or the fence.

FRIDAY:

Over at the school administration offices this morning, found out a lot about how Miss Hattie Rainwater is making young Atlanta garden-minded. She begins with the tots in the kindergarten, where they learn about bees and butterflies, and the day garden watchmen, and the night garden watchmen, who are really the bird and toad visitors who come a-calling. By the time they've grown to be second-graders, their nature sturdy program reads like this: "Plant a garden. Use part of it for a corn patch as the Indians did. Use other part to show how much we have advanced over Indians in variety of domesticated plants. Watch the white oak and write the date when the leaf is as large as a squirrel's ear." That's the day, of course, when the Indians sowed their corn.

Knowing Your Stars

BY EVANGELINE ADAMS

The World's Most Famous Astrologer.

IS VENUS IN GEMINI IN YOUR HOROSCOPE?

THERE are a great many delightfully charming bachelors in the world and . . . most of them have Venus in Gemini in their horoscopes! Perhaps you personally know one. He'll be a delightful companion, diplomatic, suave, and wholly charming and you've probably wondered why he has escaped marriage all these years. You can rest assured that it isn't because he hasn't had plenty of opportunities. Then why hasn't he married? Well, I'll tell you: He probably has Venus in Gemini. If you know the date and year of his birth, you can refer to the accompanying table and find out whether or not Venus was in Gemini at the time he was born. The chances are about four out of five that it was.

Now I don't mean to imply that all people who have Venus in Gemini will remain unmarried. Far from it! But we'll come to that later. First, let's see why your charming bachelor who has Venus in Gemini and who obviously has such marked charm has remained single. It isn't because he isn't interested in women and it certainly isn't because women aren't interested in him, you say. Quite true, on both counts. What, then, is the answer?

In the first place, pursuit interests this particular bachelor far more than the results of conquest. Once he realizes that he has made his conquest, his interest begins to wane. His natural diplomacy and charm will enable him to extricate himself from an entanglement before he is caught. True, someone may land him some day, but I can tell you in advance just how that someone will turn the trick. She'll be, for one thing, quite charming herself and she'll be popular with other men, for this particular bachelor likes to be proud of his possessions and likes them to be appreciated by other people. This someone will carefully hide the fact that this bachelor is the only person in the world for her. She'll make him think that she is interested in other men and that other men are interested in her. And, once she has "landed" him, she'll realize that her job has only started, if she is to retain his interest. She'll continue to be charming to all people and she'll never lavish her affections upon her husband to the point where he becomes her sole interest in life. At least, she'll hide the fact, if he is.

The wife of a man who has Venus in Gemini must know her husband and understand him fully if she is to have a happy married life. Now, I don't mean that this kind of a husband is any worse than any other kind. In fact, he's likely to be vastly more charming than most other husbands. But his wife must remember to be charming, too. She must realize that it is her husband's nature to reach for the unattainable in love. If, at times, he appears to show an interest in other women, she'll be wise enough to know that his interest is only temporary and she'll not attempt to make a mountain of disaster out of what is really but a mole hill of annoyance to her. She'll realize, too, that her husband is very highly emotional but his emotions are mental rather than physical.

Gemini is a mental, diplomatic and airy sign and if you have Venus in Gemini (which can be determined by consulting the accompanying table) the chances are that you are fond of attention and desirous of approbation. You may have many acquaintances but few intimate friends. If you see too much of people they bore you, and you are not always willing to make the sacrifice and give out the love necessary to win the lasting affection of others. You enjoy largely through the imagination and constantly reach out for the unattainable. You should try to be less restless and more satisfied with what fate naturally bestows. Things beyond your reach fascinate you, and your affections are best held when you are "kept guessing." If you feel too sure of anyone, or if they pursue you, you soon grow cold and indifferent. You should try to cultivate the softer side of your nature and be more sympathetic and tender, for this will not only bring you greater happiness, but make you able to give more to others.

People with Venus in this position usually have two sides to their nature and are capable of being either cold, selfish and rather heedless of consequences at times, or charming and diplomatic. The position of the other planets as well as the sun and moon in your horoscope will have much to do with determining which side is likely to be uppermost in your nature. It shouldn't be necessary to add that you should do everything possible to cultivate your more charming side, of which you are entirely capable.

You have at your command a natural asset of no small proportions and, properly used, it should be of great value to you. The success of almost any business lies in the ability of the management to make the best uses of the assets of that business, and the success of any man lies in his ability to make full use of his personal assets. First, of course, he must know what his assets are and, in your case, one of your most valuable characteristics is your natural charm. You instinctively attract people. But it is equally important for you to know your weak spots in order that you may try to strengthen them. You should learn to mask the fact if you become bored with people after you know them for a time. You cannot expect others to be genuinely interested in you unless you appear to be interested in them. You should strive to make deep and lasting friendships instead of mere acquaintances.

Your affections and your emotions are easily aroused but they are not likely to be lasting unless you make an effort to make them so. Strive to anchor your feelings in one place and your interests, too.

If you are married you must exercise careful discretion and judgment to get the greatest happiness from life. And you must be tactful. Do not be afraid to show your affections to your marriage partner and give that partner ample opportunity to display affection for you. And remember that things beyond your reach, even though they fascinate you, would still leave you unsatisfied even if you were to attain them. You will get more pleasure from wanting and wishing than you will when you finally get your wants and wishes fulfilled. If you will remember this, you will save yourself and others considerable unhappiness by not trying to reach for things beyond you.

As I said before, your natural tact, charm and diplomacy will enable you to go far providing you make wise use of these characteristics and use them in building lasting friendships.

Next week I'll devote my article to a forecast of astrological conditions for the month of March. There will be several important aspects in operation during March which will be of interest to all of us and, in addition, there will be very important aspects which will apply to certain people. So be sure to watch for next week's article.

WHEN VENUS WAS IN GEMINI.

The following table will tell you whether or not Venus was in the sign Gemini at the time of your birth. Run your eye down the left-hand column until you come to the year of your birth. On the same line with the year will be found the dates covering the period when Venus was in Gemini during that particular year. If the date of your birth is not included in the periods covered in the table, then Venus was not in Gemini but was in one of the other of the 12 signs.

Culbertson on Contract

THE FORCING TAKEOUT
LESSON 12.

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

This is the twelfth of a series of articles in response to requests from numerous readers, designed to explain the elementary principles of contract bridge. One of these articles will appear each week. In them Mr. Culbertson will write especially for the benefit of those who have never played contract and who may even be unfamiliar with the method of playing it. The articles will cover the game from its basic element to the higher phases of contract bridge. The series in its entirety will comprise a complete course of instruction in "How to Play Contract."

THE most important response that the responding hand can make to an opening bid by his partner is the forcing takeout. A forcing takeout is defined as a jump bid in another suit below the level of game. Thus, if partner opens with a bid of one heart, a bid of two spades is a forcing takeout as it is a jump bid; that is, a bid higher than necessary to overcall and it is below the game level. On the other hand, if partner opens with a bid of one heart and the responding hand bids four spades, it is not a forcing takeout, as, while it is a jump bid in another suit, it is a contract for game and thus does not require any response from partner. Like the opening forcing bid of two in a suit, the forcing takeout requires partner to continue the bidding until a game contract is reached. If partner has opened the bidding and you respond with a forcing takeout, he must continue the bidding until you arrive at game. The only exception to this rule is if either player should decide that a penalty double of a bid by opponents would be more profitable than scoring game at your own best bid.

The forcing takeout has been described quite correctly as the backbone of the approach-forcing system of contract bidding. While less spectacular, it is a much more important bid than the opening forcing bid of two in a suit. This bid has two foundations; first the opening bid by the partner which guarantees a minimum of 2 1-2 honor-tricks, and second the forcing takeout is never made on a hand containing less than 3 honor-tricks, unless with exceptionally favorable distribution.

The forcing takeout bid does not necessarily indicate a long or exceptionally strong suit. The message it conveys to the opening bidder is this:

"Partner, upon the basis of your opening bid and the values I hold, there is a game in this hand. It may be in the suit that you bid. It may be in the suit which I offer as an alternative. It may be at no-trump or it may be in a suit which neither of us has yet shown. In any event, keep the bidding open until we have an opportunity to determine, through the exchange of bids, the best game bid (and possible slam) in the combined hands."

If partner has opened the bidding with one spade, showing 2 1-2 honor-tricks and a biddable spade suit, you would be justified in making a forcing takeout bid of three hearts on the hand below:

Spades	Q 9 8
Hearts	A K Q 4 3
Diamonds	A J 3
Clubs	4 2

This hand contains 3 1-2 honor-tricks. It offers the alternative of at least 3 game contracts; namely, spades, which have been bid by your partner, hearts and no-trump.

The correct use of the forcing takeout is not only the backbone of the approach-forcing system, but it is the sound foundation of winning contract.

TODAY'S POINTER.

Question: How many honor-tricks must you have to show a suit over your partner's one no-trump?

Answer: One and one-half.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

When Responding Hand Holds a Bust.

Question: If any partner bids two hearts, using the Culbertson two-bid, and I answer with two no-trump, showing a bust, is it compulsory for me to keep the bidding open if any partner goes to three hearts?

Answer: It is a fundamental principle of the forcing system that "once forcing always forcing." However, if you respond to your partner's opening bid of two hearts with two no-trump, and he bids three hearts, which is still short of a game contract, you must again respond. If your hand is a bust and has no taking tricks with hearts as trump or no-trump, your proper response is again the minimum response of the forcing system, three no-trump. In actual practice it has been found much better to insist on the partner keeping the bidding open, even with a bust, in response to the two-bid than it is to permit the bidding to drop, as in those cases the opening bidder receiving a minimum response must choose one of two courses, either of which may be bad. He must bid direct for game in a suit, the distribution of which may be unfavorable, or he must bid for a game in no-trump and find the hand wrecked on the rocks of distribution when there was a safe game in a suit in the combined hands.

How Engineers Swing Massive Spans Across Great Chasms

Defying Death as They Spin Steel Webs at Dizzy Heights

By Clark Wilson

ONE of the most spectacular battles in the age-old struggle between nature and engineering skill is now beginning at San Francisco, where preparations are being made to throw a bridge over seven and a half miles of water between the Golden Gate city and Oakland.

In other days it was customary for engineers to go to the site of operations with no more than a general outline of their plans. They did not know how they were going to do the job, but they had unbounded self-reliance. Some were killed, but comparatively few failed. Their ingenuity made possible the development of better bridge building, until today the position of every rivet and the stress which every member is to bear is determined in an office before a single piece of steel is ordered.

In the jungles of Africa workmen were forced to fight off man-eating lions while spinning a bridge over the Tsavo river. In our own western wilderness they coped with Indian attacks while laying railroad tracks over mountain torrents or broad streams of the lowlands. The engineer of today is not troubled by Indians or man-eating lions, but those worries are replaced by the responsibility of building bridges on a scale which would stagger the construction man of other days.

One by one the great barriers to communication are being overcome. The Mississippi has been bridged in any number of places. The great Hudson river bridge at the Palisades, spanning three-quarters of a mile of water, will be completed this year. A pathway of steel at last crosses the Colorado river in Arizona, where heretofore it had been necessary to detour 1,000 miles through California, Nevada, and Utah in order to get from rim to rim of the Grand canyon, a distance of thirteen miles as the crow flies.

Bridge building is a hazardous occupation, however, and some of the greatest of these structures have tragic histories. The bridge over the St. Lawrence at Quebec was completed only after two disasters. Eighty workmen were scrambling about the half-finished structure, 150 feet above the water. Suddenly the great steel arm, jutting 800 feet beyond its pier, began to sway. Then it snapped and carried the men to the bottom of the river.

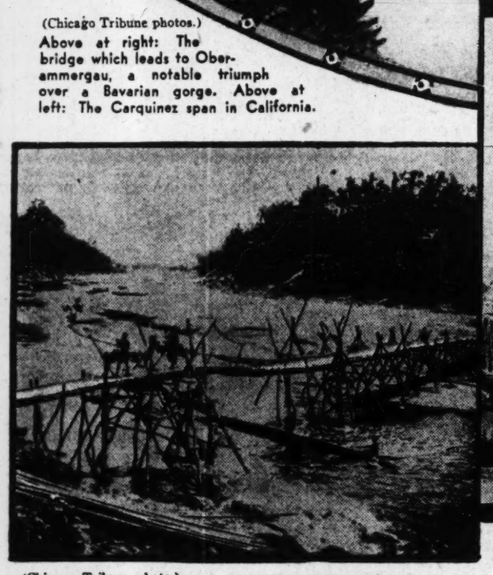

The work was resumed and the two cantilever arms were completed. These stretched out from either shore and left an open space in the middle of the river which was to be closed by an independent span. This span was constructed on shore, mounted on barges, and towed at high tide into position between the two cantilever arms which it was to join.

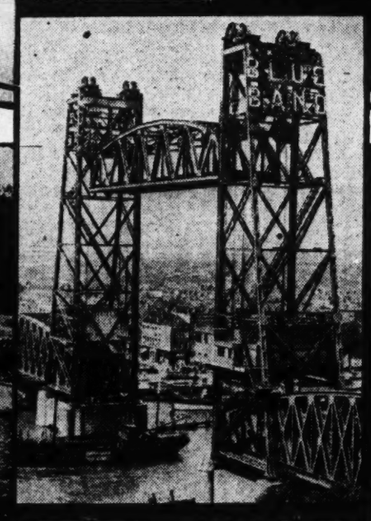

Derricks on the cantilever arms took hold of the span and pulled upward. The falling tide carried the barges out from under the span, as was planned, and the section swung clear, supported by the derricks. Twelve workmen were standing on the span preparing to make it fast. Then a corner of it cracked. The entire section fell into the river and all the men were lost. But the third attempt was successful, and today the Quebec bridge is regarded as one of the safest in the world.

The great bridge across the mouth of San Francisco bay, connecting the city of San Francisco with Oakland, in reality will be two bridges. One will reach from San Francisco to Yerba Buena island, which is now being used as a United States naval station. There will be a tunnel through the irregular surface of the island and another bridge will complete the connection with the Oakland side of the bay. The bridge will have two decks. The longest span will be 1,700 feet long. The cost of the project is estimated at $75,000,000.

The possibility of earthquakes at the Golden Gate provided the designers with new problems. These have been met by plans to sink piers deep into the rock, by anchoring the towers to the piers, and by proportioning the towers to resist lateral forces. Then nothing short of a cataclysm will cause the bridge to collapse.

Bridges in general are divided into two types—fixed and opening. The fixed bridges in turn fall into five divisions—independent span, continuous span, arch, cantilever, and suspension. The opening bridges also are split up into five classes—swing span, bascule, rolling, vertical lift, and transporter.

A bridge of the independent span type consists of several sections, each supported at either end by a pier or an abutment. Every section is independent of every other section. The limit of span length is about 800 feet. The stress can be calculated very easily.

In a bridge of the continuous span type one span stretches over several abutments. The stresses are difficult to calculate and are altered greatly if any one of the piers settles. Another thing which causes trouble is expansion due to heat.

The arched bridge is a graceful and familiar type. The surface rests upon arches made of steel or reinforced concrete. Notable examples of large spans of this type are to be found in the Hell Gate bridge, New York, and the Sydney bridge, Australia. The maximum spans of these bridges are 1,017 feet and 1,650 feet respectively.

When longer spans are desired the bridge may be of the cantilever type, which has a theoretical limit of about 3,000 feet between abutments. A bridge of this type consists of two arms reaching toward each other from opposite sides of the stream, with an independent or suspended arm connecting them. The weight of the cantilever arm is balanced by arms projecting toward shore. These arms are anchored.

When very long spans are necessary the bridge must be of the suspension type. This permits a theoretical span of 7,000 feet, though in practice this figure is never approached. Steel wire ropes of great tensile strength pass over high towers and are anchored at each end. The platform of the bridge is supported by vertical cables suspended from the main ropes.

The two most popular types of opening bridges are the swing span and the bascule. The swing span revolves about a pier set in the middle of the river, leaving a space on each side for the passage of boats. The bascule, popularly known as the "jack-knife," splits in the center and swings upward until the two sections, supported by abutments on either side of the river, are almost vertical. This leaves the entire width of the stream free.

The other three types of opening bridges are comparatively rare. The rolling type is actually rolled back from the bank of the stream. The vertical lift bridge is hoisted straight up by cables which are strung from high towers. The transporter bridge is in reality an aerial ferry. Two lofty towers on opposite banks of the stream are connected by steel spans. From these spans a cradle is suspended which carries automobiles and passengers. A mechanism is provided to swing this cradle across the stream.

There are four general methods of bridge construction: temporary staging, cantilevering out, rolling out, and floating out.

Temporary staging consists in driving piles into the bed of the river and covering these with a platform at a height corresponding to the bottom of the bridge. The bridge is then built right on this platform. After the permanent supports are in the piles are either drawn out or are cut off flush with the river bottom.

Cantilevering out consists of bolting each member at one end and letting the other end project. The free end is then made secure by another member set at an angle, which ties it back to the main structure. The work is carried on from both sides of the river until the two arms meet in the middle.

Rolling out may be practiced only with independent and contiuous span bridges. The bridge is first built on shore and then rolled out over the abutments. Before rolling out it is usually equipped with a false nose to give it an early purchase on the nearest pier. The rear end is heavily weighted to keep it from tipping forward as it is pushed out into space.

When it is decided to use the floating out method the bridge is built on shore, transferred to pontoons, and towed into position. Water is then admitted to the pontoons, causing them to settle, or else they are carried from under the bridge by the falling tide.

They Bossed the Clipper Ships

BY HENRY BESTON

Author of "The Outermost House," "The Sons of Kai," Etc.

THERE is an ancient legend found in the folk lore of many nations, of a ship so vast that her masts towered to the stars, with decks so broad that fields, villages, roads and towns found room upon them, and so long from stem to stern that mounted men carried the captain's orders to the crew.

Old Cape Cod—the Cape that was, in the memory of living men and women—might well have been this vessel, her stem aground upon the continent. Sooner or later every road led to salt water, every field and pasture and pine wood to some ultimate beach or marsh quivering in a vast emptiness of space and sun. Its young men went to sea, some as sailors before the mast, others as fishers, and those who did not go were of divided allegiance, now busy with a shore task, now with the sea's.

In those days there was no town or village without its captains. Every boy in the village knew them and the names of their ships. There was Captain Amos, grizzled, tall and built like a Yankee Poseidon in a blue overcoat—he was quiet, retiring, and immensely kind; Captain Dan'l, small, brisk, peppery and said to have been fearless and a hard case disciplinarian; Captain Perez, black haired and blue eyed, and Mrs. Captain Perez, small, compact and determined, who had sat on the ship's money chest with a pair of pistols while the crew mutinied.

The captains had retired from the sea, but the boys' fathers and mothers could remember them leaving the village to join their ships in Boston or New York. Sometimes they were to be seen on the Boston packet wharf bidding farewell to voluminous skirted and bonneted ladies, to be recognized again, in a few days, passing the High Land Light, to be heard from again in a fabulous China, or an India of river ports, sunstroke and bright shawls.

It is such men as these—the last of the race of deep-sea captains—that Mr. Frederick Wight, of Chatham, who has twice been honored in Paris at the Salon, has just painted—a group of fine studies that should gladden the heart of every lover of Cape Cod.

The captains are old men now. I recently was taken to call upon two who live at Chatham; I had heard of both, for the residual Cape which underlies the summer goings-on knows its people and takes pride in their achievements. Both captains have crossed the threshold of the nineties. The sailing ship era is history now, and men like the deep sea masters may never come again. They were great folk, and there was no land so truly theirs as Cape Cod.

In the old days on the cape, the captains were arranged in a hierarchy. Sea-faring communities have always done something of the kind and have betimes made their division a part of speech finding a nice distinction between "Cap," "Cap'n and "Captain." For the captains were many and of many kinds. There were coaster captains and deep-sea captains (the cape's own adjectives), there were pilot captains, whaler captains, fisherman captains and captains; I am not listing them in precedence. Fishermen captains belonged to an estimable republic of their own with its own gradations; whaling captains, too, had a personal standing. The hierarchy was perhaps as definite on the cape as anywhere, for an almost eighteenth century sense of position in life lingered in these beautiful and assured towns, and the community had a living appreciation of the meaning of rank and position at sea.

The coaster captains had commanded the fleet of schooners and brigs which once carried so much of the trade of the seaboard states. Many of the vessels were smart two-masters, and within the memory of men still living, one could go to the Highland or Nauset and count anywhere from 50 to 100 coasters off the cape. They carried manufactured shoes from Boston to Baltimore, the old knot-less beautiful white pine from Maine to New York; they brought New Orleans molasses to Salem; they were indeed, the freight cars of the time. It was the coming to power of the railroads which cleared them from the seas. The trade, however, did not yield easily; as late as the '70s and '80s it was still fighting on, the ghost of an enterprise. As a matter of fact, it has never died and never will.

There were many coaster captains from the cape. Their vessels, like fishermen, were often family affairs, and it is probably true that the majority of older men owned their ships. Such masters were busy folk and knew not the earned shore-leave between long voyages. The cape knew its coaster captains best when they had come home to the cape and retired Cape Codders have sometimes seen a geographical division between them and the deep-sea captains and say that the majority of coaster captains lived in the towns on the south shore, while the deep-sea skippers held to the north.

They had never commanded clippers, they had never seen the Moluccas, they had no tales to tell of Australia in its wild west phase. Theirs was another world. To them the sands and breakers and pines and hazy levels and flat, land skies the sailor comes to know so well, the dangerous immensities of shoaling Hatteras, the reflected sun and bow waves bursting warm of the Gulf of Mexico, the overlapping currents and island thoroughfares of Maine.

The stories they had to tell were of Buchanan's America, Grant's and Chester A. Arthur's; they concerned adventures and good times at village ports on Chesapeake bay (coasters went to harbors now never heard of); encounters and repartees with steamers, escapes from tight places, interesting people come upon and queer cargoes. Their enterprise vanishing from the scene, they gave the cape a sailor's sense of the size of the republic and a racy account of a vigorous and picturesque national life.

Coaster captains were usually older men than deep-sea captains when they retired from the trade. Imagination calls them again in mind, as all old Cape Codders knew them, pictures them again on quieter village streets—Captain This and Captain That—walking home with a village parcel or the newspaper and the morning's mail, walking home to a comfortable house well fortified by the local savings bank, a house giving just a glimpse of Nantucket sound across the fields.

The deep-sea captains stood above and apart. No guild of men, I think, can ever have quite their quality. There was something about them, if one may use the word, handmade, something shaped by life and a living force as opposed to something exact and anonymous made by a twist of energy. They were not story book people. They were men of the world, with the distinguished manner of the more formal world they had known, and they had the dual wisdom of those who have lived in the world of nature as well as in that of men. Known and recognised all, they were here enormously and particularly respected.

They had been young men when they had come home from sea. On through clipper and post-clipper times it was the custom to retire in the '30s. Boys were then sent to sea when only eight or nine, and by the time the deep-sea captains came ashore most of them had 25 years of sea and sailing ships. Surely it was time to have solid earth under foot after a quarter of a century of pitch and roll, list and wallow and lift and rush; good to be able to see apple trees with eyes which had watched the gray-green North Atlantic, the capricious Mediterranean and the heathenishly colored Pacific of the hot latitudes.

The captains had had to be bankers, lawyers, traders and diplomats as well as seamen. Captain Elijah Colb, of Brewster, an eighteenth century Cape Cod skipper whose ship had been seized by the French Revolutionary authorities, went to Paris in the very height of the terror, had a talk with Robespierre, made friends with the lawgiver and was given back his vessel almost with apologies. Captain Colb's papers say that the Terrorist addressed him in easy English, an interesting detail I have never come upon in histories.

When "L'Incorruptible's" own head fell into the basket, Captain Elijah, in his amusingly personal spelling, notes that "the great man, who had so assentially befriended me, was beheaded by the Galliotine."

Retiring to the cape, they found much to do. A master who had retired really well off was often, in an intimate and non-professional way, the banker of village enterprises. Town folk who wanted to fit out a new fisherman, build a scallopers' wharf by some creek or make and plant a new cranberry bog went to him for advice and money. He helped the man before the mast and his family with their savings and tiny investments; he gave letters to firms in Boston and other ports. Some deep-sea masters took town offices and helped keep things in order, others busied themselves at a trade. Captain Elijah in his time built a shop in his beautiful Georgian house and tried business. The shop is part of the dining room now, and the captain's Georgian shop cupboard still stands against the wall.

There were a few who received summer boarders for a short, for a very short, season. Captain Josiah, I remember to have heard, and Mrs. Josiah took their meals by themselves, but Mrs. Josiah sat at the head of her guests' table presiding over it in dignified ceremony. "I hope you will find your tea agreeable, lady," she would say to her guest across the board, a young married woman of one of the great New York families.

If there were none to match our captains, there were surely none to match their ladies. Their tea tables were set with medallion Canton, and they presided over them with a Victorian decorum touched with the cape's lingering eighteenth century. Many had been at sea with their husbands, taken part in stirring adventures and been in extraordinary places.

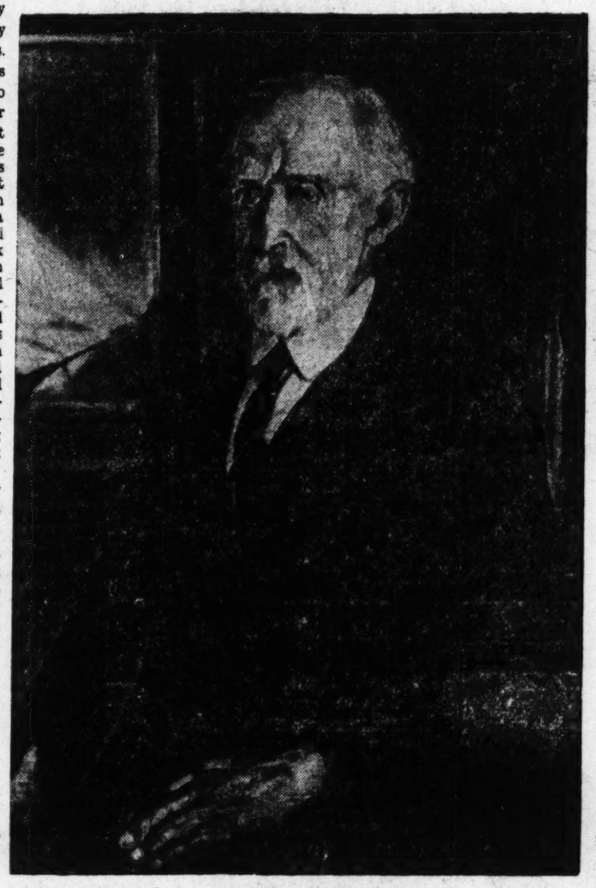

Cape Codders can tell a story more vividly and briskly than any other group of Americans, and Mrs. Captain was often the very princess of story tellers. She, it was who had done the navigating after her husband's injury in a storm; she it was who had nursed back to life the only man found alive in a ship's boat discovered adrift on a quiet sea; she is was who had seen an old-fashioned blunderbuss fired at a waterspout in the China sea, and remembered the farmyard hawk that had dropped from a mid-ocean sky to a perch on the foreskysail yard. She knew ships and their rigging as well as any one alive, and her language could be as marine as her husband's. In the buttery of an old kitchen, where the speckled shadow of an elm branch twinkled across the bread board. Mrs. Captain Zenas is at work, and a remembered voice says, "I'm caulking this crack to stop those sodgering ants!"

What kind of vessel, the reader may ask, had these deep-sea captains commanded? A few of the older men had commanded clippers. The great ships had not vanished at a signal from the blue, for there were clippers at sea in the latter '60s and even on into the '70s. An Eastham man, Captain Hatch, of the Northern Light, had made one of the great clipper runs. Others of the captains had served in clippers in their youth. However, the ships with which most of them were identified were the so-called "medium clippers" and "post-clippers"—the terms are rather general.

The building of authentic clippers had come to an end in the '50s; the great ships were too beautifully and expensively made and too costly to operate to be good investments. The cape had seen great ships built at Dennis, in the Shiverick yard. Shipbuilders then began to turn out big ships to carry freight, "not clippers exactly, but mighty sharp ships, some of 'em." These new types, designed and built for the most part in New England yards, were often called "down-easters." The clippers' beautiful exaggerations were gone, but the new soberer vessels had virtues of their own—sound lines, impressive size and dignity. Certain old captains, indeed, used to maintain that a "down-easter" was the better ship. It was usually a model of such a vessel one saw when calling.

In the captains' houses, in the square rooms with the French wallpapers and the horsehair sofas which had often been to sea, were treasures of half the world. There were chessmen from China in an intricately carved box, fans with Chinese paintings on them which belonged to Mrs. Captain, full dinner services of the best crown derby from England, Malay curios and numberless odd walking sticks. The attic was a boy's paradise, for there were sea chests there in an orderly line along the eaves, and queer dusty curios.

All day long a rainy northeaster has been howling in from the sea; it is now late afternoon and the rain, changed to sleet, drives with fury against complaining glass. The barns are closed, the hens shut in their weathered sheds, the storm doors of the houses drawn tight, and the moors, the pitch pines and the dark and hugely empty asparagus fields whisper from the ground with sleet under the enormous billowing of the sky. Tomorrow or the day after, if the wind has fallen and the sky perhaps opened, the long, thunderous roaring of the great beach will be heard far inland, and the air will be moist with breaker spray become delicate mist, and odorous with the smell of the broken water and the sands.

Captain Isaac William White, of the Luzon

From Painting by Frederick Wight

It was on such an afternoon that I was taken to call on Captain Samuel Harding, and I got out of a closed car at the porch of a modern house. The living room was trim and up to date and Captain Harding was seated on a sofa between two tinted pictures.

There came over me as he talked a musing sense of wonder mingled with a feeling of gratitude for an extraordinary privilege. Here in this room with its electric lights and drugget rug, with a roadster standing outside in a downpour, was a fellow human being who had gone to sea in the clipper decade and seen the Alabama in midocean. Born in 1841, the captain is now more than 90. Writing here, I shall not pretend to echo the captain exactly word for word, but only to give the gist of the tale:

"I went to sea in 1853, and when we were on the west coast of Africa, I saw the frigate Constitution lying off the coast in wait for slavers. I had another look at her with the spyglass; the captain told me to remember I had seen her."

Then came the Civil War and a certain Saturday morning in 1861.

"Our vessel was the last northern ship to clear from Charleston before Sumter was fired on. I was an officer then. It was a pleasant morning. Our agent in Charleston came to the wharf and called across to us, 'You can't come ashore, captain. You can clear, but you can't come ashore to cast off; you will have to cut your mooring lines.' So we cut the hawsers and ran down the harbor to sea. The next day they fired on the fort."

The memorable pictures linger, but there is another, I think, more memorable still. Night and midocean surround it, far off the Civil War is rolling on. From the deck of a Yankee sailing ship rushing across the dark, the master sees a second vessel, chanced upon in the night. It is the Alabama, with her British frigate hull and clipper line:

"She came for us, but when she turned I had carried the running lights from the foremast aft to the mizzen, and the Alabama, thinking to strike us just aft of the foremast, rushed past our rudder, we saw her spars a handsbreath away, going by in the dark." Night swallows both ships—any one who has been to sea well knows how!—and time has swallowed the Alabama, the old ships, and all their world, but not, praise Heaven, the young captain of that encounter.

Some years ago, when I was living on Cape Cod beach, my friend, Mrs. Thomas Kelley, of the Overlook at Eastham, used to tell me that I must some day stop at Chatham and call on her kinsman, Captain Isaac William White. He was an old sea captain, who was then getting on toward 90, a real Cape Horner, who had taken big ships to South America and the China seas. He had built a ship model, and rigged her with extraordinary care, sending to China for tiny, hand-carved ivory deadeyes. He had commanded the famous postclippers Luzon, Independence and Samuel G. Reed, and had once saved his ship from pirates by some good sailoring and quick thinking.

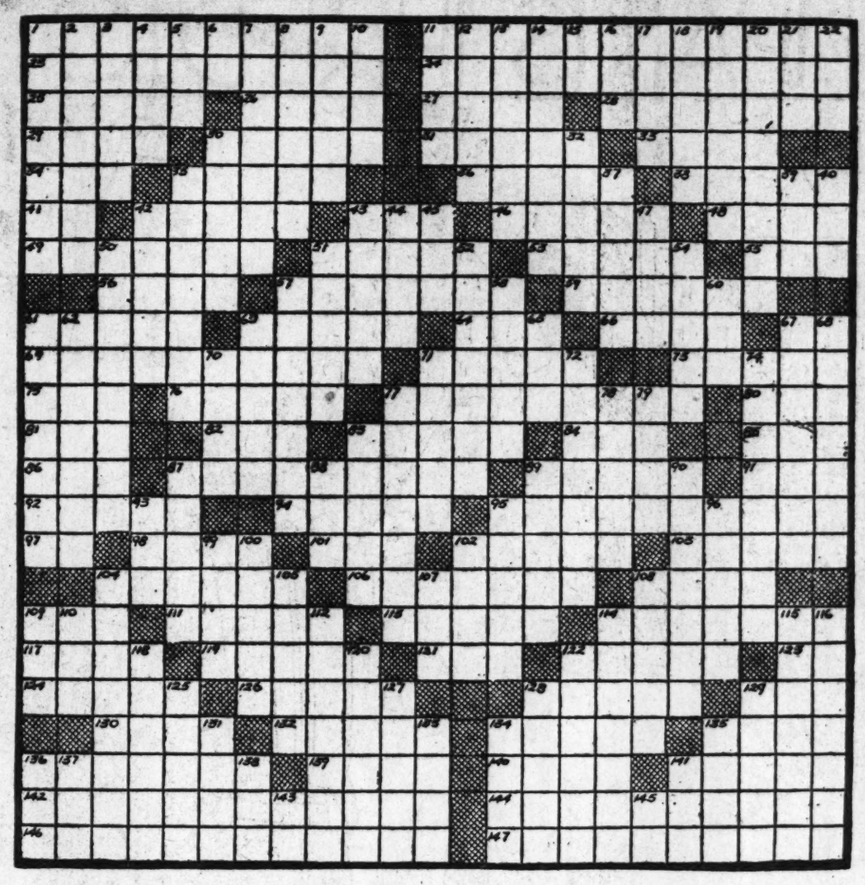

I asked him about it as we sat in his parlor talking; it was dusk, and when the lamp was brought in I could see the Luzon by the wall. Captain White's eyes are blue and not without ironic roguery. I hear he made his crew step lively. We talked of the world of the postclippers, of the big, freighter sailing ships, of Yankee spars in South American harbors and of the great rollers south of Cape Horn, which sailors believe go all the way around the world.

"Weren't you attacked once by pirates, captain?" said I.

"Yes, in the east. Malays or Chinese in a junk, stealing out at us, running before the wind. I swung around and blanketed them, cut off the wind. They couldn't do anything, just shouted and yelled. Had to keep a weather eye out those days . . . quite a lot of piracy. Carried coolies once, they got kind of wild, had to quiet them down. Dangerous coasts? There are no waters anywhere more dangerous than these waters here."

The sea and the old way of life at sea were strange realities in that lamp-lit room. The Atlantic of the maps there was the Atlantic no longer, but the "Western Ocean," that lovely phrase of the older mariners. Thanking Captain White and Mrs. White for their courtesy, I walked across the yard into the Chatham by-street. A turn or two more, and I saw Chatham light, glowing moth-white at the end of the road. The fisherman, the tugboat skippers and the stray freighters would see it, coming up from Monomoy. Sail had gone and steam had inherited the sea. It was good to have known the old captains.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

"SENDIN' that girl to college reminds me o' what old Preacher Ezra said about savin' the wicked by means o' dunkin'. 'When you baptize a sinner,' says he, 'you ain't got nothin' but a wet sinner.'

"If a girl, is a hollow-head when she's sent to college, she won't be nothin' four years later but a college-trained hollow-head.

"Colleges ain't found no substitute for brains. There ain't a school in this country that can take a dumb Dora an' give her a spoonful o' sound sense. You might as well expect professors to learn her a new set o' teeth or new hair.

"This land is full o' fond an' foolish parents that wastes their substance tryin' to make figs grow on thistles. They think you can get four gallons in a quart cup if you keep on sendin' it to school long enough.

"It looks cruel to me. If a youngun can't soak up no more'n the fifth grade, what's the sense in makin' him suffer an' cheat an' pretend for 10 more years?

"The schools is full o' boys an' girls that got their fill an' splashed over long ago, an' they ought to be dropped. You can't teach a chicken to swim, no matter how long you keep tryin'.

"If a little spindle-shanked freshman can't lift more 'n 10 pounds, you never see 'em spendin' four years tryin' to make him a football player."

PARIS PREDICTIONS FOR SPRING

PATOU'S SPRING FASHIONS

The Brown Woolen Coat Above Fastens Up to the Chin on One Side Where the Collar Turns Over and Reveals the Printed Lining. The "Pocket" on One Hip Is Not a Pocket at All But Just a Piece of Tucked Drapery. A Yellow and Brown Print Dress Goes with the Coat. Its Skirt Fullness Is Pleated Down Flat and the Neck Is Tied Up While the Waist Ties In. Below: A Hat of Fine Red Straw Has a Slightly Peaked Crown and Two Feathers in the Same Red Straw. The Navy Felt Uses Bright Green Leather Piping and Has a Leather Bow in Back.

COAT AND DRESS ENSEMBLES

This Bright Red Wool Coat Is Worn with the Printed Dress of Romain Revealing a Beige Design on a Red Ground. The Coat Features an Interesting Back with Oblong Plastrons and Back Pleat and It Is Lined with the Same Print as the Frock. A Draped Neck Relieves the Straight Plainness of the Dress.

PATOU'S CAMEL HAIR COAT

An Example of the Classic Severity in Spring Coats. The Straight Skirt Eliminates All Fullness and the Revers Are Very Wide. The Black Wool Crepe Coat Next to This Has Both Revers and a Cape, Combining the Mannish and Feminine Elements. The Green Dress, at the Extreme Right, That Goes with the Black Coat in the Center, Follows the Same Smooth Straight Silhouette as the Latter.

PARIS.

THE PASSWORD of couturiers and fashionable women is "simplicity." After several seasons of "Period" influence oveburdened with a superabundance of Second Empire detail, there is dawning the realization that classic simplicity is after all the smartest. The house of Patou has beautifully adapted its new models to the needs of the times. We've chosen here such models as prove our point.

One of the headliners on this page is the coat and dress ensemble. In fact, in several cases, Patou suggests the assembling of several dresses with one coat—absolute evidence of the economic pressure! At the left of the page is a coat of soft brown wool, buttoned up in the one-sided manner so common to all coats for early Spring. The draped pocket on the hip is not a pocket at all but only a strip of cloth embellished with tucks. The snug collar turns over under the chin and reveals the lining which is of the same printed crepe as the dress, which we picture next. Fashions always break out into print about this time of the year. This yellow and brown crepe de chine is plain and simple with the fullness of the skirt pleated down flat, the neck tied up and the waist tied in.

Next, is a bright red ensemble. The feature of the wool coat is its back with oblong plastrons and pleat. The belt is a narrow sash. It also is lined with the same print as the dress which is of red romain printed in beige. The draped neck of the blouse relieves the straight plainness of the model.

Spring coats are of two varieties: the soft feminine type like those just described, and the severe masculine designs with wide revers, neat, straight silhouettes and patch pockets like the beige camel's hair coat sketched above. This old classic is extremely popular and wearable and very much in keeping with the times. Patou has created a straight one-piece beige marocain dress to wear under it.

And of course the black coat can't be neglected. This wool crepe model is a combination of the severe and the soft feminine lines with its revers and cape. Note, please, the button-hole flower which is important. The dress designed to go with this coat follows the same sheath-like silhouette. The collarless blouse buttons in diagonals across the front.

The hats sketched at the left, as well as those on the figures, we chose carefully as representative of the Spring vogue. The red one is of fine straw braid with a slight peak in the crown. The upstanding feathers are of the same straw braid. The other hat of navy felt turns up slightly on one side, down on the other, and is trimmed with green leather piping and bow.

RATHER EXTREME, but very effective is this black and white spring suit. The black gloves, exposed elbows and heavy fur cuffs on the short sleeves are the unusual points of the garment.

Private Life of a Plant

I'LL NEVER FORGET HOW WARM AND SUNNY THOSE FIRST DAYS WERE - I WAS TOO YOUNG AND INEXPERIENCED TO REALIZE THAT IT WAS EARLY FALL AND NOT SPRING- IN SHORT, I WAS ONE OF THOSE WHO WAS BORN TOO LATE-

AND, AS IF FATE HAD NOT DONE ENOUGH MISCHIEF, I WAS TRAMPLED BY A CARELESS GOOF, MASHED DOWN INTO THE EARTH - I WAS SURE I COULD NEVER RISE AGAIN-

BUT THE STRENGTH OF YOUTH IS MIGHTY- IN A DAY OR TWO I WAS UPRIGHT ONCE MORE - THEN CAME THE FIRST COLD SNAP- SLEET AND HAIL -

I WAS WILTED AND ALMOST BEYOND HOPE, WHEN THE SUN SHONE AGAIN - I HARDLY CARED, WHEN I WAS UPROOTED - I DIDN'T EVEN NOTICE THAT THE HANDS THAT TOUCHED ME WERE GENTLE-

INTO A LITTLE FLOWER-POT I WAS SET AND PLACED ON A SUNNY WINDOW-SILL - STRONG AS I HAD BEEN AT FIRST, MY MANY SETBACKS HAD WEAKENED ME - FOR DAYS I DROOPED-

THIS INDOOR AIR CHOKED ME, TOO, AT FIRST - THEN ONE DAY I SEEMED TO GET MY SECOND WIND - I BEGAN TO GROW, AND GROW AND GROW!

NOW I HAVE A FINE, LARGE JAR - MY HEALTH IS PERFECT - I AM IN FULL BLOOM IN FEBRUARY - WELL, PEOPLE OR PLANTS, IT'S NOT THE HARDSHIPS THAT COUNT - IT'S THE ONES YOU SURVIVE -

HERE IS THE DOCTOR WHO MADE 'DADDY' WARBUCKS SEE AGAIN-

Mr. and Mrs.-

I HAVE TO LAUGH AT YOUR IDEA OF A LOT OF CLOTHES

GO TO IT. I LIKE THE SOUND OF GOOD HEARTY LAUGHTER

TRADE MARK. REG. U.S. PAT OFF.

JOE, HAVEN'T YOU SOME CLOTHES YOU DON'T NEED? IT'S A SHAME TO HANG ONTO THEM WHEN THEY MIGHT BE DOING SOME GOOD

SHOULDN'T WONDER IF I HAD

WELL, TOMORROW I'LL GO OVER THEM AND SEE WHAT I CAN PICK OUT

NO, NO. I'LL DO IT NOW

IT'LL BE A SWELL CHANCE TO SEE WHAT'S IN THAT CLOSET

I GAVE UP LONG AGO TRYING TO KEEP IT IN ORDER FOR YOU

WHY NOT GO AT IT SYSTEMATICALLY INSTEAD OF LIKE A PILE DRIVER?

WHO'S DOING THIS?

WHY ARE THERE ALWAYS A DOZEN MORE VESTS IN A CLOSET THAN THERE ARE COATS AND PANTS?

POSSIBLY BECAUSE YOU DON'T WEAR THEM OUT SO QUICK

IF WE WERE ONLY SENDING CLOTHES TO THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS EACH OF THESE VESTS WOULD MAKE A SWELL LOUNGE SUIT

LOOK, VI! HERE'S THE OTHER TAN SHOE I WAS HUNTING FOR ALL LAST SUMMER. IT WAS INSIDE THIS OLD SILK HAT

YOU CERTAINLY ARE MAKING PROGRESS

LET ME SEE WHAT'S IN HERE---- IF YOU ONLY WOULDN'T HANG ABOUT NINE THINGS ON EACH HOOK!

HUH! GO LOOK AT YOUR OWN CLOTHES CLOSET

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH GIVING AWAY THIS OLD SACK SUIT?

OLD! WHY, IT'S BETTER THAN THE ONE I'M WEARING

NOW ABOUT THIS NICE SMOKING JACKET? I DON'T BELIEVE I NEED IT

NICE! WOULD YOU INSULT ANYBODY BY OFFERING THEM THAT?

FEB-28-32

TELL YOU WHAT. YOU PICK OUT WHAT TO GIVE AWAY OF MINE, AND I'LL GO IN YOUR CLOTHES - CLOSET AND---

COME AHEAD. THEN MAYBE YOU'LL REALIZE HOW FEW CLOTHES I REALLY HAVE--- COMPARED WITH OTHER WOMEN I KNOW

LOOK AT THAT CLOSET! FULL!

WELL, LOOK AT IT! PRACTICALLY EMPTY!

Tarzan

FOR LOVE OF AN UNKNOWN WOMAN

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

© 1932, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

"I'M SAILING TODAY, TOM," SAID MICHAEL BARRY TO HIS NEPHEW, "AND REMEMBER NO BOAT HITS THIS PORT FOR ANOTHER SIX MONTHS. BUT IF YOU MUST HAVE ADVENTURE, GO TO IT. ONLY DON'T BRING ANY HEATHEN GODDESS HOME AS YOUR WIFE. THINK WHAT MOTHER BARRY WOULD SAY."

IN SPITE OF WARNINGS, TOM BARRY SET OFF ALONE, BEARING THE AMULET THAT TARZAN HAD GIVEN HIM IN PROOF THAT HE WAS A HERO WORTHY OF THE LOVE OF HULVIA, HIGH PRIESTESS OF AL-ALBA

BUT TARZAN HAD NO MIND TO LET THE YOUNG ADVENTURER BRAVE THE PERILS OF THE JUNGLE ALONE. AS TOM BARRY, HOLDING TO A COMPASS COURSE, PENETRATED THE UNKNOWN WILDERNESS, TARZAN FOLLOWED THROUGH THE BRANCHES OF THE TREES ABOVE.

AT NIGHT, AFTER TOM HAD PITCHED HIS LONE CAMP, GREEN EYES GLEAMED THROUGH THE JUNGLE DARKNESS.

AT LAST SLEEP CAME TO TOM, AND AS HE SLEPT, THE MOON ROSE. IN THE MOONLIGHT, SHEETA, THE PANTHER, ADVANCED CLOSE TO HIM, STRETCHING OUT A TENTATIVE PAW.

BUT AS SHEETA PREPARED TO SPRING, TARZAN, WATCHING ABOVE, DREW HIS BOW.

THE NEXT MORNING, TOM BARRY AWOKE TO FIND TO HIS HORROR A PANTHER BY HIS SIDE. WHEN HE SAW THE ARROWS IN THE BEAST'S BODY, HE THOUGHT HIS LIFE HAD BEEN SAVED BY A MIRACLE, AND HE UTTERED A PRAYER OF THANKS.

THREE DAYS AND THREE NIGHTS HE JOURNEYED BEFORE HE CAME TO THE OUTPOSTS OF THE AL-ALBA, AND THERE A BLACK WARRIOR WAITED.

AS THE BLACK THREW THE NOOSE, YOUNG BARRY DUCKED AND CAUGHT THE FIBRE ROPE IN HIS FREE HAND.

HE SWUNG THE BLACK DOWN FROM THE TREES.

"I AM THE BEARER OF THE AMULET OF THE HIGH PRIES, ESS HULVIA," SAID BARRY, "CONDUCT ME TO HER." OF THIS THE BLACK UNDERSTOOD NO WORD BUT HE BOWED LOW BEFORE THE AMULET OF THE HIGH PRIESTESS.

TARZAN WATCHED FROM THE TREES, AS TOM WAS LED TO THE DOOR OF THE TEMPLE, THERE TO FACE THE TEST OF LOVE OR DEATH.

NEXT WEEK: THE AMULET OF LOVE 2-28
